SUMMARY.

The report of the Dominions Commission which has been issued contains important recommendations.

The most urgent problem in Australasia, it says, concerns the distribution of population and improved oversea communication.

Severe storms have visited California for the second time in the present year.

Several persons, including a millionaire and his wife, were drowned during a mountain cloud burst.

There was a large attendance at the memorial service to the late Lord Strathcona in Westminster Abbey.

After the ceremony in the Abbey, the funeral proceeded across London to Highgate Cemetery, where the interment took place.

It is estimated that 31,000 men are idle in the building trades in London. There are 12,000 coal-porters and carmen idle.

The coal-porters are granting permits for the hospitals to be supplied, but the Salvation Army is refused a permit.

There are, however, signs of an early collapse of the coal porters' strike. Many of the strikers are resuming.

American astronomers claim to have discovered that Mars has 12 minutes less daylight than previously calculated.

The Marylebone cricket team defeated Orange Free State at Bloemfontein, by an innings and 274 runs.

The revolt is growing throughout Hayti, and all the northern towns are arming against the Government.

The Public Prosecutor in Zabern declined to proceed with military summonses against 12 civilians.

An oxygen cylinder burst on the Mauretania while the vessel was in dock in London. Three engineers were killed.

A lieutenant, while flying in a military aerodrome in Spain, fell from a height of 1000 feet and was killed.

A court-martial has been opened at Johannesburg for the prosecution of four strikers.

The Calcutta Commissioner of Police asserts that a criminal conspiracy exists among the better classes in India.

The police are making determined efforts to crush terrorists in Eastern Bengal.

The London "Daily Telegraph" and other newspapers contain eulogistic references to Lord Denman's services to Australia.

Mr. Oscar Asche is nominating two dogs for the Waterloo Cup.

Lower quotations of Australian and Canadian flour are driving out the United States product from the Chinese markets.

Lord Denman will remain in Australia until the end of June.

It is improbable that any announcement on the subject of a successor will be made for some time.

The Lord Mayor's report on the conditions obtaining in the City Council's service was presented to the council meeting last night.

It indicated many directions in which savings might be effected and increased efficiency secured.

The Interstate Commission continued its inquiry yesterday into the tariff as affecting the leather industry.

It was stated that the leather exported from Australia was sold abroad at a lower price than local buyers paid.

The Minister for Defence attended the naval dockyards employees' picnic at Clifton Gardens yesterday.

He indicated that not only additional warships, but merchant ships, would be built at the Cockatoo Island.

The State High School for Girls in Lane Cove-road was opened by the Minister for Education yesterday.

In the Sheffield shield match Victoria requires 74 to avert a one-innings defeat, with two wickets in hand.

It is probable that the corps of patrolmen will be abolished, and men or boys substituted to keep the city clean.

Colonel Miller advocates a Federal Department of Public Works, with a Director-General.

The Federal Commission inquiring into the powellised wood process arrived from Melbourne yesterday, and took evidence.

A conference of the meat industry favoured allowing private slaughter yards under efficient control.

A reception was held at the German Consulate yesterday on the occasion of the Emperor's birthday.

The steamer Woy Woy grounded at Cronulla on Monday night, but floated off after her water ballast had been pumped out.

The visiting Belgian cadets were inspected by the Governor yesterday.

Two nominations were made for Lang Ward in the City Council yesterday—Sir Allen Taylor and Mr. J. S. Branton.

A building near Brisbane, occupied by the Salvation Army as a rescue home, was burnt to the ground.

One of the inmates was burnt to death, and two others died from injuries received in jumping from a balcony.

Four buildings were destroyed by fire at Tenterfield early yesterday morning.

The new fire engine could not be got to work until it was too late to save the premises.

Madame Dolores says that young Australian singers are doing well on the Continent.

The Machattie Cup has again been won by Arthur Cutler, of the Bathurst Civilian Rifle Club.

After being shut down for several months, the freezing works at Dubbo were opened with the new year.

After a fortnight's operations, however, work is again temporarily suspended, owing to a dispute over the rates to be paid.

Harry Hawker, the Australian airman, gave an exhibition of flying at Elsternwick yesterday.

The P.L.L. conference carried a motion that steps be immediately taken to abolish the Upper House.

A resolution was moved that the election of Ministers by the caucus to-day should be by open voting. This was negatived.

The Speaker, Mr. H. D. Meagher, is among the nominations for the position of president of the P.L.L.

At the annual business meeting of the Y.M.C.A., it was reported that the membership was increasing.

The house committee of the Sydney Hospital yesterday considered the action of the nurses with regard to the bundy clock.

The meeting was adjourned until Thursday to allow a nurses' representative to go into the matter with the committee.

The annual conference of the A.W.U. was opened yesterday. The report referred to the trouble over the handling of wheat.

The printers' strike in Launceston came to an end yesterday.

The linotype men are to resume at the original rate, and will receive an advance in six months.

Sir Day Bosanquet said at a race luncheon that racing, when properly carried out, was a sport productive of beneficial results.

Oppressive weather conditions prevailed yesterday, and a light thunderstorm, with sharp showers, occurred.

Five houses were unroofed at Waterloo, and some damage was done at Randwick.

The Newcastle miners intend to apply for an increase in the hewing rate of coal.

Mr. William Williamson has been elected president of the Master Builders' Association.

At yesterday's wool sales the market ruled firm at an advance of from 2½ to 5 per cent.

A good volume of business in investment stocks was transacted on 'Change yesterday at firmer prices.

The mining market was quiet, values being steady. Barrier silver stocks were firm, but tin shares were dull.

In the import markets prices of Australian wire-netting were advanced, on account of the higher cost of production.

A fair country business was done in bran bags, and the market was firm.

There was an all-round advance in the price of eggs in Sussex-street yesterday.

Forecast.—Fine and cooler generally; more thunderstorms in the north-eastern districts; usually southerly winds.

ASHER ROHL.—large compact truss, mauve.
BITTLEGH.—White ground, suffused pink.
BRILLIANT.—A rich magenta lake, dwarf.
CAMERON.—Large, pure white, faint carmine eye.
FANTASIE.—Salmon pink, with red centre.
HUISH.—Enormous ivory white trusses of flowers.
LEDRU ROLLIN.—Magenta and purple, shading to white.
PITNEY.—Beautiful dark rose, with bright carmine eye.
PANDORE.—Very large carmine lake, with white star.
THELMA.—Beautiful dark blue, passing to white centre.
SESOTIS.—Rosy pink, with scarlet eye.

FANCY-STRIPED BATH ROBES FOR SURF OR TRAVELLING.

For wear at the beaches, on shipboard, or whilst staying over at hotels or holiday resorts, a bath robe is practically essential.

We produce these garments in a number of neatly striped designs.

Those which we feature for the summer season are light in weight, and may be folded into very small compass for the travelling bag.

The sea-voyager, particularly, should provide himself with one of these robes.

The baths are rarely available just when required, and it is in the interval of waiting that the robe proves so useful. We quote—

TURKISH-TOWELLING ROBES,

in Plain or Fancy Striped Designs,

PALMER CORD TYRES TRUE TO SIZE!

THERE IS NO VARIATION IN CIRCUMFERENCE.

PALMER CORD TYRES.

The trustful motorist, buying, say, an 880 mm. tyre, takes it for granted that it IS 880. But recent disclosures in the "Autocar" show that such reliance should not be placed in all makes of tyres—one set of covers of a certain make, on being tested, proved to be 5½ inches under size.

Palmer Cord Tyres are standardised—they NEVER vary. Each tyre is true to its marked size. Palmer Cords are, size for size, larger than many so-called over-size tyres.

CENSORSHIP!

You have a code by which you censor the expenditure of your business. Do you make it as effective as you should?

Do you keep close watch on the little things—small in themselves, but looming large in the accounts when bulked? Do you?

We believe it is possible to show a good many firms the way to save money on their outlay for accessories and sundries. If you give our expert a chance to talk it over with you it is likely we may be able to help you in the same way. Will you give us the chance?

Here are a few lines we KNOW have made a big difference to some people. It's worth while seeing what effect they would have with you.

GRIP LEATHER BELTING.—Tough, flexible, and long-wearing. It's a belting that grips the pulley well, runs with less tension than ordinary, and is guaranteed free from defective workmanship.

GRIP WOOD SPLIT PULLEYS.—They start the economy by costing 30 per cent. less than metal pulleys. Then they are easily erected and taken down, and actually superior in operation to the metal pulley on account of the better grip surface—transmitting more power and economising working.

COTTON WASTES.—Just ordering "cotton waste" is not the best way to buy such needs. We carry nine grades of Waste, and each one is most suitable and economical for some particular purpose. Send us an order, stating what you want it for, and we'll send the best waste.

Also write us for any other Sundries you need.

T. M. GOODALL and CO., LTD., Universal Machinery Merchants, 303-5 Kent-street, Sydney.

A SMALL, RELIABLE OIL ENGINE—£18/10/.

The "Jumbo" is the Engine we used for pumping at the last Sydney Show.

During a three-hours' test on the Showground, working one of our 1½in Centrifugal Pumps, it raised 2774 gallons of water per hour to a height of 25ft, with a consumption of two pints of benzine per hour.

This handy little engine bears our stamp of approval after numerous tests. Write us for complete particulars.

CYCLING NOTES.

According to Mr. Honey, the honorary secretary of the Lithgow League Bicycle Club, the sport across the mountains is in a flourishing condition. The club was successful in collecting over £25 for the cash prizes for the hospital sports meeting, to be held on the local track on Saturday, February 14, while the prizes for the week-end club events are also well worth striving for. C. Cox, a new rider, has recently come to the front, and a week ago won an exciting sweepstake road race from a representative field of 13. The L.N.S.W.W. has issued a racing licence to P. J. Williams, a Lithgow clubman.

The newly-formed Granville League Club has decided to construct a new dirt track on the local oval. The existing track, which is situated some distance from the town, has lately fallen into a bad state of disrepair, and in the circumstances it apparently does not warrant renovation. The club will shortly arrange an open carnival, the events to include a one-hour's race for teams of two riders.

The Barrier District centre of the League of New South Wales Wheelmen, which controls the sport throughout that district of the State, which lies 160 miles east from the South Australian border, will hold its annual mile championship event at Broken Hill on Good Friday. The winner will receive a £5 5s gold medal, as well as the usual sash, which, in all probability, will be presented by the League of N.S.W. Wheelmen.

THE TURF.

AN OLD-TIME JOCKEY.

WILLIAM YEOMANS.

Among the visitors at Randwick on Anniversary Day was the old-time jockey, W. Yeomans, who half a century ago was among the foremost of Australian horsemen, and was contemporary with Driscoll, Morrison, Stanley, Piggott, Wilson, Chifney, M. Thompson, Hales, Joe Kean, B. Colley, T. Brown, and other famous riders. Yeomans rode Sir Hercules Robinson's colt Kingsborough, in the A.J.C. Derby, 1874, and Captain Osborne's Wheatear in that of 1881, and he also numbers among his many successes the Maribyrnong Plate on Newminster, Welcome Jack, and Segenhoe; the V.R.C. Oaks on Formosa, Meleta, and Petrea; the Australian Cup on First King; the V.R.C. St. Leger on Adelaide and First King; the A.J.C. St. Leger on Kingsborough; the A.J.C. Champagne Stakes on Hyperion; and the Diver, Martindale and The Drummer in the Wagga Cup. But the most remarkable of his feats of horsemanship was piloting Mr. H. J. Bowler's Australian to victory in the historic ten-miles race at Wagga in 1868. Mr. Bowler had two horses entered for the race—Australian and his half-sister Welcome. Both were put through an arduous course of training for such a severe test of endurance, and the pair were tried several times over the full distance. Up to seven miles Australian could beat the mare, but he used to come back to her after that, and the mare was his superior over 10 miles. However, Mr. Bowler gave her a gallop one day over about 11 miles, and that proved too much for her; consequently the hopes of the stable were centred on Australian for the wearying journey. The pace was always pretty sound, and Yeomans kept his mount in the rear for the first three or four miles; then he made a forward move, and scored from Comet and Riverina. Among the riders in the 10 miles race was Mr. J. Gormly, now a member of the Legislative Council in this State. The journey occupied 23m 35s, an average of 2m 21½s to the mile. After his retirement from active service on the turf Yeomans went into partnership with his old friend, T. Hales, in a squatting speculation in Riverina, but afterwards he took up a large area of land in the Grenfell district, where he went in for wheat-growing, and has no reason to regret his farming operations. He is still hale and hearty, and took a keen interest in the sport at Randwick, which, by the way, is a different racecourse to that he knew in the "Seventies."

NOTES.

Referring to the purchase of the thoroughbred stallion White Star for Victoria, "Vigilant" in the London "Sportsman" writes:—"Foreign demand for high-class English horses has of late years been wonderfully keen, and extravagant outlays have been made in their purchase, chiefly by buyers from the Argentine. On the other hand, the desire to acquire thoroughbred blood stock for Australia has to a considerable extent diminished, but an important deal took place when Mr. Green recently purchased White Star from Mr. J. B. Joel, and, despite his disappointing racing career, he may turn out a splendid bargain as a sire. He is an own brother to Sunstar, by Sundridge out of Doris, and resembles him not a little, though perhaps not built on quite such big lines. In height he stands fully an inch less than his brilliant relative, but this deficiency is counterbalanced by extra depth and heart-room. In colour he is dark brown, with not a speck of white about him, and, like most of his sire's progeny, he is furnished with immense bone and the best of legs and feet. In point of general appearance it would be difficult to fault him. His intelligent-looking head is supported by a good neck, set into perfect shoulders, with back and quarters as strong as a little dray horse—in short, the beau ideal of a stallion of superb quality. He was certainly one of the best of his age as a two-year-old, but on several occasions was very severely run, while in the early spring of his second season he was tried so that his classic engagements were anticipated with the utmost confidence and complacency. How he failed is matter of history, and requires no detailed comment here, and, bearing in mind the character of his brother for indomitable pluck, and his own bulldog pluck, which stood him in such good stead in his juvenile days, the only way to account for his failures in public seems to be that his hard races had not been forgotten, and had engendered in him a dislike for the game. In face of his high trials in private, it can hardly be set down to actual deterioration."

Mr. A. C. Tomson, who has ably fulfilled the duties of secretary to the Central Queensland Racing Association since its formation 21 years ago, has, owing to the state of his health, which needs a cooler climate than that of Rockhampton, tendered his resignation to that body, and it has been accepted with regret, the members paying well-deserved tributes to the meritorious manner in which he filled the position.

The English-bred gelding Mayfowl, by Wild Fowler from Mayberry, who won the Viceroy's Cup (Calcutta) in 1910 and 1911, and the following year deadheated with Brogue for that event, was the star performer at the Calcutta races last month when he again secured the Viceroy's Cup, 1¾m, and followed up that performance by annexing the Cooch Behar Cup, 1¼m, and the Macpherson Cup, 1m 6f and 232yds. There were seven starters for the Viceroy's Cup, for which odds of 7 to 4 were laid on Mayfowl, the best fancied of the others being Jemima, while the Australian representatives Saxonite and Jacamar were at 25 to 1 and 20 to 1 respectively. Mayfowl took charge at the distance, and won by three and a half lengths from Jemima, while Saxonite and Metamac deadheated for third place. The mile and three-quarters were covered in 3m 7⅗s. Backers were called upon to lay 5 to 4 on Mayfowl for the Cooch Behar Cup, in which the Australian-bred Five Crown was included in a field of 11. The favourite was badly placed for the greater part of the journey, but he worked his way through at the distance and won by a short head in the good time of 2m 7s. He started at 2 to 1 on in a field of four for the Macpherson Cup, and again took charge at the distance, covering the St. Leger distance in 3m 11s. For a long time Australian-bred racehorses had a lien on the Viceroy's Cup, but English-bred performers have been successful in that event since the Australian Wandin scored in 1908.

Among the visitors at Randwick on Monday were Messrs Bellbridge and J. Norman Hay, president and secretary respectively of the Albury Racing Club.

The Melbourne trainer, James Scobie, holds the Australian record for the number of horses he started in a race. In a Maribyrnong Trial at Flemington Scobie's stable was represented by eight, but according to the "Thoroughbred Record" the American trainer, W. R. Midgley, of Belmont Park, U.S.A., has gone two better with 10 starters for a two-year-old race. A story is told of King William IV., that after his accession to the English throne, the Royal stud came into his possession, and when asked by his trainer for instructions as regards the running of his horses at Ascot, ordered him "to start the whole fleet."' Evidently the monarch knew more about navigation than horseracing.

Horse-racing in Canada seems to be progressing. The International Derby, to be run at Dorval Park, Montreal, on June 13, next, is endowed with 20,000 dollars and has attracted nominations from 67 owners, or firms. The conditions are that each subscriber may nominate three horses by May 1. Among the subscribers is Mr. August Belmont, chairman of the New York Jockey Club.

GOLF.

CLUB COMPETITONS.

DRY COURSES.

Though there was a good deal of golf played on Saturday, there was not very much which calls for comment, as at least three of the clubs were engaged with continuous competitions, the results of which will not be known until the end of the month.

Concord brought its continuous bogey competition to a termination, the result being a win for that steady veteran, C. M. Garrard, who, because he invariably uses his irons from the tee, is sometimes known as the "Iron King." He plays very straight, and is always to be reckoned with in competition, while as a match-player he is very dependable. Even allowing for the dry state of the course, which has converted good length two-shot holes into those of the drive and pitch variety, his two best cards of 4 up and 3 up from the handicap 2 mark must be considered distinctly good. J. M. Arnott (1) was a very good second, with 3 up and 1 up, but after that the results tailed off, E. S. Littlejohn (7), with 1 up and 1 down, being third. W. B. Fairfax (2) and A. R. J. Watt (5) each beat the Colonel once with cards of 2 up, but could only perform moderately in their other rounds.

The slight showers of rain which have fallen on the majority of the courses have been altogether insufficient to alleviate the dry conditions. Almost every course badly needs three of four inches of rain at least, and when this comes it is to be expected that players who have more or less been "up in the clouds" with exceptionally good performances, will once more come back to earth. With the courses in their present condition, an ordinary drive worth, say, 180 yards, runs on until a distance in the neighbourhood of 250 yards is reached. The second shot, then, instead of requiring a brassey or cleek, is negotiated with an iron or mashie, and the green reached with much more certainty than would otherwise be the case. The round is thus made very much easier than when the links are in normal condition, and accounts for a large proportion of the remarkably good scores which have been recorded.

At Killara H. G. Hyde and W. A. Allerton tied in the stroke competition with cards of 74 net, their handicaps being respectively 5 and 8. In view of the approach of the 1914 match-playing season, the evidence that these players are in form will be welcome to the Killara committee. Hyde played all through last season at the top of the "B" team with conspicuous success, and in the coming matches may reasonably expect promotion to the "A" team, while Allerton got his chance with the "B" team only towards the end of the season, but won the only match he played. He is evidently determined to keep his place, and should do so, as he has been playing well for some time. Hyde, however, has not played very much during the summer, but the spell has apparently not affected his form adversely. His 79 on Saturday was a good effort. The consistent E. J. Sievers was a good third with a card of 87—12—75. This player provides a striking instance of what can be done by one who takes up golf when early youth has passed him by. He is one of the most enthusiastic players on the course, has had his handicap reduced several times lately, and is likely to get it still further reduced in the near future, as his 87 on Saturday is not by any means his best performance; in fact, one believes he has broken 80 in practice rounds. His contemporaries at the game (or the majority of them) are still pottering about with handicaps ranging from 20 to 30, but Sievers will not be satisfied until he is down to scratch.

J. M. Edwards scored a very popular win at Dobroyde on Saturday, by means of a very fine round—4 up on bogey from the 6 mark. As a player Edwards does not impress one as being very certain, but he has his flashes of brilliancy, and on his day plays remarkably good golf. Then he apparently goes into retirement, to appear at the head of the list a month or so later with another good round. On Saturday he was quite in his best form, and, playing excellently, won easily, E. T. Jones (15) being scored with a card of 1 up. No fewer than three players tied for third place with cards all square with bogey, they being W. J. Liggins (11), T. Campbell (15), and J. Robertson (21).

E. Ellis (17) scored a success in the Bonnie Doon Club's bogey handicap, with a good card of 1 up. He has been showing prominently lately, and will doubtless be rewarded with a reduction in handicap. J. E. Howard and P. Ellis, each on scratch, could not do better than 2 down. Manly, Drummoyne, and Cammeray each advanced their continuous competitions another stage, the results of which will be known next week.

A number of very good cards were handed in on Monday in the various competitions. At Manly C. N. Smith and W. D. Younge tied for the stroke competition with excellent returns of 80—9=71. This was too good for the scratch men, who, however, showed to advantage, C. Stewart Moore going round in 75, F. Tombleson in 76, and J. B. Ferrier in 77. The B grade competition fell to J. C. Carruthers, with 88—18=70. The four-ball best ball stroke event in the afternoon was won by J. B. Ferrier and W. A. Walton with 73—4=69, closely followed by G. S. Freeman and A. W. Buzacott, 75—5=70, and by R. Colquhoun and C. E. Norman, 75—4=71, and A. L. K. Adam and A. H. Davies, 85—14=71.

A. S. Boulton, a long mark man, who has only been playing a few months, had things all his own way at Killara, winning easily with a card of 90—30=60. This is Boulton's best performance, but a necessary reduction in handicap should spur him on to better deeds. The long-markers were greatly in evidence, H. G. Hyde, the first of the short handicap men, taking 76—5=71, which, though usually good enough to win, gave him only fifth position. His was the best gross round of the day. A foursomes bogey competition in the afternoon resulted in a tie, C. E. Graham and W. Allerton (5) and V. O. H. Dangar and S. B. Hague-Smith (6) each handing in cards of one down.

The Concord Club played a bogey competition, in which the best card all day was returned by H. C. Chapman, who, with a handicap of 10, finished three up, closely followed by J. T. Hyde (16)) with two up, G. A. Parkes (14) being third with a card of square. There was nothing of a sensational nature at Dobroyde, where T. Campbell (15) won the bogey handicap with a moderate return of two down.

At Bonnie Doon a four ball best ball bogey competition was played, the winners proving to be A. McLachlan (6) and J. W. Dunlop (14), who, playing well together, handed in a very fair card of 6 up. P. R. Russell (1) and L. W. Mogg (2) were a good second with 5 up, while P. Ellis and W. S. Collie were 4 up. In the afternoon E. Ellis repeated his success of Saturday by winning the stroke competition with the fine score of 95—20=75, thus showing that the reduction in handicap which he sustained was well justified. He won easily from H. A. Richardson, C. M. Harris, and H. L. Tange, who tied for second place with cards of 82 net.

A 36 holes stroke competition at Cammeray was secured by P. A. Burton with 186—50=136, but he did not have much to spare, as F. Y. Wilson was only two strokes behind with 172—34=138.

The Goulburn Club visited Wollongong on the holiday, but suffered defeat by 5 matches to 2, while an associates' team from the same club was beaten by the Wollongong ladies by 3 to 1. In an open competition played in the afternoon, L. Deer, of Dobroyde, scored a good win with a card of 3 up from the handicap 14 mark.

The majority of the clubs will shortly be preparing their programmes for 1914, and it is desirable to dispose of this matter as early as possible. Little can be done until the Suburban and Country Golf Association has settled the dates for inter-club matches, Country Week, and other important fixtures, but a meeting of the Association has been called to-morrow to decide on the programme for the year.

It is definitely announced in English golfing papers that, barring unforseen contingencies, Francis Ouimet, winner of the American open championships and conqueror of Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, will cross the Atlantic to compete in the British open and amateur championships. The Woodland Golf Club has started a fund to defray the brilliant young players travelling and living expenses while on tour, care being of course taken to see that no loss of amateur status is involved thereby. British golfers will be anxious to see if Ouimet can reproduce the wonderful form he displayed against the leading English professionals.

At a golfing dinner in London recently, Sir George Riddell, the chairman, in referring to the growth in popularity of the game, said that 35 years ago there were not 50 golf courses in Scotland, while there were now over 2000, and that 20 years ago there were not more than a dozen courses in England, while now there were thousands. Although some people held that the game had reached its zenith, he prophesied that it would spread to a much greater degree in another 20 years; in fact, he thought we had only touched the fringe of it.

M.C.C. TEAM.

FIRST TRANSVAAL MATCH.

INTERESTING GAME.

JOHANNESBURG, December 25.

Immediately after the completion of the first test match in Durban the M.C.C. team entrained for Johannesburg.

After the splendid victory over South Africa at Durban there was no doubt in anybody's mind what the result of the Transvaal match would be. Still, the fixture was eagerly anticipated, because there was a good deal of anxiety among cricketers to see how the Transvaal batsmen would shape against good bowlers. Playing amongst themselves, the Transvaalers have been most prolific scorers this season, but it would be extraordinary if this were not so, for there is a dearth of bowlers, and the grounds lend themselves to big totals.

As in the Natal match, there were several players on trial for places in the South African team. J. W. Zulch and R. Beaumont were invited to go to Durban, but Zulch could not get away, and Beaumont declined to travel "on spec"; he would have gone had the selectors guaranteed him a place in the side, but this they were unable to do. Whether he failed or not, Zulch was generally considered a certainty for the second test, but L. J. Tancred, R. Beaumont, A. H. S. Cooper, M. J. Susskind (batsmen), F. Le Roux, C. J. Newberry, H. V. Baumgartner, and C. D. Dixon had to show their faces.

M.C.C. WINS BY AN INNINGS.

As anticipated, the M.C.C. team won comfortably by an innings and 29 runs. Briefly stated, the Transvaal scored 202 (R. Beaumont 62, J. W. Zulch 47, L. J. Tancred 23), and 196 (R. Beaumont 52, T. A. Ward 35, C. J. Newberry 31, C. D. Dixon 27, L. J. Tancred 20). M.C.C. made 427 for eight wickets, innings declared (F. E. Woolley 116, J. B. Hobbs 102, M. C. Bird 67, A. E. Relf 34, W. Rhodes 31, C. P. Mead 23). In the first innings Barnes took four wickets for 78, and in the second three for 31; but in the latter he only bowled 13 overs, owing to an injured finger. None of the other M.C.C. bowlers were singularly successful, though in the two innings Woolley secured four wickets for 51. Of the Transvaal bowlers Baumgartner was again a failure, his solitary wicket costing 98 runs. With the aid of two exceptionally good catches, Newberry secured three for 109, Le Roux two for 66, and C. D. Dixon two for 92.

There was nothing about the form of any of the Transvaal bowlers to justify elation, and it is only because we are so hard up that Newberry has been selected for the second test. On the other hand, the batting gives promise. Beaumont, after commencing shakily, batted really well in the first innings, and never seemed troubled by Barnes. In the second innings he opened with unusual confidence, and though towards the end he was not quite so sound, it is safe to predict that his first match experience will be considerably enlarged both this season and next. Zulch also showed that he had not lost his skill, despite the little practice he has had, and although he is not an ideal opening batsman, he is one of the best we have. Tancred, the veteran, scored in both innings, and has quite earned his place as a batsman, but, unfortunately, he is very weak in the field, and therefore his choice for the next test has not been received with unanimous approval. Those who advocated H. W. Taylor as captain of the South African side feared that Tancred, who was vice-captain of the team in England, would supplant him. Tancred is a poor captain, and there has been such a succession of poor captains in the past that it is thought to be quite time a change was made for the future.

..NGLISH BATTING SUCCESSES.

The M.C.C. batsmen really did as they wished, and the majority of those who got out did so by taking risks they would not take in ordinary circumstances. At the close of the first day Hobbs and Rhodes made 95 in 55 minutes, and were unseparated. Next morning Rhodes succumbed at 99, but Hobbs practically did as he liked with the bowling, until his score reached 102 out of 164. He hit one six and fifteen fours, and batted two hours. Woolley's innings, like Hobbs's, was chanceless. He scored 116 in 115 minutes out of 200 added while he was in. He hit one six and eighteen fours. You see how easy boundaries are on the Wanderers' ground. Hits for six are, however, full value.

Australians will be interested to hear that the first reserve for the Transvaal was Eric C. Moses, a nephew of the veteran Australian cricketer, Harry Moses. Eric is the Repton schoolboy who did so well for his school two or three years ago, and played for Derbyshire in 1910. He has been batting and bowling very well this season, and will be heard of before long in big cricket. He played once last year for the Transvaal, but it was his first season on matting wickets, and he was rather slow in adapting himself to them.

SAILING.

THE BASIN CUP.

On Saturday next the Royal Prince Alfred Yacht Club will open the second half of its racing programme with a general handicap, the Basin Cup, which will be an all-day event over an ocean course. A start will be made about 9.30 a.m., when the yachts will be sent away together for the long race northwards as far as Broken Bay, where they will round Lion Island, and return to Sydney. Commodore Norman H. Murray has again presented the trophy for this year's event, which will be the eighth since its inception. The following are the previous results:—

1906-7—Rawhiti (C. T. Brockhoff).
1907-8—Fleetwing (E. E. Sayer).
1908-9—Petrel (C. Trebeck).
1909-10—Rawhiti (F. Albert and E. E. Sayer).
1911-12—Yeulba (A. L. Mullens).
1912-13—Rawhiti (F. Albert and E. E. Sayer).

The Sydney Amateur Sailing Club will hold a general handicap for both A and B classes on Saturday, the course for A class being from line between the starter's boat and Orient buoy in Neutral Bay, round R.S.Y.S. buoy at Manly, round Shark Island, and finish over starting line. The B class will race from the same starting line, but 15 minutes earlier than A class, round Gas buoy, Sow and Pigs, Shark Island, Fort Denison, Shark Island, and finish over starting line.

Yeulba met with misfortune again on Saturday. When rounding the Pile Light off Shark Island a sudden hard puff caught her, and she touched the mark with her topsail yard, the result being that her mast was sprung and the gaff broken. This prevented her starting in the Anniversary Regatta on Monday, which was much regretted by the yachting patrons of the flagship.

In order to give the members an opportunity of witnessing the contest for the Northcote Cup on February 7, the Sydney Amateur Sailing Club has decided to postpone the ocean race which was to have been sailed on that day, but the date on which this event will take place has not yet been decided.

AMERICAN FOOTBALL

THE GAME EXPLAINED.

"Fourteen deaths and 175 serious injuries," is the official record published in connection with the inter-collegiate game of football played this year in the middle-western and eastern part of the United States. The record goes on to state that in the previous year 15 players were killed, while 183 were injured, and that in both records the injured list only included those who had suffered broken bones, torn ligaments, severe strains and sprains, and internal injuries. Now Australians are familiar with four codes of football, but, fortunately, a record of this description has not yet been achieved. It is a game entirely different from any that is known here.

The American inter-collegiate, or "old game," as it is differently known in various parts of the union, is played by 11 men aside. The laws, however, allow substitutes "ad libitum," and as many as 50 players may participate in a match. The players appear in uniforms (which are padded at the shoulders, hips, knees, and legs), nose-guards, and chin protectors, and several other means of minimising the effects of hard play are employed. With 11 men in the field, the substitutes are huddled up in blankets on the side lines awaiting the signal to replace an injured man. Two umpires are employed, one to adjudicate on the rules of the game, the other to give decisions on rough or foul play. Both follow the game from the centre of the field. The ball used is similar to the "Rugby," but it is much smaller. On the side lines are two official measurers, whose duties are to accurately determine the position of the "downs," and to decide if the requisite ten yards has been obtained in four "downs." This accomplishment is the principal object of the game, and the measurers have very delicate surveyor's instruments, which measure distances to the minutest fraction. There are also the coaches, trainers, etc, of the competing teams. The positions of the men on the field are described as right end, right tackle, right guard, centre, left guard, left tackle, and left end, all of whom correspond with the forwards in Rugby, as they are the front line. Then there are a quarter-back, two half-backs, and a back, who also correspond with the back players in Rugby.

Play begins with a kick from centrefield, the ball being caught by one of the opposing players, whose duty it is to make as much ground as possible before he is tackled. He has no thought of kicking or passing the ball, as possession is considered "everything" in the game. His comrades make no attempt, as in Rugby, to get into position for a pass, instead they conspire to give the man in possession all the support they can in the matter of providing an uninterrupted run. Interference and tackling an opponent who is not in possession, etc, are allowed, so that the runner finds, instead of an opponent tackling him, said opponent is sent sprawling, and he proceeds a little further. However, he is ultimately downed, and a "sacks on the mill" performance occurs, in which the referee blows his whistle and pronounces a "down," deciding which side is in possession of the ball after clearing off the top men. The spot is then marked, and the next play is called "forming the line." This consists of the ends, tackles, guards, and centres of both sides lining up opposite to one another. About two yards separate the opposing players, who stand close together.

The side in possession has now to gain ten yards in four "downs," or else forfeit possession to the other side, which then makes the attempt. This feat in itself does not count in the scores, but having accomplished it, the successful side continues, and tries again for another 10 yards, and so on, until the goal-line is crossed and a try scored, or a goal kicked. However, play is resumed from a "down" by forming the line in the first place. Then the centre holds the ball and the quarter-back (who always directs proceedings on the field, as shouted to him by the coach on the touch line) calls out a jumble of figures, which convey some move to the attackers, but, which sound like a foreign language to the opposition. The centre stoops down facing the defenders, and sends the ball through his legs to the quarter-back, who works the move. He may make an attempt to run around the end, or, if he is a heavy man, endeavour to work his way through the line. Or there may be a quick attempt at goal, in which case the quarter or half puts the ball on the ground, and the kicker tries for goal without directing it as the defenders are racing at him. The kicking in such circumstances is remarkable, and the handling of the passes clean, as faults in this respect cause less of possession.

Other moves include a bunching of the backs in attack on a weak link in the line, and butting the ball through, hurdling over the line, and various diving "stunts" to gain ground. Meanwhile the lines are "hard at it." The duty of right end on the attacking side, for instance, is to prevent the left end of the other side getting past him, and so on, across the line. The defenders, of course, endeavour to tackle the man with the ball, and the combined efforts of the 14 men on the line result in a number of sprawling figures, who apparently are not in the game, and often never touch the ball the whole day. However, someone makes a little headway with the ball, and claims a "down." He may be forced back, and thus lose ground, but in any case the line is formed again, and the same thing continues. The players huddle up in one small section of the field and try to work through an impossible-looking mass of humanity.

The forming of the line and the giving of the signals occupy a much longer period than the actual play. When Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of the Leland Stanford University in California, determined that Rugby should supplant the American game, he gave as his reasons that, although efforts were being made to open up the old code, two things would have to be changed before the game would be fit for the college youth to play. The first was the elimination of the interference and off-side play, and the second, that when a player was down he must let the ball go so that it remained in play. He figured it out that in the American game the ball was actually in play only about eight minutes out of forty. The rest of the time was devoted to falling, getting up, and preparing for the next plunge.

The American is purely a coach's game. That official is supreme, and can plan his campaign on the blackboard without counting on the unexpected happenings that occur in Rugby. For that reason the game was originally evolved. Rugby held sway at one time, but the coaches met each year and altered the rules, as they do to this day. A coach would seek alterations to suit the particular team he had in charge, and bit by bit the game was changed into the present. Every year new rules are made, but the newest alterations all tend to open play, and, therefore, much nearer to Rugby.

A few years ago the regulations required five yards in three "downs," which was almost unattainable. Five feet per "down" seems a simple attainment, but it was not by any means easy of attainment on the field. As the play became open the distance was lengthened. However, to a Rugby man there is nothing in the game to recommend. There is not sufficient use made of the field. With possession assured, it should be possible to work some fine back-play, but the risk of losing possession will not be taken. It is this close rucking play that causes the injuries. The coach will determine upon the weakest man in the opposition, and concentrate his effort upon him until he weakens. The player will never give in. The American has no time for the "quitter," he will fight to the last ditch. He is also afraid of his own coach removing him from the field and putting in a substitute, which is considered a disgrace. And so the game is played until nature will stand no more, and a collapse results in his removal to the hospital.

In some minds this game is classified as sport, and to the coaches, who are given absolute charge, and then judged by results, anything is fair in this mimic warfare. The support accorded the coach is remarkable, and in many places the Rugby game is condemned because it cannot be learned in four years, which is the life of the American footballer, as he does not play after he leaves the University, while the coach does all the thinking necessary in the "old game." The presidents of all the Californian universities took a firm stand in the matter to wipe out what Dr. Jordan describes "as the game that young America loves to cripple itself at," and it is more than likely that public opinion, parental feeling for the boys at college, and long-delayed action by the University Faculty will put an end to this most deplorable loss of life.

SWIMMING.

AUSTRALIAN CHAMPIONSHIPS.

NEW AMERICAN SPRINTER.

HATFIELD'S FORM.

After a lapse of three years, Sydney is to again be the deciding place for the Australian swimming championships. The 1911 carnival was the most successful ever held here. The Domain Baths could not accommodate the huge crowd which wished to attend, and the swimming provided sensational surprises and keen contests. The first day introduced William Longworth to the world, as the present champion won his first big event on that occasion, and put up a world's record, which still stands. The Australian championship meetings have often provided such sensations. Kieran proved too good for R. Cavill in 1904 over the half-mile, when both swimmers bettered the previous world's record. In the same year Alex. Wickham won the "hundred" from Cecil Healy, when the latter was considered a certainty. Springfield (Queensland) and Beaurepaire (Victoria) have also provided surprises, and it was owing to their prowess that the Kieran Shield was away from New South Wales for four years. In 1911, however, it came back, and has remained here ever since.

As the result of the Brisbane events, New South Wales has three wins to her credit, and one more victory in Sydney will ensure another 12 months' right to hold the trophy. As a State, therefore, it seems a certainty that New South Wales will be victorious. The individual performances, however, are really the most interesting. All States are represented, and the cream of Australian swimmers will figure in the galas on Saturday and Monday next.

The events annually create the greatest enthusiasm, no matter in which State they are held, but there is something about Sydney as a convincing spot—the comfortable accommodation at the Domain baths, and the fascination of the city as a holiday resort—that both champions and handicap men just swarm in from other ports of the Commonwealth. This time the entries from the various States are more numerous than ever, and the fact that every State is represented constitutes a record. Everything, therefore, points to a repetition of previous successes in these carnivals.

A big crowd and splendidly contested main events gave the first series of championship carnivals, which were decided in Brisbane on Saturday and Monday, an auspicious start. Albert Barry proved his right to the title of Australian record-holder for 100 yards by defeating all opposition for a second time this season, and now that he has the experience of two such wins, it is more than likely that he will be particularly hard to displace from the premier position. The surprise in this event was the hard race which Finlay (W.A.) gave Longworth for second place. The Perth swimmer has improved his crawl stroke considerably, and is likely to do even better in Sydney on Saturday, as the conditions will suit him. The standard of our swimmers over the sprints may be gauged by the fact that Cecil Healy, who finished second in the Olympic Games 100 metres event to the famous Kahanamoku, had to be content on this occasion with fourth position. The second surprise came from a Queenslander in Sidney Springfield, who extended Longworth so much in the 1320 yards that he was actually ahead at 1000 yards. He swam very pluckily throughout, and he, too, should do better in the deep, buoyant water of the Domain baths on Saturday. It will be the Brisbane swimmer's first appearance in Sydney, although his brother Frank is well-known throughout the Commonwealth as the first winner of the Kieran Memorial Shield for his State in 1907. When Sidney Springfield faces Longworth in the half-mile and mile events, fine races should result. Finlay is well known as an exponent of the breast stroke, and holds the Australian record for 220 yards, while he has won both the 100 and furlong championships. In 1911 he conquered all Europe and Great Britain in life-saving work by winning the King's Cup competition in London, and is the only Australian who has accomplished this feat.

The most interesting feature of Monday's carnival was the fine form shown by Finlay in the breast-stroke championship, wherein he established an Australian record for the distance. The Western Australian has on two former occasions lowered the figures, and stands out as the undoubted champion in this method of propulsion. The time, 3m 10s, is much nearer the standard of European exponents, and a slight improvement on the figures will give Finlay an excellent chance of annexing the next Olympic breast-stroke event. Finney, the Victorian, is more at home over the "hundred," and this fact will tell when the two visitors meet in that race in Sydney on Saturday next. Springfield, who again pushed Longworth closely in the quarter mile, beat Healy for second place. The improvement shown by both Finlay and Springfield indicates that the races in Sydney will be even more interesting than expected. Healy is sure to be better suited in the Domain Baths, and may reverse the decision.

On Saturday another trial of strength between Longworth and Healy over their favourite distance—the furlong—will take place. The sensational finish of Healy in the State championship when he was rapidly overhauling the champion at the finish, and only lost the race by a foot, will not be soon forgotten. And the additional condition gained by both since that event should result in another strenuous contest. Healy's preparation for the former event was rather short, and his racing work was nil. It will not be surprising if new figures are created for the distance.

The 100 yards breast stroke seems likely to provide a great race among the visitors, as E. G. Finlay (W.A.), W. H. Finney (Vic.), and C. Rodway (Tasmania) have better records than the local swimmers. Finlay is also likely to show well in the 220 yards. Saturday's programme includes the 100 yards country championship, besides the usual handicaps and a specially-prepared diving display by the troupe under Len M'Carthy.

The United States has unearthed another speedy swimmer. The sudden appearance of C. M. Daniels in 1906 at Athens, when he defeated Cecil Healy, and the equally sensational win of Duke Paoa Kahanamoku in the 100 metres event in 1912, at Stockholm, when Healy also figured prominently, are still fresh in the minds of swimming enthusiasts. The latest wonder, however, is showing his hand two years before the games. Ernest Smith, of San Francisco, covered 100 yards in 57s, and, as he is only 17 years of age, Californian enthusiasts naturally consider that they have a very promising performer. American exchanges state that the time was recorded under conditions that made the performance equal to about 56s in a 60ft pool, but the reports omit to give the reasons for such a theory. The bath and the length of laps are not stated, but Smith seems likely to be heard from again.

Hatfield's fine swimming is delighting English enthusiasts, and the following extract from a letter received in Sydney from Wm. Henry, will be interesting:—

I have no great swimming news to report to you, except that Hatfield is at present going "great guns"; in fact, if he swims with a little more judgment, he is capable of getting inside almost any record, with the exception of the shorter distances. We also have a lot of youngsters who are likely to be very useful in a few years—so [illegible] are hopeful.

A feature of the annual programme of the Sydney Club has always been the ladies' invitation carnival, when the lady friends of members and the inter-club competitors are invited to attend as guests of the club. February 11 has been set aside for the event this season. The programme includes, 100 yards championship of the club, 50 yards junior championship, diving championship, a challenge contest of 880 yards, between Sydney and Randwick and Coogee, in which four men from each club will contest relays of 220 yards each, 66 yards inter-club handicap, 66 yards breast stroke handicap, junior inter-club diving displays, and novelties.

The Palace Emporium Club will hold its annual carnival at the Coogee Aquarium baths on Wednesday, February 18, at 8 p.m. The inter-club events include 100 yards handicap (limited to swimmers capable of doing better than 1m 10s), 66 yards general handicap, and a diving competition. Entries will close on February 11.

With the champions away in Brisbane, and a number of prominent men in competition at the surf carnival, nothing out of the ordinary was performed in Saturday's club handicaps. All the clubs were busy during the week, the attendance of members being more than satisfactory, and it is doubtful if the interest in ordinary members' handicaps was ever keener. In the surf carnival Harold Hardwick, as beltman, again carried off the alarm reel race for Manly. The attendance of the public was up to the best of previous years, and the function was most successfully carried out.

Country clubs are well catered for by the association, and new organisations are being formed in different parts of the State. The latest is at Taree, where the Manning River provides a beautiful course for contests. At Narrabri on Monday the local club held its first carnival, when Frank Cummins, the association's handicapper, represented the Sydney swimmers in the principal events. F. Wellandt, of Rose Bay, was at Gunnedah on Monday, and H. M. Hay, of Manly, performed at Goulburn's gala on Friday last. These visits are carried out by the association in the interests of country swimming.

To-night two carnivals will be held. At Drummoyne Baths the local club will control its annual fixture, the chief item being the teams' championship of the western suburban clubs. The Metropolitan Ladies' Club will also hold a gala at the Domain Baths, when the 50 yards championship of New South Wales will be decided. Sanction has been given for the diving contingent from the men's association to appear.

FOOTBALL.

THE RUGBY LEAGUE GAME.

GLEBE CLAIM MORE TERRITORY.

At the close of the 1913 football season the League committee of the New South Wales Rugby League considered the question of revising the district boundaries of the eight first-grade clubs, and appointed a sub-committee to report on the matter. Since then the League committee has further considered the whole position, and decided that for the present things are to remain as heretofore. Evidently this decision has not met with satisfaction, as the Glebe District Club has appealed to the general committee for more territory. The League's decision to shelve the scheme of distribution for the time being must, in fairness to other clubs, place Glebe's claims for individual consideration out of court; but sooner or later the governing body of the thirteen aside code must face the problem of bringing about a more equitable state of affairs as regards club boundaries commensurate with the expansion of the city and its environs.

THE AUSTRALIAN GAME.

CLUB MOVEMENTS.

The next meeting of the New South Wales League, which will take place on Friday, will usher in the preliminaries of the coming season, which, by reason of the carnival games, should easily prove the most successful in the history of the game in New South Wales, providing the League and the clubs constituting it rise to the occasion. Already the clubs which comprised the League during last season—the initial one of the district scheme—are showing signs of activity. In that respect Sydney leads the way, and as its meetings are held regularly each fortnight throughout the year, in or out of season, it may be said that its members are constantly in touch with each other. It is probably to this fact that its triumphs on the football field are due. The maxim, "if a thing is worth doing it is worth doing well," is exemplified by the success which has been attained by the Sydney Club, both on and off the playing field. The example might well be copied by the remainder of the clubs.

Representation has been made to the League for the inclusion of a western suburbs team. No fewer than 36 names of players have been submitted from which the personnel of the team could be recruited. A pleasing phase lies in the fact that the majority are ex-schoolboys, prominent amongst whom are Kinninmont, the ex-Fort-street schoolboy, and Gordon, one of the Burwood school cracks. If Mack, Blackaby, and O'Grady, of the Sydney Club, Jeffreys and Provan of Newtown, and other senior players, who have residential qualifications, could be induced to throw in their lot with the proposed new club, a western suburbs team should become an actuality of season 1914.

St. George is another district where a move in favour of the national code is being looked for, and it is thought that an energetic local movement would bring about the desired end, as many fine exponents are to be found within the district area. And the fact that the district scheme, as adopted by the League, holds provision for the acceptance of district teams within the boundaries of St. George, Western Suburbs, and Manly areas, goes far to simplify matters. All that is necessary is to satisfy the League as to the quality of the playing membership being up to League standard.

The junior element desirous of attaining League honours this season was strongly in evidence at a largely-attended meeting of the Newtown Club last week. Some of the attendant juniors had wavered in their allegiance to the code during last season, but are now keen on playing.

Towards the close of last season Sydney and Newtown clubs were desirous of playing an exhibition game at Newcastle in aid of the local hospital. However, inability to secure a suitable ground caused it to be abandoned. Negotiations are now in train for the clubs named to play an exhibition game at Newcastle on April 4, and should such take place it may prove of material benefit to the progress of the game.

THE ASSOCIATION GAME.

ENGLISH NEWS.

The conflict between laws 7 and 10, relating to the number of yards within which a kicker's opponents shall not approach when a free-kick is awarded, is proving troublesome to referees in the United Kingdom. England, Wales, and all the Continental countries insist on opponents being not less than 10 yards away when any free-kick is taken. In Ireland and Scotland opponents may claim to stand not more than six yards away when a goal-kick or a corner-kick is taken. The laws, however, are almost certain to be brought into harmony when the International Board meets next June.

Attempts are being made in certain quarters to blame the Football Association Council because it will not give a pledge that in future it will refrain from publishing any punishment it may inflict upon referees. The matter has been considered very thoroughly, and the decision that it is not practicable to keep any suspensions secret has met with general approval by affiliated associations.

Blackburn Rovers headed the list in the first division of the English League when the last mail left. They had then scored 48 goals—12 more than any other team—in 19 matches, 20 goals having been scored against them.

LAWN TENNIS.

INCREASE OF OPEN TOURNAMENTS.

LONG STARTS IN HANDICAPS.

Lawn tennis players of the present day are much more favoured than those of a few years ago in having numerous open tournaments throughout the year, in which they may, while enjoying the contests, improve their play by competition with a variety of opponents. Up to within a few years there were only two annual open tournaments in the metropolitan area—the New South Wales championships at the Sydney Cricket Ground and the metropolitan championships at Strathfield. The removal of the former to Double Bay has led to the institution of the City of Sydney championships at the Sydney Cricket Ground; the Western Suburbs Championships are held by the Appian Way Club at Burwood, and the latest addition is the Northern Suburbs Championship tournament, controlled by the local club at Killara. The northern suburbs championships have then been revived. They were inaugurated by the Mosman Club some years ago, but were dropped after two meetings, the first being held on the club's courts, and the second on the Double Bay ground. The Killara meeting will evidently do much good in fostering the game, for the entries include those of numerous players in the locality who have not hitherto taken part in open tournaments. Having broken the ice, some of them, no doubt, will be seen in other events of the kind. Moreover, being in a locality where tournaments of this magnitude have not hitherto been held, some of the onlookers will, for the first time, be attracted to the merits of lawn tennis.

It was this feature of propinquity which induced Lord Roberts to watch a lawn tennis match of importance for the first time last year. This happened in one of the Davis Cup preliminary matches. Being in the neighbourhood, the distinguished soldier went to the ground, and was so pleased with what he saw that he not only remained throughout the day's play, but during the rest of the season lost no opportunity of witnessing any first-class lawn tennis contest.

Another noted military man, Field-marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, appreciated the benefits of lawn tennis at a very early stage of his career. In "From Midshipman to Field-marshal" he states that for pleasure and on principle he played either lawn tennis or [illegible] for an hour or two every evening when in the field in South Africa just before the Zulu war began, and in the midst of preparations for it. That was at the end of 1878, the second year in which the All England singles championship was played. It is a coincidence that Sir Evelyn Wood, in his younger days, resided for some time at Clones, Ireland, where another lawn tennis player, equally noted in the peaceful battles of the courts—J. C. Parke—now lives.

The attractions of the Killara tournament were probably responsible for the falling through of that at Katoomba, although there ought to be enough support for two tournaments in places so far separated, each having special advantages of its own. It is hoped that the Katoomba event has only been postponed. It would be regrettable if this established and much-enjoyed meeting should be allowed to lapse.

A proposal, made at the annual meeting of the Lawn Tennis Association (England), that no player should receive more than [illegible] handicap, was warmly debated, and eventually rejected. Messrs. F. R. Burrow and [illegible] Scrivener, two noted handicappers, were strongly opposed to the suggested [illegible], Mr. Burrow stating that out of 1000 competitors, over 500 received 30.1 or over. The practice in England is to give much bigger starts than in Australia, where 30 is seldom seen as received odds. Possibly this is the reason why singles handicaps are seldom won by competitors on the limit, even though the back-markers may be owing heavily. If by chance a player with a liberal allowance is successful, grumbles are heard of the start being too much, yet, in scores of cases the superior competitor wins; but complaints that the handicap was not sufficient are seldom made. The back and middle markers seem to think that the "rabbits" ought to receive just enough start to enable them to win some games, but not a match, yet one class is entitled to as much chance of success as the other. The point of view makes all the difference as to the merits of the handicapper's work in the eyes of a few competitors.

Club committees have been busy arranging their teams for the interclub competitions, to begin next month. The premier club, Strathfield, will have C. O., E. O., and J. O. Anderson of last year's team, with E. Pockley in place of R. O. Anderson, who, though unlikely to be available for all matches, may play occasionally. Sydney's team will be composed of A. B. Jones, Wright, Clark, and Morgan, the lastnamed having earned his place in the team by many good performances, though there is little to choose between him and [illegible] Hicks. Western Suburbs will have F. and [illegible] Peach, S. R. Youdale, and L. Bonnington, the lastnamed taking the place of Meares. University will have a strong graduates' team in addition to oneof undergraduates, and there is likely to be some new clubs, including one in which Marsh and L. Todd will be the leading pair. Some of the clubs will enter more than one team in the first grade, these including Sydney, Strathfield, and Western Suburbs.

It is probable that an open tournament at Mount Kosciusko will be held this year. They have some good hard courts at the hotel, and recent visitors speak of being able to play there all day long without fatigue. The manager of the hotel is anxious to have a tournament, and will do everything possible to enable such an event to be successfully carried out. Metropolitan players would, no doubt, welcome an opportunity to combine lawn tennis with the other attractions of the mountain.

When Marsh and Morgan lost to J. O. and C. O. Anderson at Killara on Monday they would have won had a fast-travelling ball, sent by their opponents, cleared the base-line instead of dropping on it. It seemed impossible for any closer margin to exist between success and failure, but an incident comes to memory which occurred in the [illegible] championship of Victoria many years ago which enabled Ben. Green to win the championship after being possibly still closer to defeat. He was playing D. Harbison in the semi-final round, the latter requiring one point to give him the match. Harbison was serving. He got one well in [illegible] which was so fast that Green could not touch it, but it was a let, yet so slight was the contact with the net that the ball was apparently not deflected a hair's breadth from its line of flight. Had it crossed the net a fraction of an inch higher Green would have been defeated, but he eventually won the match, and subsequently the final.

H. B. Morgan's display in the doubles against the Andersons was replete with exquisite strokes when near the net, many of these being made when his opponents were attacking. They were quite up to international standard. Some errors in the matter of double faults and returns of the service made by him in the concluding stages [illegible] they were probably due to weariness.

J. O. Anderson played a sterling game in the same match. He was forced to exercise more restraint than usual, for Clarence Anderson, usually so reliable, was making more mistakes than he is accustomed to. J. O. Anderson used the medium-paced return of service across court with telling effect on the forehand, and also executed many winning returns with backhanders to the off, a stroke which he seldom employs, but which [illegible] prove a useful weapon to have at his command.

THE COMPETITIONS.

SUCCESSFUL SKIPPERS.

The prolonged spell of dry weather still remains unbroken, and the competitions are running along uninterruptedly. Nothing better could have been wished than the ideal perfection of Saturday last, and there must needs have been something radically wrong with the green or the bowler himself if the utmost pleasure was not extracted from the game.

Once again the week-end results left the situation unchanged in the Central district, and City are a day's march nearer home. Both Randwick and Waverley, who are treading closely on City's heels, won, and the lastnamed has only to make a mistake and a situation of prime interest will be created.

Redfern were comfortably defeated by Waverley, almost as a matter of course, and were down in three of the four rinks. The exception was that of Leitch's rink, who beat Cox's team 26-23, but for the big eastern club Wahlberg was "up" 35-20, Hope 34-24, and Dr. Burge 26-17.

It was thought that Randwick would have had a larger margin, but Balmain made a splendid fight of it, and for a long time looked like winners. Perhaps the most creditable performance was put up by Bressington in defeating the clever left-hander, Reeder, 22-16. H. A. Scott also did well to subdue Phippard, 28-20, and M'Laren beat a capable bowler in Spohn, 25-24, but Bromwich had most to do with Randwick's six-point win, as he returned a card of 30-21 in opposition to Crane. It was Bromwich's first pennant win this season, and his individual efforts formed a superb illustration of the art of the draw-the-shot game. Randwick won by 96-90.

It is not easy to understand why any discourtesy should be charged to Woonona, who notified their retirement from the contest in ample time through the proper channel. Each prospective opponent was acquainted by letter, and the fact that Woonona had forfeited to Redfern was also notified in the "Herald" on the morning of the match.

In the Northern division the matches turned out as anticipated in each case. Kuring-gai had an exercise canter, with Hunter's Hill as a track companion, and the opportunity was seized by at least two of the Warrawee rinks to build up large majorities. The biggest win of the day was scored by Black's team, with 48 to 9, and Waring won more laurels, 37-19, making his fourth big victory in five matches. Oakes won by 31-28, and has a similar record to Waring. W. Alders was alone 28-22 up.

Chatswood administered a sound beating to Warringah by 27 shots, but the game had its interesting features. It gave Wilkie an opportunity of demonstrating once more the excellence of his form, but the score of 43-14 was equally subscribed to by Crawley, Coates, and Forsyth. Neither Chapman nor Copeland had been previously defeated in the pennant, so that a tie game was the only way to preserve both certificates unsullied. The Warringah skipper did not see it in that light, however, and won by 25-18, with the result that his name, and inferentially those of his comrades, Clark, Hillman, and Bray, appear in the table below of unbeaten rinks. W. H. Gartrell received a mild shock in being run to one point by Binney, and the performance is quite a feather in the latter's bowling headgear. H. A. Young made Chatswood's third winner, and scored a full two-to-one card, 27-13.

Manly won in two rinks against Mosman, Knox defeating Walters 23-22, and Fuller beating Woodhouse, 20-19, both strenuous and well-contested games. It was Woollahra's first setback, and his luck is quite out, as a single point also put him out of the individual championship. Evans won by 31-24, but Colquhoun, 31-14, settled the fine opposition Manly were offering in the other rinks by playing all over Hinds' men. The difference of 34 on totals just about represents the merits of the two teams.

The victory of Parramatta over the premiers was the one unexpected item of the day, although Parramatta's two previous matches had resulted in their favour. There was no semblance of fluke in the result, as the margin was 34 points, nor can it be fairly argued that the substitution of three players for absentees made all the difference. Champion Risk Ski, or Morey won his third game by 40-20, an excellent performance against Lawson. Quigley also beat Martin with ease, 37-16, but—perhaps Davies' win of 28-21 in opposition to the strong team skipped by Harrison—was as meritorious as any on the day. Ashfield boasted only one winning rink, and that was captained by the inevitable Moses—22-18.

Petersham had a win at last, at the expense of the hitherto unbeaten St. George. It resembled the Ashfield-Parramatta match very closely as regards scores—the difference being 36, and the winners prevailing in three rinks. Tyler's rink accounted for 26 of the surplus, and O'Neill played up to form with 29-21. Strong had his first win—30—21—but Yeo went down for the third time in succession —17—24—Hyndman being the conqueror.

Burwood won in one rink only in opposition to Marrickville, Arnott scoring 27—21. For the winners—McGee 31—20, Clapin 29—21, and Woolford 27—26, returned winning cards. The Western section winner is now well concealed, and the remaining two rounds will be played with extreme keenness.

In the B competition Gladstone Park still retains the lead in the Central division. Waverley had a remarkably close match with Randwick, scores being level at the 25th end, necessitating all rinks playing another head, with the result that Waverley won by a single point.

VICTORIOUS SKIPS.

In the list below will be found the undefeated captains to date in the metropolitan premiership matches. The number of skippers tried in the aggregate is 93—31 in the central division, 30 in the northern, and 30 in the western. After the fifth round, therefore, less than 10 per cent. survive. Of those included below, only Gartrell and Moses appeared in last season's list at the corresponding period.

| Brogden | Redfern | 2 | — | 45 | 34 | 11 |

The programme for next Saturday is appended, and a majority of winners may be found among those first-mentioned of each pair. There are some interesting meetings, and anything may happen, for instance, on the Redfern green in the match between City and Randwick. In the Northern division neither Mosman nor Chatswood can afford to take any risks with their opponents. The state of the table shown in the preceding column indicates that both must be most careful. If figures could be accepted as a reliable guide, Parramatta should beat Petersham, but the match is the most difficult one on the programme to anticipate, and the issue is of great import to the section.

THE SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP.

This event has now reached the fourth round, and sectional winners are rapidly coming in sight. The third ties were not devoid of surprises, chief among which were the defeats of Moses, Strong, and Donaldson. In the central division, Gordon, of Randwick, who had reached the third round without greening a bowl, beat the City Club champion, Donaldson, by 31 to 25. The Randwick player, who by the way has been omitted from the last two pennant rounds, took the lead at the second end, and retained it till the 28th, when Donaldson passed him. A single, a four, and a triplet, in succession, however, placed Gordon within an ace of home, which he duly reached next end but one. The winner plays a hearty game, is rarely guilty of the fault of being short, but his chances of final success are not bright. Leitch had an easy victory over Young, 31—17, and the present holder of the coveted title must take some beating. The match between Bromwich and T. Anderson was a splendid struggle, with little difference in the totals the whole journey through. At the 34th end the card showed 26 all, but the steady, painstaking City skip scored two threes in the final ends, and won 32—27. Against such an able exponent of the draw game as Bromwich, the victory of T. Anderson was of distinct merit. His namesake, Peter, also added to the City Club's final chances by defeating Mackenzie in a long game of 38 ends, of which 25 resulted in singles. The score of 32—26 is a faithful reflex of the merits of the play, which was not disfigured by a single fluke. There would be no more popular victory in the final than that of Peter Anderson.

In the northern section W. H. Gartrell, had an easy win over Walters, 31—14, and his ultimate success is confidently predicted in many quarters. Without doubt the ex-Bathurstian is in very fine form, but there are some tough nuts yet to crack, and one remembers in this connection his unlooked-for defeat by H. A. Young in the final of Chatswood's championship last season. Wilkie, runner-up last year to Leitch, was almost equally severe on Colquhoun, 31—16, and won on his merits on the day. His form is excellent just now, but the loser is scarcely at his top, more particularly as regards four-bowl play.

The duels in the western division were chiefly notable for the easy defeat of Moses by club-mate Noakes, 32—15, and it is difficult to realise a player of Moses' skill and application scoring on only five ends in the first twenty, and nine only in the whole twenty-nine. Yet this is what actually happened, and it is a fine tribute to the skill of Noakes. Pettigrew was 29 to Strong's 18, but the latter, playing with characteristic determination, added 10 before the ex-Westralian notched the necessary two. Against Clapin, Searl stood 17—16, but then went clean out in seven successive ends. Mason was no match for Yeo, and scored in seven ends only, 32—11. The event is attracting great attention at this stage.

BILLIARDS.

INTERNATIONAL RULES.

The match, or series of matches, which are scheduled to take place in Europe and America this year between M. Inman, the English champion, and Willie Hoppe, the young American champion, brings to mind a former attempt to create international contests. For several years, when John Roberts was at the top of his form, and the then American billiard marvel, Frank Ives, was astonishing the world with his skill, claims were made by their admirers that either would defeat the other at a compromise game. Eventually, through the agency of Mr. J. P. Mannock (who was out here some years back with Charles Dawson) a match was arranged to take place at Knight's Bridge, London, in which the majority of the features of the English game were adhered to, the exception being that the pockets were smaller and the balls larger.

The match proved most exciting for the first few sessions, when Roberts appeared to outplay the young American, who it was whispered, had "something up his sleeve." And so it proved, as, getting the large balls jambed in the small pockets, Ives made cannon after cannon until, at the request of the spectators, he broke position after making a break considerably over the thousand.

Speaking of that game recently, Mr. Mannock said that the rules governing it were framed by him, and at the time he hoped they would have been adopted by the players of all countries where pocket tables were in use. "It is many years ago now," said Mr. Mannock, "but I still regard them as the ideal rules, save, perhaps, that relating to the penalty, which might be simplified so that all foul shots should meet with the same punishment."

Referring to the six games proposed by Hoppe and Inman, the expert teacher is of opinion that they should not play under the codes of the two countries, for each would certainly win three games. What they should do is to amalgamate the English and American games, and thereby help to solve the big problem which every billiardist wants settled. Inman and Hoppe are a small affair compared with a subject which opens up the tremendous issue of the billiard championship of the world. That can only be a possibility when the games are amalgamated.

Mannock's rules require a little explanation. The absence of middle pockets on American tables gives their exponents greater opportunities for rail play than they would have on an English table, while it limits the English players' losing hazards. On the other hand, the American is handicapped by the corner pockets, to which he is unused. A factor in favour of the English player is that the opposing white is never lost—even though it is considered in baulk when it first comes up.

The main features of the rules are: A table 12 x 6, four pockets, situated at each corner, $3\frac{1}{4}$in wide at full of the slate, and balls 2 3-16 inches in diameter. In the matter of scoring, all cannons count two points, losing hazards two points, winners three, misses one, coups three, balls forced off the table three to opponent. When the white is pocketed it is replaced on centre spot of baulk, and considered to be in baulk. If that spot is occupied the white is spotted on centre spot, and if that is covered, it is placed on the billiard spot.

If the striker's ball is touching another ball, he must fire on to the third ball or off a cushion before a score can be made. Pushing is foul. Other foul strokes are much the same as at present in vogue in English billiards; while the penalties are similar to those outlined in the B.A. code, and a trifle more complicated than in the more up-to-date B.C.C. rules, in which all foul strokes receive the same treatment, i.e., the balls are spotted, and opponent plays from hand.

Without a doubt Mannock's idea of unifying the billiard rules of the world is an excellent one, and would have met with success ere this had the players been more public spirited and supported the movement. But, unfortunately, the scheme fell through when Roberts was defeated. Some day the amalgamation of the rules will be brought about. It may not be until the racial barriers of speech and boundaries are obliterated—but it will come. Then we will have the spectacle of representatives of different nationalities competing for a real "world's" championship at billiards, just as is being done in tennis, boxing, and rowing.

CRICKET.

SHEFFIELD SHIELD COMMENTS.

INTERESTING PLAY.

The holiday match at the Sydney Cricket Ground provided quite a feast of good things for followers of the summer game, the most prominent feature, perhaps, being the striking mastery of the bat over the ball. That mastery, too, was specially interesting because of the success achieved by so many batsmen of very different style and methods in so many different ways. From the match point of view, too, the struggle was interesting, notwithstanding the almost unassailable lead established by the home side on the first day. Possibly the nature and extent of that lead interfered to some extent with the holiday attendance which fell below expectations and the general custom. Those who stayed away, however, missed a veritable treat, for not only did the home side make the highest score of the season in the Sheffield Shield series, but the visitors, despite a calamitous start, made a very valiant and praiseworthy reply. It would be difficult to over-estimate the merit of the uphill fight made by the Victorians after their first two batsmen were dismissed without scoring. It was impressive play all through.

IN LINE WITH THE CLASSICS.

C. G. Macartney continues to achieve phenomenal success. In each of the first-class matches on the Sydney Cricket Ground this season he has played a three-figure innings, and his sequence of big scores is somewhat reminiscent of that of A. C. Maclaren a few years back. The batting mastery of the English player over our bowling was a thing of wonderment and admiration, but no less remarkable, perhaps, has been that of Macartney. The consistent excellence of their play is the dominant feature of both. The variety of stroke, the freedom from mistake, the absolute certainty in placing the ball, and the consummate ease in dealing with all types and classes of bowling, characterises the mastery of both. There was a more pronounced appearance of aggression about the play of Maclaren, due largely to the flourish in his style, but power to punish is no less well developed in Macartney's skill, though it is far less obtrusive, being masked to some extent by the easy certainty with which he makes his strokes. At the present moment Macartney is the outstanding batsman in Australian cricket, and it is a great tribute to his enthusiasm and ability that he can now be classed, both as regards achievement and skill, amongst the classic performers in the game.

AN INTERESTING TOPIC.

One of the chief topics in cricket circles lately has been the question of the decadence of our wickets. It has been sought to show that a subtle change has been coming over the preparation of our pitches for some years to the detriment of our batting skill. Possibly in some cases the local pitches around Sydney are not so sound as formerly, but the character of the pitch on the Sydney Cricket Ground upon which this match has been played leaves very little room for complaint, either from the run-producing point of view or the variety of stroke play indulged in by the batsmen. In reference to other local grounds, however, it is an interesting topic.

KELLEWAY AND COLLINS.

Though not the biggest partnership of the innings the fine effort of C. Kelleway and H. L. Collins in adding 136 runs for the first wicket was undoubtedly an important factor in the sum of the New South Wales success with the bat. Both batsmen opened cautiously, but soon settled down into sound, if somewhat sedate, run-making. Collins, who, was the first to go—a wicket practically thrown away by suddenly departing from previous successful methods—showed very satisfactory form. His success tallies nicely with his doings in the southern town, though he made his runs both in Melbourne and Adelaide at a quicker rate and with more versatility of stroke. Collins deserves to be complimented on the improvement in his play during the season, especially in the Sheffield Shield contests, but he has yet to go a long way before fully realising the promise in his play.

Kelleway played a fine century innings, one of the best he has ever played on the Sydney Cricket Ground. Sound to a degree in defence, he made his scoring strokes, especially the drive, more crisply and with much more freedom than heretofore. Kelleway's skill abounds in artificiality. There is little of the natural artistry of some of the greatest batsmen in his play, but his methods are studiously sound, and his skill on that account should both improve in versatility and be very lasting. It is quite in accordance with this view that every season seems to find Kelleway an improved and improving cricketer.

BARBOUR BATS WELL.

So strong in batting did the New South Wales team appear after the marked successes of the early part of the innings that E. P. Barbour to go to the wicket No. 8 did not seem as incongruous as otherwise it might, especially as his immediate predecessors in the order of going in were V. T. Trumper and T. J. E. Andrews. There are so many batsmen in the eleven accustomed to going in first that to fix the order of going in and give equal opportunities to all was well nigh impossible. The University batsman did not start his innings, however, with the confidence of a first-wicket player, but on settling down he played so well as to engender many regrets that circumstances did not permit of his carrying his innings to its natural close. In the matter of achievement, Barbour ranks very high amongst first-class performers, and there was a significant reminder of this in his play on Saturday.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

The batting of A. A. Mailey was a pleasant surprise to many onlookers. Sent in as a stop-gap on Friday afternoon, not only did he successfully fulfil that mission, but on resuming next day for upwards of two hours he defied the efforts of the bowlers to dislodge him. Needless to state, his defence was put to very severe test during that period, but he also made runs by means of some excellent strokes, especially on the off side. He hit nine fours in his total of 66, and he thoroughly deserved his runs. For a player chosen practically entirely for his bowling his display was highly praiseworthy. Moreover, on its merits as a batting performance, it strongly suggests future possibilities.

COMPANIONS IN THE TWENTIES.

T. J. E. Andrews, the newest comer in the home eleven, shaped very nicely, though, perhaps, with a trifle less decision than usual. Several fine leg glances were included amongst his scoring strokes, though it was evidently his desire to get the ball away to the leg side that cost him his wicket with his score standing at 20. He was in the best of company, however, in his dismissal in the twenties, for W. Bardsley and V. T. Trumper were dismissed for 28 and 24 respectively, though they both shaped as if in excellent form. Andrews did a lot of good work in the field, and he might with advantage have been given more opportunities with the ball. He is a fine all-round player in the making.

ARMSTRONG'S BATTING.

After losing the first three wickets for 23 runs, Victoria made a most meritorious recovery, and in the circumstances an extremely good first innings' reply—332—to the huge total of New South Wales. W. W. Armstrong, the biggest contributor to this total, easily played the best cricket. His defence, as usual, seemed impregnable, and although he was satiated with "bosie" bowling, his pet aversion, he was never in any real difficulties, and never appeared to miss an opportunity to deal summarily with the punishable ball. It was somewhat of a surprise, therefore, when within 13 of the century distinction, Massie broke through his defence and rattled the sticks. In 84 minutes the big man made 87 of the 105 runs put on for the fifth wicket.

UTILITARIAN VIRTUES.

T. J. E. Matthews, though but a very small figure in the field, holds a very lively reputation for all-round utility. In the field he is always busy intercepting hard strokes and picking up smartly in all positions. With the ball he has risen to the highest point of brilliance, as when he did the hat trick twice in the one test match against the South Africans at Manchester, but with the bat, though continually doing things of inestimable service to his side, he has not yet attained to personal brilliance. His batting in the first innings was just typical of Matthews. Sent in on Saturday with the record three wickets for 23, Matthews played with the confidence of a man of set purpose. Resuming on Monday, he continued his defensive play first in partnership with Park, then with Armstrong, and finally with Kiernan; in all, he was batting for 3 hours and 10 minutes for 62 runs, almost identically the same time that Macartney had taken in making 201 runs. Matthews, however, is naturally a busy batsman, and a quick scorer, which facts considerably emphasise the great merit of his play on this occasion. Though he made but 62 runs while he was at the wickets, he had the satisfaction of seeing the total advanced from the disastrous three for 23 to the highly creditable 220 for seven, and his share of the credit is a big one.

NEW PLAYERS' DEEDS.

The Victorian eleven contains a very much larger proportion than usual of players comparatively new to Sheffield Shield cricket. It was inevitable, of course, that some would fail, but to R. L. Park, C. Kiernan, and F. Lugton, no small amount of credit must be accorded for their share in the proceedings. Park batted very soundly and stubbornly for 102 minutes, and was eventually out to a very fine catch by Folkard. The University player has done well for Victoria in his previous matches, although on practically every occasion the fight has been an uphill one. This, too, was not an occasion for display, so that in estimating the merit of the various performances the actual number of runs scored assumes a subsidiary importance. Park, in view of subsequent happenings, deserves much credit for his batting; so, too, do Kiernan and Lugton, though there was less of the certainty in their methods than in those of Park. A line of commendation, too, is due to Ryder and Carkeek for putting on 44 runs for the last wicket.

HARD-WON BOWLING SUCCESSES.

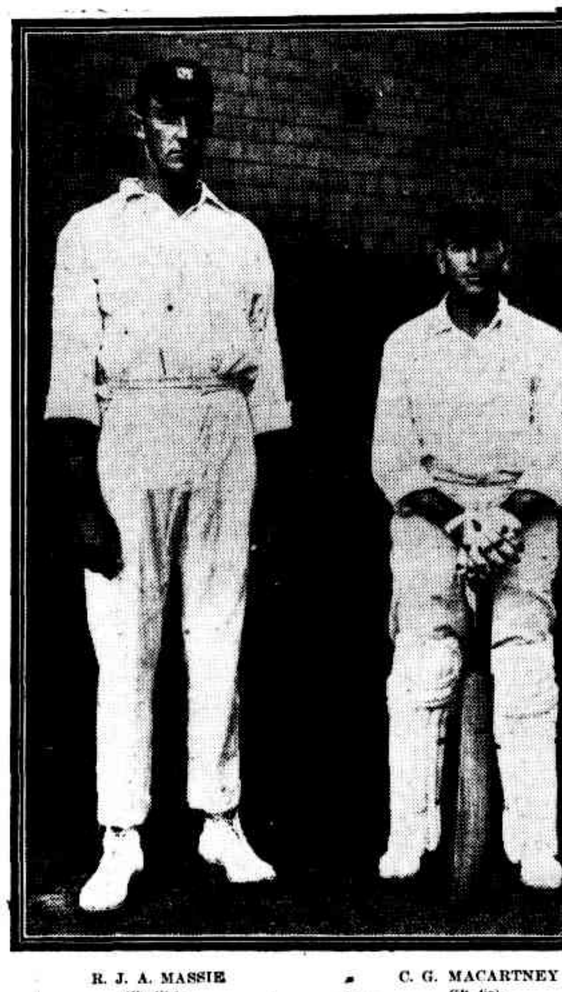

As regards the bowling in the match, with the wicket in such excellent trim and the batsmen showing such fine form, it could only be expected that any statistical successes would have to be hard-won. And so it proved. The chief bowling honours of the first half of the match belong to R. J. A. Massie, but in order to obtain his six successes, he had to send down no fewer than 246 balls. It was a splendid feat of endurance on the part of the University left-hander, and it must be said for him that, notwithstanding the heat of the day, there was always life and danger in his bowling and spirit in his efforts. From 13 of his overs no runs were scored, while from the remainder the batsmen hit 93. Next to the left-hander, Mailey got through the most work with the ball for New South Wales, and, though he was not credited with a wicket, the amount of respect accorded him is reflected in the fact that he bowled 33 overs, 10 of which were maidens, for the comparatively low cost of 67 runs. Kelleway, as usual, kept down the runs. Ten of his 24 overs were maidens, and his record in wickets, two for 31. Folkard bowled 23 overs for 46 runs and one wicket. The position of the game and the consequent defensive play of the visitors, of course, had much to do with the large proportion of maiden overs sent down, which, by any, however, would be taken as evidence of lack of enterprise, to some extent, on the part of the bowlers. The opportunity to experiment was a golden one for the bowlers.

For the visitors the principal wicket-getters, Armstrong (four for 127), and Ryder (two for 163), had to work particularly long and hard for their results. The former bowled 46.2 overs, whilst the latter sent down 52, 14 of which were maidens. Both of these bowlers plugged away with plenty of heart, although Ryder did not appear from the commencement to be as dashing as formerly. It was not a happy occasion, however, for the Victorian attack.

DEPARTURE OF NEW ZEALANDERS.

It is pleasing to know that the New Zealanders, the majority of whom left for home on Saturday, enjoyed their tour of the Commonwealth immensely. The strength of their play, as shown in the various contests, has not disappointed them nor fallen below their expectations; moreover, it is anticipated that the experience of the tour will be most profitable to cricket in the Dominion. We trust that this expectation will be abundantly realised. In the ranks of the New Zealanders there is plenty of promising material, and there seems no reason why in time that promise should not develop into the fruition desired. Another pleasant nature to the New Zealanders is that financially the tour exceeded anticipation, and as a result the manager, Mr. S. A. Orchard, took back with him to hand over to the New Zealand Cricket Council a sum of money that should also materially assist in the development of the game if judiciously applied.

SUCCESSFUL CRICKETERS.

R. J. A. MASSIE (6ft 4½in). C. G. MACARTNEY (5ft 4in).

Macartney's batting in first-class matches this season has been marked by extraordinary brilliancy. He has scored 201, 195, 142, 117 in successive matches on the Sydney Cricket Ground. R. J. A. Massie's left-handed bowling has also been a feature of the season. Massie is one of the tallest and Macartney one of the shortest first-class cricketers in the world.

IN CEYLON.

REV. E. F. WADDY'S TEAM.

TWO VICTORIES AND A DEFEAT.

CEYLON, Jan. 8.

Our first three matches are over, two being won and one lost. The first was against a team fully representative, except for the de Saram brothers, who had signed the manifesto against our visit, and were therefore pledged not to play against us. The scoring was small, 83 and 128 against our 159 and 55 for three wickets. This was mainly due to the large ground, and the heavy outfield, so that in the whole match there were not more than a dozen boundary hits.

The ground is larger than the Sydney Cricket Ground, especially at the corners, and at present is very heavy. The wicket, too, helped the bowlers, for it was of different paces, and the bowlers turned the ball quite a lot. The wickets we have seen so far have a great deal of grass on them, and the soil is sandy. Those on the Nondescript ground have all been ploughed up and remade during the last three months, and are in wonderfully good condition, but they crumble and kick and turn, so that the batsman has to watch the ball very closely, and is rather afraid of making his forward strokes. Probably the majority of our runs will be made by the hitters of the side, though our opponents are content to wait for bad balls.

A. T. Pollocks in the first innings, and S. de Silva in the second, batted well. The latter is a really fine batsman, with good scoring strokes, and impressed us as being the most dangerous of the batsmen we have met. W. de Rosayro is an excellent wicket-keeper, whom the members of the last Australian Eleven will remember. In de Kretser and Horan they have two very fine bowlers. The former is a right-hand medium pace. He takes a run of only a few yards, and keeps an excellent length. The influence of the climate here is very marked on the bowlers; they never take a run of more than a few yards. Horan bowls left hand medium, with a nice easy action, but whips in a fast ball without any exertion; nor does he telegraph its coming to the batsman by a change of delivery. De Kretser's figures for the match were eight for 49 and two for 21, which were just better than Hazlitt's four for 20 and five for 46.

How would the hours of play here suit Australia? Start at 9.30 or 10 a.m., adjourn at 12 for two hours, then on to 6 p.m., with a 15 minutes' interval at 3.45 p.m.

The second match was a picnic game at Galle, against eighteen of the Southern Province. Galle's history dates back thousands of years as it is supposed to be the Tarshish of Scripture. In the seventeenth century the Dutch took Galle from the Portuguese, and built a tremendously strong fort, which still stands. The walls are about 70 feet in thickness, and stand as solid now as the day they were built. A more picturesque cricket ground none of us has seen. With a racecourse round it, about three and a half laps to the mile, the harbour on our side, and the towering walls of the fort, surmounted by a lighthouse and clock tower, overlooking the ground, crowds of natives in all sorts and colours of costumes, it was a sight worth seeing. We won here by 270 to 124, Ebsworth playing a brilliant hitting innings for 97.

After an exciting game, we were defeated in the third match, on the Nondescript Ground. Waddy, who won the toss, was deceived by the look of the wicket, and decided to bat. The wicket proved unplayable, and Horan bowled us out for 109. Ebsworth hit well for 28, while Hall and N. M. Gregg reached double figures. The Ceylonese replied with 133, of which Ahamat made 59 and De Silva 18. Hazlitt bowled really well in this innings. Our second innings was a farce. The pitch was a sand-heap, on which Horan and De Kretser did as they liked. We were all out for 46, of which Ebsworth made 23. The only stroke to play now was a blind hit for the boundary. With only 23 runs to win, the Ceylonese anticipated a ten wickets win. However, Cameron proved as deadly as De Kretser, and the home team had great difficulty in scraping a win by four wickets. Unless a proper pitch be found for the games against All Ceylon, our batsmen will never get an opportunity of showing their true form. At present the bowling and batting averages on both sides stand at about 4.

We will now go up country to Kandy, where we will meet the Planters, after which we will come back to Colombo for the first "All Ceylon" match. The Ceylon side will be a very strong one, as besides the Ceylonese there are Greswell, of Somerset, V. F. S. Crawford, Vidler (of Oxford), Gibson, and other English county players available. We shall need to be in our best form to win.

SCULLING CHAMPIONSHIP.

ALBANY'S CLAIM TO THE TITLE.

William Albany has formally announced that he claims the sculling championship of the world, by reason of the default of Ernest Barry to accept a bona-fide challenge to race for the title and £200 a side stake money. The time for acceptance, so far as is known in Sydney, expired a week ago. Barry state that, in the first place, James Paddon had a prior claim, and in the second place, that the stakes named by Albany were too small for such an important fixture. He regarded Albany's claim for a forfeit as quite a joke, and he evidently meant to treat it as such.

The whole matter hinges on whether Barry is strictly bound by the championship rules. Apparently he regards them as sufficiently elastic to be made to suit the circumstances he has brought about, but as a challenger, Albany prefers to be bound to the strict wording and spirit of the constitution. The "Westminster Gazette," an authority of considerable dignity, sides with Barry; but for the peculiar reason that Albany has done nothing of note since he was defeated by Barry on May Day, 1911, for the championship of England, the "Sportsman" Cup, and £400 stakes. It was a fairly good race for a couple of miles, but while Barry was accepted as a sculler of high class, his rival was considered merely a promising young rower, who had developed no particular virtue save natural strength and grit.

Nearly three years have gone by, and it is but reasonable to credit the new man with having learned how to apply his strength with skill. It may be true he had little knowledge of sculling in 1911, but even if Barry has improved since then, his rival must have done so too, and they are probably more evenly matched now than they were then. No matter how Barry regards the championship rules as some kind of barrier good enough to keep Albany at a distance, yet that greatest court of appeal, public opinion, will eventually bring these two rowers together for a test of merit. We have had many instances where public opinion, which is seldom, if ever, wrong, has straightened out harder problems than that presented by the Albany-Barry matter.

ANGLING.

CORMORANTS V. TROUT.

In recent years attempts have been made at intervals by bird-lovers to impress anglers with the idea that instead of the cormorant being their enemy he is in reality a friend to be welcomed and protected, and not destroyed at sight, as is the case at present. The majority of anglers are lovers of nature and also amateur naturalists in a small way; in their angling trips by river, lake, and sea, they derive nearly, if not quite, as much pleasure from the beauties of nature around them—the birds, insects, flowers, and scenery, etc.—as from the actual sport of fishing, and those men would no more wantonly destroy a beautiful bird than they would throw a plug of dynamite into their favourite pool. The cormorant, or shag, however, much as all may admire his beautiful plumage, and marvel at the rapidity with which he can dart through the water, is outside the pale of the angler's protection. The subject has been discussed so often, and always with the same result, that it seems needless to refer to it again.

Our fisheries experts have for many years advocated the destruction of the cormorant, encouraging it by paying a fee for every shag killed, and we may rest assured that this has not been done without good reason; Government Departments do not part with the limited amount of money at their disposal without going very thoroughly into the pros and cons of the subject, and having arrived unmistakably at the conclusion that the cormorant is a "pest," the call for the destruction of the birds followed in natural order.

Anyone who has watched half a dozen or more cormorants working a shallow reach in one of our trout streams will need no second lesson to convince him of the destructiveness of the shag. It is quite a common occurrence for a flock of 10 or 12 shags to dive almost simultaneously, and evidently on a pre-arranged plan, from a projecting limb into the water, spread out so that, working three or four feet apart, they form a line right across the stream, then systematically drive the fish before them. At intervals they come to the surface, sometimes with a fish in their bill, sometimes without; still, the chase goes on, and probably by the end of the "drive," which may last for a hundred yards or more, every shag in the "school" has secured a trout. If the capture of a trout ended the matter for a few hours it would not be so bad, but, unfortunately, this is not the case. The gastric juices of the cormorant are such that the fish is digested very rapidly, and one may shoot a cormorant that has just been seen to catch a trout, and on cutting it open find that the head of the fish, which was swallowed first, is almost "melted" away, while the hind portion is as fresh looking as when taken from the water. This goes on hour after hour, and the voracious bird will eat nearly, if not quite, his own weight in fish every day.

In the ocean, where pelagic fishes are present in countless millions, sometimes in shoals many acres in extent, a cormorant or a hundred cormorants, would make no appreciable difference, but it is in the rivers, and particularly in those that have been stocked with trout imported at great expense to the country, where the shag is doing incalculable injury. In the Snowy River this season a great many of the trout caught by anglers have been "shag-marked," some of the fish weighing as much as 2lb having great wounds or cicatrices on each side showing how they had struggled from the grip of the savage beak, being too large or too powerful for the bird to manage.

All birds are beautiful, from the house-sparrow to the eagle, and, naturally enough, all are sacred to those who make "bird life" their pet hobby, but when anyone tries to persuade the angler that the cormorant is his friend, he is up against as tough a proposition as trying to convince a "bird man" that a tiger snake or a death-adder would be found a most desirable tent-mate on a camping holiday.

GREAT NORTHERN TRIAL.

The Sydney competitors who took part in the Great Northern Motor Cycle Club's open reliability trial, which was held in the Newcastle district on Monday, report having spent a most enjoyable and interesting holiday—if such the few days' sojourn, in company with their northern clubmates, might be called. The hon. secretary of the Motor Cycle Club of New South Wales, Mr. J. A. Fair, who, riding a 6 h.p. Zenith machine, was unofficially bracketed first in the competition along with Messrs. L. Firth ($3\frac{1}{2}$ h.p. Bradbury) of the Great Northern M.C.C., and F. Meller ($2\frac{3}{4}$ h.p. Douglas), of the M.C.C. N.S.W., states that this trial was of only secondary importance to his club's annual interstate contest between Sydney and Melbourne. The arrangements were excellently carried out, and the hospitality extended to the visiting members of the Metropolitan bodies by the northern clubmen was of the most cordial nature.

The contest was held over a distance of 117 miles, which embraced Stroud (50 miles), Dungog (67 miles), Patterson (78 miles), West Maitland (99 miles), and finished at the starting point, near Newcastle. An average speed of 20 miles per hour had to be maintained throughout the run, and the competitors who arrived at the several controls dead on time were penalised only for mechanical troubles. In the event of tyre mishaps, the time lost in effecting the repair, of course, had to be made up before the control was reached. A secret check also was in operation.

Thirty-six competitors started, including members of the Great Northern, Hunter River District, Maitland, Canberra, and Motor Cycle Clubs. The first section covered was in fair order, until within a few miles of Stroud, where the roads were treacherous, and in places covered with sand at least a foot deep. The roads were passably good through Dungog, Patterson, and West Maitland. The majority of the competitors lost time descending the steep mountain near Dungog, as the utmost care had to be exercised when negotiating the awkward turns. Throughout the day, the riders found the extreme heat somewhat trying, and, in addition, many had more or less serious spills and attendant tyre troubles. The trial will most assuredly be well patronised next season, Mr. Fair added.

MOTOR CYCLE CLUB.

The ninth annual meeting of the Motor Cycle Club of New South Wales will be held at the club rooms to-morrow evening at 7.45 o'clock. From all accounts, the hon. secretary's report will show that great progress has been made during the year, while the hon. treasurer will also have a pleasant task before him. There are at least a dozen names nominated for the new committee, for which five only are required.

On February 1, the club will hold a novel all-day run for members, whose machines are equipped with side cars. A hill-climbing contest has also been arranged for an early date.

BOOM IN QUEENSLAND.

NEW LEAGUE FORMED.

From Bundaberg, Queensland, Mr. E. H. ("Teddy") Rodgers, the popular Emmaville rider, has forwarded a glowing account of the prospects of league cycling in the northern State. Rodgers competed unsuccessfully at the Bundaberg meeting, but he states that this is now undoubtedly the best country carnival in Australia. The cash prizes amounted to £95. The Caledonian Society, which promoted the sports, however, refused to run the events under the auspices of the League of Queensland Wheelmen. In point of fact, there appears to be a good deal of dissatisfaction among the Queensland riders, and a new league, called the Wide Bay and Burnett District League, has been formed. At the present time a requisition is being signed by the racing members of the Q.L.W. to have this body directly affiliated with the Australian Federal Cycling Council. There are now over 60 members of the new league, and while Bundaberg has more active cyclists than the rest of Queensland together, Rodgers is of the opinion that in the interests of the sport affiliation should be granted. A meeting under the rules has been registered for March 17 at Bundaberg, and it is expected that a similar carnival will be held at Maryborough.

The Emmaville rider has been detained in Bundaberg by the local enthusiasts to go into the matter of reconstructing the existing five-lap track, which, it appears, has a good surface, but is only banked 1ft 6in. It is proposed to both widen and bank the track before March 17. In the event of this work being done, a local syndicate proposes to run a 24 or 48 hours' teams race at Easter. Following these Bundaberg events there is an eight-hours carnival to be held at Maryborough on the first Monday in May, to be followed at intervals of a week by eight-hour meetings at Bundaberg and Gympie. At each of these carnivals there is a £20 wheel-race. A carnival at Rockhampton is announced for June.

"Hundreds of enthusiasts attend the cycling grounds daily," concludes Rodgers, "and with a little coaching some champions will surely be developed from among the boys who are training right through."

THE L.N.S.W.W. AND THE A.F.C.C.

The position taken by the council of the League of N.S.W. Wheelmen in regard to the payment of its outstanding affiliation fees to the Australian Federal Cycling Council is incomprehensible to Mr. Robert McCullagh, secretary of the latter body, which, as is well known, was formed in 1901, with the object of controlling professional cycling throughout Australasia. Mr. McCullagh states that it is only through the press that he is aware of any "differences" between the L.N.S.W.W. and the Federal Council. The council of the N.S.W. body, he says, appears to be labouring under the impression that it can claim all the advantages and protection that the Federal Council is capable if giving without paying the fees necessary to entitle it to such privileges. The League of N.S.W.W., on the other hand, while not wishing to openly flout the Federal Council, considers that a statement showing in what manner the affiliation fees already subscribed have been disbursed, if at all, is due to it before the arrears, which, in point of fact, amount only to a trifling sum, are paid up. As far as can be gathered from the league secretary, this is the only cause of complaint, and so far ther is no open rupture between the bodies.

AUSTRALASIAN ATHLETES.

PROMISING PERFORMANCES.

The Victorian Athletic Association gained a deserved victory in the Australian championships held in Melbourne on Saturday and Monday last. Leading by three wins at the close of the first day, they ultimately won the title by six events to five, gained by the New South Wales team, the holders of the title (New Zealand) having to be content with third place. The most satisfactory feature of the meeting, however, was the splendid form displayed generally by the competitors. No fewer than four Victorian records were bettered on the opening day, and Watson's performance of 1m $56\frac{3}{5}$s in the half-mile shows that Australia possesses a runner capable of putting up a really great performance.

In looking forward to the Olympic Games, the form of such men as the champion and Thorpe, who finished second in both the half-mile and mile events, gives great hope for our middle-distance representation at Berlin. In the sprints, also, Burton and Bradley showed promise, which, in two years' time, may develop into performances good enough to challenge those of the great sprinters of other nations. Over the hurdles the contests were very spectacular, and Wallman's advent to championship honours brought new figures. G. P. Keddell figured in second place in both the hurdles events, and he is undoubtedly a first-class performer in this branch of athletics.

Taken all through, when it is considered that the training, coaching, and other facilities are not as good as in other countries, where cinder tracks obtain, the showing of Australasia's athletes demonstrates very clearly that there is an improvement in the general standard which augurs well for the future. The number of star performers was greater than at previous meetings, and the records were bettered in some cases in the face of a strong wind.

In the field-sports, however, Australia has not reached international standard. The visitor Caughey, although shorter in stature, is able to give away inches to our men in the shot putt. Still, the hammer-throw produces new figures for Australia, yet this is not good enough. The Americans figured prominently, winning five events and tying for one other.

MAINTENANCE COSTS.

POINTS OF ECONOMY.

The praiseworthy record of motoring costs compiled by Mr. A. E. Heziet and published in last Wednesday's "Herald," has aroused considerable interest among motorists in the State, and has also been the means of inducing Mr. Fred Walsh, a committee man of the Automobile Club of Australia, to supply some valuable information which he has acquired during the progress of a long motoring career.

Mr. Walsh was bewailing the fact that he was the only motorist who had taken the trouble to keep an accurate record, but he states, on the other hand, that it pays over and over again for the expenditure of force and insistence necessary. In the course of six years Mr. Walsh has experimented with three cars, and an accurate log has been kept during the whole of this lengthy period. The first car, which was bought specially for experience, was an English machine of 16/24-h.p., weighing 24cwt. The second was a continental machine of comparatively small horse-power, weighing about 18cwt. This car ran 24 to 33 miles on a gallon of fuel, and, apart from depreciation, the net cost per mile run amounted to 5d on a total of 4500 miles during a period of 12 months. The repairs amounted to $5\frac{1}{2}$d per mile, while the depreciation was 1s $2\frac{1}{2}$d per mile. The third car, an American machine, which is giving great satisfaction, weighs 20cwt. With four passengers aboard an average of 21 to 27 miles per gallon of petrol is obtained. In three months the car has been driven 2000 miles, and, leaving aside depreciation and taking the life of the tyres at 3000 miles, the net cost per mile does not amount to 9d. Mr. Walsh has kept this record with great exactitude, every trip is logged, and against each the actual amount of petrol consumed on the journey is recorded.

One of the benefits of logging every trip, Mr. Walsh points out, is the revelation of any leakage on the part of that slim customer petrol. Mr. Hezlet's average of 14.49 miles per gallon is looked upon as being most unsatisfactory. With a 15-20 h.p. car, the petrol bill should be at least 25 per cent. less, and there is every indication that the carburetter is right out of adjustment. There are other items, too, which apear to be unduly inflating the cost of maintenance of Mr. Hezlits car, says Mr. Walsh. The chauffeur is a long way too expensive. When a gentleman sets up a buggy or carriage and pair he does not seek a veterinary surgeon to occupy the box seat. He usually gets a man who can feed and rub down the animals and handle them capably in traffic. And the same, Mr. Walsh considers, should apply to the pleasure car driver. The owner of a modern car really requires his chauffeur or driver to possess no greater skill than a competent coachman. It would be found much cheaper in the long run to employ a chauffeur who is a capable driver and who can "log" the runs and who knows enough to keep his hands off the mechanism. The place for "skilled" labour is in the workshop or garage. It is the so-called "skilled" chauffeur who, as a rule, lands the car in the repair shop and keeps it out of running order half its time. There are exceptions to this class, says Mr. Walsh, but they are rare and rarer still without joy-running propensities.

In theses days of good mechanical cars, whose mechanism will remain in perfect adjustment and repair so long as reasonable care and attention to lubrication is displayed, the driver who "can effect all running repairs" is no longer wanted, but Mr. Walsh considers that there is an opening for a class of men who may be aptly termed "car doctors." It would pay the insurance companies to retain such practitioners, or it might come within the province of the automobile club to employ a man for this work among the big fleet of cars belonging to its members, who is efficient, impartial, and well paid. In these circumstances, when the mechanism of a car was "out of sorts," it would be examined by the "cardoc" and his prescription could be accurately dispensed by any competent engineering firm. If the insurance companies insisted upon a, say, quarterly examination of their risks, their disbursements would be considerably reduced, and, again, if the Traffic Department insisted upon a certificate such as the Navigation Department requires, then the days of inflated "skilled" labour would soon pass, and the era of competency arrive.

"But all pleasure car owners, and, in fact, every automobilist," concludes Mr. Walsh, "should keep a log of his car's doings, and the performance of every tyre and tube used. In this manner, not only will he reduce his own expenditure, but will be in the happy position of being able to offer his experiences to others, and finding for the builder and inventor in which direction improvement is most needed."

ROWING.

THE PENNANTS' CONTESTS.

An interesting struggle still continues amongst those of the associated clubs who are in the "running" for the premiership. The honor is a much-coveted one, as although it is only represented by a "bit of blue bunting," it is the envy of the clubs from season to season, and the pride of members is great when victory come their way, and the colours wave in the breeze over their club houses.

It was thought that the Anniversary Regatta, which was held on Monday, would go a long way towards settling the destiny of both the senior and junior premiership pennants, but that was not so. The regatta brought a lot of surprises, and some back numbers came to the front which made little difference to the positions of the clubs leading in the competition.

The old "red and white bars," under new conditions, made their first appearance this season in the senior division, and secured a brilliant win in the senior fours, which was the "star" event of the day. Mr. Geo. Gunning, who coached the Mosman crew, deserves some praise, as he succeeded in smoothing off many rough corners which were visible some weeks ago. The men were on their home waters, and revelled in the "choppy stuff," which seemed to frighten the majority of the other crews. The fine win gave the Mosman members courage, and their junior four came out and annexed their race after a fine contest.

It was the unexpected that happened in the big race. The Enterprise crew were disabled by losing a man at the last moment, and Leichhardt performed badly, this, perhaps, being due to the fact that they were rowing in a boat half full of water, the result of a collision. Balmain No. 2 crew beat the No. 1 crew.

The "Maroons" and "Black and White Bars" scored successes in the Maiden Races, but the luck of the day was against Leichhardt, who supplied some very neat crews.

The North Shore Club, who are not often seen on the starting line now, seemed to have had a mortgage on the Gladstone Skiffs event. They had no fewer than five starters, and secured first, second, and third places.

The weather was ideal from a rowing man's point of view. There was a light north-easter blowing across the course. All the races were started in smooth water, but here and there in exposed parts the water became a little disconcerting, especially to the scullers. Nearly all the racing boats came prepared for the worst, and carried splash-boards, but they were not required, and everything passed off without a hitch. One enthusiast was heard to say that it reminded him of "old times."

There yet remains three regattas to be held before the season closes. Each one is catering for the senior oarsmen. Interest in the sport is being well maintained, and, as was the case last year, the closing of the season will be full of excitement.

Leichhardt Rowing Club regatta, to be held on February 7, is being looked forward to. The arrangements are almost complete, and a big success is anticipated. The Enterprise club's annual function will follow on February 21, when a very attractive programme will be presented.

It is interesting to note that neither Leichhardt nor Enterprise will hold their regatta on the Leichhardt Canal. This is contrary to expectations, as both clubs are in the neighbourhood. In commenting on the suitability of the canal for regatta purposes, we pointed out that it would only be possible to use it on occasions when the tide was high. It would seem now that the Balmain Club, which held a successful regatta this season on the "canal," secured the only date in the season when the tide was suitable at a time when the races would be held. This seems to explain the reason why both Leichhardt and Enterprise clubs will hold their races over the Iron Cove course.

The St. Ignatius College authorities will hold their popular regatta on Lane Cove early in March. Among the races open for competition will be the senior eights over a mile course. As a rule it is a fine race, and is always looked forward to by rowing men.

FURLONG SWIMMING.

IS THE CRAWL SUPERIOR TO THE TRUDGEON?

NEXT SATURDAY'S CONTEST.

The probability of either W. Longworth or C. Healy making fresh figures for the 220 yards swimming championship of Australia at next Saturday's carnival, to be held in the Domain baths, makes it opportune for a review of the great performances over this distance. At present the figures are as follow for the three most prominent swimming countries:—

England: 2m 28 3-5s, by F. C. V. Lane (Australia), August 18, 1902.

Australia: 2m 28 2-5s, by B. B. Kieran (N.S.W.), December 6, 1905; 2m 28 2-5s, by F. de Beaurepaire (Vic.), February 2, 1909.

America: 2m 25 2-5s, by C. M. Daniels (New York), March 26, 1909.

The lastmentioned time is the world's record. All the above performances were put up in indoor baths. Daniels' swim was accomplished at Pittsburg in a tank 26 yards 2 feet long, which necessitated eight turns. Lane defeated R. Cavill and R. Derbyshire at Weston Super-Mare in a 33 1-3 yards bath, so that he had the advantage of six turns. Kieran gained the Australian record at Booroodabin baths, Brisbane, in his final racing effort, as he was taken to a hospital next day and died a few days later. Beaurepaire equalled Kieran's time at the City baths, Melbourne, and in both cases the six turns were necessary as the baths are 33 1-3 yards in length.

Now, so far as Australians are concerned, it is rather remarkable that the figures have been registered by means of the trudgeon stroke, and have remained on the book, despite several attacks by exponents of the crawl stroke. Is the older method of propulsion speedier over this distance than the generally recognised more serviceable stroke? It would appear that it is not. For instance, Daniels, whose figures are three seconds better than those put up by the Australians, saves the reputation of the crawl stroke. Even in the long 110 yards laps of the Domain Baths Longworth registered faster time than the record—2m 27 2-5s—when he won the 220 Yards Championship of the State in 1912. However, he left the starting board so smartly on that occasion that the starter, Mr. A. W. Griffith, refused to give a certificate that the start was fair, which was necessary before the record could be passed. The gain, if any, was very slight, so that the champion showed that if he is asked to do his best over the distance, new Australian figures will be created. Healy has covered the furlong on several occasions in 2m 29s, and it was his presence on the above occasion that made Longworth do such excellent time. On Saturday he should be able to again push the Rose Bay crack to his best effort, and, although there will be only one turn, Longworth should excel the figures put up by the famous trudgeon men in the short baths.

FAMOUS CRICKET GROUND.

THE WANDERERS' CLUB.

If the newcomer to Johannesburg is a cricketer he will turn his footsteps to the Wanderers' ground, and will there see perhaps the most wonderful cricket ground in the world. How many acres the ground is, one cannot say, but there is room for three very large cricket areas, another smaller ground, with running and cycle tracks and about 15 tennis courts, in addition spacious stands. The site on which these grounds are situated is legally named Kruger Park, though it is popularly called "The Wanderers." Twenty-five years ago the late Paul Kruger, then President of the S. A. Republic, handed these grounds over to the Wanderers and Pirates Clubs on a 99 years' lease at the nominal annual rental of £50, under certain minor conditions. Subsequently the Pirates Club became insolvent, or very nearly so, and they ceded their portion of the area to the Wanderers, who now enjoy a sporting monopoly in Johannesburg.

The playing area is on red sandstone rock—level as a billiard table. The pitch is of the same substance, but is treated to prevent it crumbling. Prior to a match the pitch is rolled, but the rest of the ground is kept in condition by the simple expedient of dragging old cocoanut matting over it. This has the effect of filling up any holes, for though the surface is hard, it quickly crumbles, and there is usually a thin layer of dust on the top. One has seen water covering the whole ground inches deep, yet in a couple of hours, save for an odd corner, the whole area has been fit for play, so quickly does it drain and dry. During matches the pitch is, of course, covered with the cocoanut matting used on all grounds in South Africa. This matting does not extend over the popping crease, but ends from two to six inches from it, so that there is little possibility of a bowler tripping.

The stand accommodation on the main ground is somewhat limited. The principal stand is reserved for members of the Wanderers Club, and seats about a thousand, while the public stands will hold from two to three thousand, but the occasions on which they are all filled are rare. There is in addition seating accommodation in the open for those who do not care to pay for shelter, but, taken altogether, the arrangements for the comfort of spectators are primitive, and will not bear comparison with the principal grounds of England and Australia. It is the character of the soil—if such it can be described—and its wonderful drying properties, and the pace at which the ball travels to the boundary which marks the Wanderers' for distinction when compared with other well-known cricket grounds.

OLYMPIC GAMES.

LOCAL NOTES.

Matters are well in hand in connection with the cyclists' Olympic gathering to be held on the Sydney Sports' Ground on February 23. Mr. G. W. Liggins, hon. secretary of the Cyclists' Union, has arranged a splendid programme of events, while the Sydney Sports' Ground trustees are assisting materially by granting the use of their ground free. Everything points to a very successful function.

One of the gratifying features of the conference held in Melbourne last Friday, at which delegates from all the States and New Zealand attended, was the decision that an Olympic federation of Australia and New Zealand be formed, and, further, that the subscribers to the Olympic fund in each State and Dominion shall be directly represented on the governing council. The Olympic council in each State or Dominion will also be represented by two delegates, so that the full council will consist of 21—i.e., if New Zealand agrees to join the federation. It was a happy thought to extend the privilege of representation to subscribers. As the federated council will deal with all matters of selection, management, etc., it is certainly a most important body, and the representation of each State will constitute a high honour. A meeting of the fund committee will be held to-morrow in connection with the final preparations to be made for the opening of the fund on February 1.

The Lady Mayoress of Sydney has written to the fund committee stating that she will be pleased to do what she can to assist the grand Olympic ball to be held in the Town Hall during May, and will shortly convene a meeting of ladies in connection with the matter.

WOMEN AS JOURNALISTS.

"It is only within the last 25 years that women have entered journalism in America," said Professor Williams, of the School of Journalism in Missouri. "Indeed, it is only within the last 10 years that they have been taken really seriously in journalism. But now I think it is safe to say that they have arrived.

"There are still a few Conservative papers that will not admit women to their staffs, but in the majority of newspaper offices in America you will find women working side by side with men, doing the same work and receiving the same acknowledgment. For it is becoming more and more generally recognised that a newspaper is like the world—it takes both men and women to run it. No doubt a world entirely managed by men would be much more successful. Faultily faultless, you think? Perhaps so. Anyhow, until the millennium arrives women will play their part in running the world, and it seems to be the arrangement that gives the most general satisfaction. And so it is on a newspaper. The woman's point of view helps to broaden the scope and interest of a paper, so that it appeals to a wider circle of readers.

"For it is not only as the writers of special 'woman's' columns that women are engaged in America. Many women are on the general staffs of their papers; they do their share of the reporting, and sometimes write the leaders. On one paper in a big city a woman, who was one of our students, is the senior reporter. She does the same work and receives the same pay as a man would do in the same position. At first when women entered into journalism they relied on their sex to help them; but they soon discovered that if they wished to make good they must depend upon nothing but their work, and now it is only the quality of the work that counts, and men and women writers are all on the same plane. Of course it is a much more satisfactory state of affairs for all.

"In our University about 15 per cent. of the students are women. And I have noticed that, as a rule, they can be divided into two groups, the very good and the very bad. Some of our women students are always at the top. They are the born journalists—the women with literary taste, with imagination, quick perception, and a talent for hard work. These are the women who succeed, and who hold their own with the men of the profession. On the other hand, there are the women who think they would like to be journalists because it's fun, or because it's an easy and pleasant way of earning a living. They never do much, these women, because, as you know, journalism is a thorny path to tread, and not for those who are afraid of work. As a rule, when these students come to us the first thing they want to do is to write a story! It seems so easy! They don't want any of the drudgery of experience, they want to begin at the top. I ask them sometimes if they would expect to paint a picture without learning to draw, or to play a nocturne without first learning their notes. They do not realise all that goes to the making of a journalist—all the years of steady work and the gradual gaining of experience.

"I should say that the first essentials for a successful journalist are imagination, truth, and knowledge, and the greatest of these is imagination. For imagination is inborn, while truth can be acquired, and knowledge comes from study and experience. And it is extraordinary how one's knowledge proves valuable in journalism. It doesn't matter how odd or unusual it may be, there always seems to come a time when stray bits of learning are helpful. So a journalist should aim first at having as wide a knowledge as possible, and then at knowing as much as possible about one particular subject. For the specialist is always valuable on a paper—provided he or she has general knowledge too. For instance, the woman who I told you is senior reporter on her paper has specialised in aviation, and when there were big aviation flights in her country she was sent to write them up. I know of an instance where a young man who had lived in Italy had made a special study of the history of the Roman Catholic Church. It did not seem a very valuable asset on a newspaper, but when Pope Leo died his special knowledge gave him his chance, and he made a name for himself by his work. But the specialist is of little use unless he knows how to express his knowledge in a readable way.

"Someone has said that a journalist should have enough truth to balance his imagination, not to hamper it. And there's a good deal of wisdom in that saying. Do you know who is the greatest of all journalists? Luke. His story of the Gospel is the most beautiful of all, yet it was written from hearsay. I tell my students to read the Gospel according to Saint Luke through from beginning to end, and back again from end to beginning, for in it they will find the journalistic art at its highest, and it is the work of a man of imagination.

"You know the great stories in journalism are nearly always written from hearsay. You can arrange for a reporter to be at Parliament or at a meeting, but you cannot arrange for him to be on the spot for the big human events that come unexpectedly. Sometimes he happens to be there, as in the burning of the Volturno, but, as a rule, he hears the story from others, and his capacity to write the story graphically and show the picture to his readers depends upon his power to imagine the scene for himself. A journalist won't go far without imagination, but he must have enough knowledge of facts and regard for truth to prevent his imagination running away with him.

"As a rule women have imagination, quick sympathy, and a capacity for detail, and so, given equal chances, they hold their own in journalism in America."

THOMAS HARDY AND THE CAPTIVE CREATURES.

Mr. Thomas Hardy, England's greatest living novelist, has been writing to the "Times" in support of the agitation against the employment of performing animals, and he adds a protest against the confinement of wild birds in cages. He says:—"Quite possibly some animals may be and are trained for performances without discomfort to themselves, but there is ample evidence to show that many trainers prefer short cuts to attain their ends, and that these short cuts are by the way of cruelty.

"As to the caging of birds, the assertion that a caged skylark experiences none of the misery of a caged man makes demands upon our credulity. Anyhow, a caged skylark usually dies soon, while an imprisoned man will live out his natural years. There is, or was, when I was young, a practice among boys of putting a nearly-fledged brood of young birds, with the nest, into a cage, and hanging the cage into the tree or bush where the nest was made. Their parents come regularly to feed their young ones through the bars, and there seems no reason why they should not be successfully bred; but usually the young birds die. It used to be the tradition of schoolboys that the old birds poisoned their young at finding them imprisoned. However that may be, die they did.

"It seems marvellous that the twentieth century, with all its rhetoric on morality, should tolerate such useless inflictions as making animals do what is unnatural to them, or drag out an unnatural life in a wired cage."

MELBOURNE NOTES.

The "Loan Exhibition" to be opened at Federal Government House in April is beginning to take on shape and form. Owners of old silver, furniture, etc., are asked to co-operate in making the exhibition a success by lending their treasures. Every care will be taken of the exhibits. They will be collected, packed, and returned by experienced men, and will also be insured against fire, accident, or theft. It has been decided to show old costumes as well as house furnishings, and for this section 18th century garments are preferred. Already some garments worn by Beau Brummel have been promised, the owner of the interesting clothing being a descendant of this dandy of a bygone period. Miss Chomley, the hon. organising secretary, has discovered that there are more treasures (ancient) in Melbourne than one would imagine, and owners are most generous in offering to lend them. Anyone willing to place articles on loan will obtain full particulars by applying to the hon. secretary, Bruce-street, Toorak.

A hostel for women students is a long-felt want here, and with the object of providing such an establishment, graduates and undergraduates instituted the Queen's Hall Fund. The site for the proposed hostel has been promised by the Queen's College Council, but the sum of £3000 is also needed. By the Chaucer pageant, which inaugurated this movement last April, the promoters placed to their credit over £700. A similar effort is proposed to be made in May to take the form of a pageant of the ancient nations.

The summer school in household science held at Bacchus Marsh (about 28 miles from Melbourne) by the College of Domestic Economy was very successful. The attendance at the classes and at the evening lectures was very satisfactory. The housewives' class was attended every afternoon by about 70 women. There were three main classes. One was for housewives, who were given demonstrations in cookery and laundry work; another for girls, who received instruction in the same subjects; and a third for boys, who were taught the art of camp cookery. Competitions were held, and competitors prepared dishes on the methods suggested in the course of the day's demonstration. Prizes were awarded on the highest marks. Mr. F. Tate, the Director of Education, visited the school, and expressed the opinion that it might be imitated with advantage in other centres. Dr. Constance Ellis, Dr. Janet Greig, Miss Pye, and Professor Osborne delivered appropriate lectures in the evenings. That the school was practically self-supporting is a matter of congratulation to the promoters.

Madame Homery, wife of M. Jules Homery, who has succeeded Mr. G. Pigeonneau as French Consul, is likely to become popular in the social world here. In the space of her married life she has seen something of many countries. Her husband's official duties have brought him from Egypt to India and from Germany to New York. For the last two years he has been attached to the French Consulate at St. Johns, Newfoundland.

The Minister for Public Health was recently waited upon by a deputation from the Women's Hospital to urge that the Government introduce a bill dealing with the examination and registration of midwives. It was intimated that the matter would be dealt with next session.

PENELOPE'S WEEKLY NOTES.

CURRENT PRICES.

There is very little variety in the actual meat one may have; it has of necessity to be either beef, mutton, veal, lamb, or pork, which last, though it may have much to commend it in a cold climate, is certainly not one of our most suitable summer goods. Consequently we find ourselves restricted to four varieties of meat. Yet again, and fortunately for us, these four varieties consist of so many what we may call sub-varieties that no limit need be placed to the changes we may ring in the meat course of our menu. The price of meat we find it subject to few of the fluctuations that affect our fruit and vegetable markets.

In seasons of drought, or when a kind Arbitration Court awards higher wages to those in the meat industry, we pay a penny or so a pound dearer for our meat. But whatsoever height prices have reached has been reached by such slow gradations that our nerves have been spared shocks. Moreover, meat is not "up" to-day, and "down" to-morrow, as are, we will say, cabbages.

And yet the price of meat varies in a startling way—just according to the locality of the butcher's shop. A fine (and fashionable) city butcher, for instance, quotes short-loin chops at 9d a lb (three chops to a pound). And an excellent butcher in a very popular suburb quotes the identical article at 6d a lb. In the former case, one carries one's meat home in as comely a coat of brown paper as one may; in the latter it arrives at one's back door in white paper in a butcher's cart. Pondering upon these contrarities, I made inquiries about beef—sirloin. The first-named butcher quotes it at 4½d a lb; the last-named at 6d. One finds it difficult to understand these irregularities, and the bewildered housekeeper may well ask herself if to be economical she must buy her beef in one quarter of the town and her mutton in another. At present there is talk of a possible advance of ½d or 1d a lb in the price of all meat.

Ribs of beef—which many of us regard as sirloin's poor cousin—is 4d or 5d a lb. Well-cooked and pressed it makes an excellent dish, particularly if served with a salad. Corned beef is 4d and 4½d a lb, and the steaks run from 4d to 11d, fillet steak being the dearest, and rump—9d a lb—not very far behind. Skirt steak is one of the best possible steaks for the making of a meat pudding or pie, as it yields so much rich gravy, and is so tender when properly cooked. Price, 4½d to 5d.

In mutton, the price quoted is—for the leg, 4½d a lb; for the neck, 3½d and 5d; cutlets, 6d a lb. Cutlets come to us shorn of much waste material, it must be remembered, and compare favourable in this respect with what are called "chump" chops, though some butchers sell them at four to the lb, regardless of weight. There still remain many other "cuts" to consider of both beef and mutton. Indeed, confronted with a butcher's "price list," one is amazed to find what a variety of "cuts" there are. They must await a later date for consideration in deference to those other subjects, fruit and vegetables.

Fruit appears rather less plentiful this week, or, to be more strictly correct, many kinds of fruit appear to be less plentiful. Melons abound. Delicious rock-melons at 8d, 9d, and 1s each; small ones at 3d. Large ripe water-melons at 9d and 1s. Peaches, good at 6d a dozen, excellent at 2s 6d (as, indeed, they should be); Muscatel grapes, at 9d a pound, less good at 6d; large bananas at 9d and 1s a dozen; and lemons at 1½d each. Oranges, good enough to be garbed in white tissue paper are 2s a dozen; poor shabby-looking oranges huddled all together, 6d. Apples may be had for 3d a dozen; but at that price there is little of them but core and skin: at 1s 6d a dozen they are rosy and tempting. Pineapples remain exceedingly common, 4d, 5d, 6d each. The present appears to be an opportune time for the making of pine and melon jam.

There are peas and peas. "Those," said the greengrocer, with withering scorn, "are 1s 3d a peck. Yes, they are peas. I have others, beautiful peas, fresh, green, young, for 2s 6d a peck." French beans are 2s and not equal in my thinking to those we paid 10d for a few weeks ago. Cabbages are a "glut" in the market, and may be bought for 4d apiece. Water-cress, beetroot, celery, radishes, lettuce are all to be bought very cheaply (2d and 3d for a good bunch). This is well, for we are indeed in the midst of our salad days, and require these things as much or more than beef and mutton.

FASHION AS SHE IS.

It is quite an acknowledged fact that dress at the present moment is inclined to be rather sumptuous. Among the many articles of dress come the boudoir jackets and caps, which are things of loveliness. The little jackets may be made of soft silks, muslins, voiles, net, etc. They are daintily trimmed with the finest of laces and insertions, a touch of colour being given to the all-white ones by coloured ribbons and bows.

A rather elaborate jacket was in a delightful purple chiffon, mounted over a delicate shade of flesh pink ninon. Soft ivory-coloured Malines lace and insertion helped to trim this fascinating little garment. A charming little boudoir cap, fashioned in pink ninon, and decorated with the soft lace and insertion to match the coat, was finished with purple ribbon brought through fine beading of the lace. A loosely-tied bow on the side of the cap completed a most becoming negligee.

The simpler little boudoir jackets and caps are as charming and becoming as the very dressy ones; indeed, most women prefer them, for they will wash, which is an added attraction to any garment in summer time. Fine white pin-spotted muslin, with a trimming of Valenciennes lace and insertion, and finished with pale pink or pale blue satin ribbon, makes just as delightful a negligee as one could have. The little cap, worn with such a jacket, is also carried out in the pin-spotted muslin, with trimmings of lace and insertion of fine Valenciennes, the ribbons corresponding with those on the jacket.

Ivory net lace is very dainty for these becoming caps. Some of these little negligee caps vary in shape. In some instances the lace edging is longer at the back, falling in a sort of cascade on the neck. Others are like a Neapolitan cap in shape. They may also be seen made of fine, filmy ivory lace, the shaping to the head being concealed beneath a deft arrangement of pale blue or any other dainty coloured ribbon.

The tea gown is another negligee garment which has come back into favour. Most of the triumphs of these gowns owe their success to the beauty of line, not to mention the daintiness which in a way may well be compared to the daintiness of a baby's robe. Lace and insertion also play a great part in the decoration of these gowns. Fichus of soft shadow lace may be seen trimming some of them, and in some instances this fichu seems to merge into a collar shape at the back. The very wide frills of the softest lace fall away at the elbow, showing the bare arm. Soft mull muslins, silks, voiles, etc, are the most favoured materials for the making of these dainty garments. Coloured ribbons are also a feature where the trimming is concerned. For the colder days we shall see the much-liked black velvet playing a part where these negligee gowns are in question. (It seems ridiculous to talk about cold days yet, but one must be prepared.) For a blonde nothing is more charming than this becoming fabric. These velvet tea or negligee gowns are quite simple in line. In some instances they are buttoned in a bias line from the front of the corsage to the bottom of the pipe on the left. The corsage is charmingly decorated with a creamy finely-woven lace collar, which is hemmed with black tulle; one side of the collar is drawn through the velvet in front. The sleeves are elbow length, and are turned back, little kilted frills of the soft lace showing underneath.

I noticed some of the shops are somewhat early with their new autumn hats. Most of them are charming, and any one who is somewhat pessimistic about the present day style of hat, will find their views on the subject gradually melting away. We shall see a great many black velvet hats; in fact, this craze is in the ascendant, for the becomingness of this headgear cannot be possibly disputed. It really seems somewhat out of place, to be discussing black velvet hats, when in reality we are nearly collapsing with the heat, but such is the tyranny of Madame la Mode, and most of us are slaves to her whims.

As I mentioned before, velvet takes precedence, where hats are concerned. We shall see the soft Tam-o'-Shanter, with the brim softly lifted on one side. The close-fitting little turban shaped hat will also be in evidence.

The tall palm-tree feathers, in black or white, are also a conspicuous feature, where the trimming of some of these hats is concerned.

A quaint little black velvet in a sailor's shape was decorated with stiff frills of black Petersham. These frills were all round the brim, but they were quite firm enough to hold a veil, which is rather a difficult matter where the tulle hat is concerned. Some of the little hats in rather oblong shape have a tiny black or white stiff mount on the brim at the back. This forms the sole trimming. It certainly sounds rather unique, but then the more uncommon our hats are the more they suit the order of the day.

Velvet butterflies, decorated with embroideries, are also used for millinery purposes. Chantilly and shadow laces are pleated into frills, in some instances the lace is stiffly wired, and the brim stands in a perfectly upright direction. The crown is of the much-favoured black velvet. These hats are really very trying. The wearer of such a hat should certainly be the possessor of an unquestionable complexion, as the face is completely exposed to the glaring light. They are not beautifying to the prettiest of faces, and should be very carefully chosen.

The Tango shade will be favoured where the new hats are in question. This colour is something like the tone known as "coq-de-roche." Although black is the smartest of headgears, other colours are also favoured. Flowers are put quite in the shade by the great demand for tulle and lace. Very seldom does one see a flower-trimmed hat, if so, it must be very well carried out, to suit the taste of the moment. Ribbon, forming a large bow, either in front or at the side, will be seen on some hats. A trimming of a bow sounds exceedingly simple, but when the twist of the ribbon is that of an expert milliner it always has a certain amount of chic about it.

The new veils of silk net are of small mesh, some still showing fancy designs of a leaf, tiny rose, etc. But the wearer must show a great deal of discretion in adjusting these veils, as it is absolutely fatal if a grotesque design is placed over the eye or mouth.

Hat pins are seen only in small sizes. Small pearls may be seen yet in Rhine stones. Other coloured stones are carried out in the same manner. All these pins suit the small hats of to-day.

PUCK'S GIRDLE.

"I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes."—"Midsummer Night's Dream."

The news that we are to lose the Governor-General and Lady Denman within a few months has been received with very general regret. For, although we have not had much opportunity of seeing them since they left Government House, Lord and Lady Denman made so many friends during their stay in Sydney that everyone is sorry to hear the news of their departure. While in New South Wales Lady Denman endeared herself to all who knew her. Her frank and friendly manner, and her genuine interest in all matters concerning women won for her a large number of friends and admirers. Without specially identifying herself with any particular movement, she helped all by her sympathy, and, when possible, her presence; and Sydney has a very pleasant memory of her.

Women who are social workers will be very interested in the news that in Saint Louis, U.S.A., women judges have been appointed to the courts where women and girls are tried for minor offences. American women have been working for a long time for this reform, for the contention is that a woman is more capable of understanding other women, and that young girls who are charged for the first time are less likely to be terrified into an appearance of crime by a woman on the Bench than by a man Judge. Also, they say that a woman has the right to be tried by her peers.

At the annual dinner of the Institute of Journalists, held in London last month, when Dr. Page, the American Ambassador, and Mrs. Page were the chief guests, the gathering was presided over by a woman, Mrs. Agnes L. Carruthers (the chairman of the London District). One of the speakers, the Hon. H. L. Lawson, referred to the fact that the chair was occupied by a lady, which showed that the last sex barrier of ridiculous tradition had been broken down, as it had been long ago in newspaper offices.

An effort is being made in London, at the instigation of the Scapa Society, to prevent the erection of fiery advertisements all over the city, and particularly on the Embankment. It seems that it will be necessary to give five years' notice to those already in existence, but at the end of that time it is hoped that the glaring sky signs advertising tea, tobacco, and whisky will all disappear.

Dean Inge, of St. Paul's Ctahedral, is giving London food for thought in many of his sermons. Speaking recently he said that some people needed to be reminded that this world was not merely a school of morals. God wished us to find out all his laws, so far as they concerned us, and he would go on punishing our ignorance until we did find them out. There was no lesson which we needed more to learn than that evil was wrought by want of head as well as by want of heart. Moral wrong could never be set right except at the cost of suffering, and if the wrong-doer did not suffer himself, someone else had to suffer for him. Vicarious suffering was a law of life; vicarious punishment was not. . . We must not shirk pain, for it was in itself beneficial, and part of God's ordering of the world. It was a great purifier; we could not get rid of moral evil without it. Where pain ended gain ended.

Mistresses from the colonies visiting England are assured now of a cordial welcome should they wish to inspect any of our schools and see the working of our educational methods, writes an English paper. The Headmistresses' Association has for some time past been occupying itself with a movement, which has as its object the strengthening of the bonds of Empire. It aims at the drawing together into closer union of the members of the teaching profession, both in Great Britain and in the overseas Dominions, as it is felt that much mutual benefit would accrue from a regular interchange of views between those engaged in education, but working under such totally different conditions as prevail in the various parts of our Empire. The association is urging upon headmistresses the desirability of, first, encouraging mistresses to go to the colonies, and, second, of welcoming them back to their posts on their return, and also of giving posts to colonials who wish for English experience.

A beautiful memorial to Florence Nightingale has been unveiled in Florence, the city of her birth. The memorial, which is in the Church of Santa Croce, the Westminster Abbey of Italy, is the work of the English sculptor, P. W. Sargant, and it takes the form of a symbolical figure of watchfulness, holding aloft a lamp. An inscription in Italian is underneath, which, translated, reads: "Florence Nightingale, Heroine of the Crimea, the 'Lady of the Lamp,' as the soldiers call her whom she tended in hospital in the night watches with wondrous, anxious care, and thenceforward by the force of her example was the moving soul of that voluntary work of international piety known as the Red Cross. This tribute of veneration and respect is raised to her memory in Florence, where she was born, and whose name she bore."

Finland has a school of gardening and cookery for women. About eighteen years ago a Finnish woman was recommended to live practically in the open air for her health, so in her own garden she opened a school of gardening. After a few years the enlightened Finnish Government came to her assistance, and enabled her to establish a much bigger school. The training is not meant for professional gardeners, but to train women to work in their own homes.

The new coiffure is becoming more and more general, and in some cases it is exaggerated, says a writer from Paris. The caricaturists have already taken it up. We see very small people wearing enormous cone-shaped chignons on the crown of the head, and the effect is absurd, especially when the ear curls, so like side whiskers, are added. But bizarre as are the modes of the women who dress at the big dressmakers, they are as nothing to the imitations one sees in the Latin quarter, where the influence of cubism and futurism is added to that of Poiret and his school; and to describe the scene at one of the public dancing halls, where students, models, and all sorts of people congregate, would be to put into words one of the wildest and most futurist of pictures it is possible to imagine.

Tango baths have been introduced by a Parisian hostess, says an English paper. So exhausting is the new dance that many of her men guests had begun to bring with them a change of linen, which they retired to put on after supper. From this the idea occurred to the hostess of engaging a masseur for the evenings of her parties. Tired Tango dancers can now spend half an hour in the middle of a tiring evening in the refreshing relaxation of a bath and massage. Truly some people work hard to enjoy themselves.

Mrs. Elcock, the sub-postmistress of Sunninghill, has reached her fiftieth year in postal work at that office. She was the post-office telegraphist appointed for the Ascot district, and although 69 years of age she still does the operating. It was through the wish of King Edward when Prince of Wales that Mrs. Elcock was appointed telegraphist at Sunninghill.

EARLY AUSTRALIAN WOMEN WRITERS.

At a time when so many new novels of Australian life are appearing, those of the older generation should not be forgotten. For some of them, apart from their intrinsic worth, are of real historic interest.

South Australia, Victoria, and Queensland all have a woman novelist whose experiences date from the pioneering days of the colony—Catherine Helen Spence, of Adelaide; Ada Cambridge, of Victoria; and Mrs. Campbell Praed, of Queensland.

Miss C. H. Spence's first novel was published in 1856, and must have been one of the earliest Australian novels written. Her fame has been that of a political and social reformer, and few people would have suspected her of writing two-volume novels. It was her ambition, however, when young, to write a great book. In 1851 she sent her first attempt, "Clara Morison," to Smith, Elder, and Co., of London; and she records with evident pride that Mr. Williams, the reader of Smith, Elder, and Co., who had discovered Charlotte Bronte, read the book, and refused to publish it for the same reason that he had given Charlotte Bronte, that "she could write a better." However, in 1856 "Clara Morison" was published in London, and was pronounced by critics to be the best novel yet written in Australia—"a book deserving careful criticism and much praise."

In this book Miss Spence has drawn upon her own experiences in her description of the voyage to Adelaide and life in that city after she arrived there in 1839. There took place in 1851 an unprecedented rush of men to the Victorian goldfields, and she has attempted to describe in "Clara Morison" her experience of a depopulated province, when "there was no king in Israel, and every woman did what was right in her own sight." Clara Morison herself was not a new woman, however, and she was only too glad to marry one of the few men left behind—an attractive young English squatter.

Her second novel, "Tender and True," was accepted by Mr. Williams. Her third novel, "Mr. Hogarth's Will," made such an impression upon Mr. Edward Wilson, the well-known philanthropist, that it led him to alter his will. The story is that of a rich uncle who cruelly disinherited his two nieces. They were in consequence forced to earn their own living. Miss Spence intended to show that the uncle had done very wrong, but Mr. Wilson thought otherwise. He left the bulk of his fortune to Melbourne charities, which benefit substantially every year.

In her last novel, Miss Spence thought that she had at last achieved her ambition in creating "characters that stood out distinct and real." But she could find no publisher for it. She brought it to Sydney in 1900, but was assured "that the only novels worth publishing in Australia were sporting or political ones!"

Mrs. Campbell Praed, of the four novelists mentioned here, is the only genuine Australian. She was born in Queensland, where her father was a squatter and a member of Parliament, so that she had ample opportunity for studying the life she describes so well in her novels. Of these she has written at least twenty. It is said that the interest these books have aroused in England has had an important influence in gaining a hearing for Australian writers. "Longleat of Kooralbyn," her first novel, originally published in 1881 as "Policy and Passion," combines most of the author's strong points, which are "great dramatic force, interest of narrative, and a marked intensity in the sombre passages." Longleat is a squatter and politician in Queensland, a rugged, self-made man, coarse in his manners, but possessing a tender heart, which he cannot for all his desire show to his only daughter. She becomes estranged from him, chiefly owing to the superior upbringing and education which she has acquired in the large cities of the south. The story shows how the lack of love works upon Longleat's spirit, till at last it leads to tragedy for himself and others.

Mrs. Praed's descriptions of Australian scenery are very realistic. She expresses the feeling of fear with which the bush sometimes grips us, and also the feeling of beauty and peace. From her books we can picture the life of the pioneers in Queensland, their struggle to gain a hold upon the land, their isolation and the lack of congenial society in those far back regions. Her stories, though not always pleasant reading, contain characters that are life-like and vivid creations. In "Black and White," and "My Australian Girlhood," Mrs. Praed has given some account of her own life on her father's stations in Queensland; of the neighbouring families, from whom some of her characters seem to be drawn; and the blacks, bushrangers, and gentlemen sundowners with whom she came in contact.

If Mrs. Praed is the Australian novelist best known in England, Ada Cambridge is the best known in Australia. Many think she is entitled to the first place among Australian women novelists, by reason of the quality of her work and the varied distinctiveness of her stories.

"The Three Miss Kings" is perhaps her most popular novel—a pleasant story of every-day life in Melbourne in the early eighties. Ada Cambridge's "delicate insight into the ways of girlhood and the loving tenderness with which they are presented," makes the novel popular, especially with women. It is valuable, too, in that it keeps for us the atmosphere of early days. Ada Cambridge has written at least 12 novels, all dealing with Australian life. Her "Thirty Years in Australia" gives an account of her sojourn in Victoria from the time of her arrival in this country, a few months after her marriage, till the present day. Unlike many Englishwomen, she seems to have been able to adapt herself to the new ways and conditions of life in this country without difficulty, learning eventually to love and appreciate it.

There was one other woman who wrote an Australian novel about the year 1880. This was Madame Couvreur, or "Tasma," a journalist, who lived in Victoria for some time, and returned to England in 1879. "Uncle Piper of Piper's Hill" is perhaps the best novel yet written on Australia. One critic, writing of this book, says: "Instead of blinding us with local colouring, Tasma enables us to inhale the very atmosphere of the place, and thus give us the most perfect idea of the things, people, and surroundings she describes." The story is a simple one of a rough old Englishman, who has made his fortune in Australia, and is excessively proud of the fact. So anxious is he to show his manifold possessions to his only sister, whom he left a nursery governess in England, that he invites her and her whole family, including a well-born but idle husband, to pay him a visit. They arrive, and much appreciate the luxury and gaiety with which Uncle Piper surrounds them. The story describes the intermingling of the two families for good or ill.

There is a specially delightful picture of a little girl, who exerts a beneficent influence upon all around her, and through whose agency the story ends up happily. Judging by the well-worn covers of the library copy of this book it is very popular, though there are people well read in English and American novels who have never even heard of it.

Finding that her customers liked her oranges to be of a deep colour, Mme. Depitre has been in the habit of buying mahogany stain and dipping her oranges into it. Fined £2 by the Paris courts, she stated that this practice was usual among fruit merchants, who are thus able to gratify their customers' taste for oranges of a generous red colour.

ARE WOMEN "PERSONS?"

It has just again been decided in England that women are not "persons." Curious, is it not? Three Lords Justices and the Master of the Rolls composed the Court. The occasion was an appeal by Miss Gwyneth Marjorie Bebb, daughter of Principal Bebb, of St. David's College, Lampeter, from a previous decision of Mr. Justice Joyce, that both by common law and statute law women by reason of their sex are disqualified from acting as solicitors.

The plea in support of Miss Bebb's claim was that she was a "person" within the meaning of the Solicitors Acts; and "persons" were entitled to be admitted to the preliminary examination of candidates held by the Incorporated Law Society.

Lord Robert Cecil, K.C., was the lady's leading counsel, and notified that three other ladies were awaiting the result of Miss Bebb's case. These ladies, Miss Costelloe, Miss Ingram, and Miss Nettlefold, all anxious to obtain admission as solicitors, were present in court; and seated together they gave a fine impression of competent womanhood.

Lord Robert Cecil, in support of the appeal, mentioned that Miss Bebb had obtained a first-class in jurisprudence at Oxford. The quiet satire was obvious when in reply to a question as to whether women were ever churchwardens counsel said, "Women can even be queens and regents, and have been from the earliest times." "Women have also occupied," he continued, "the positions of Hereditary High Constable, Great Chamberlain, Marshal, governor of a workhouse, hereditary sheriff, sexton, and solicitors' clerks."

Sir Robert Finlay, K.C., representing the Law Society, said the appointment of ladies as clerks and solicitors would lead to all sorts of complications, and added, "I don't suppose there is a master alive who would refuse more time to plead to a pretty girl, although it was perfectly clear she had got to the end of her tether." He contended that the long practice of many centuries had never disclosed any single instance of a woman ever having been admitted, and submitted that inveterate usage was of the greatest weight in considering the question before the Court.

The Master of the Rolls, in giving judgment, said that 300 years ago Coke expressed the view that women could not be attorneys at law. No woman had ever been an attorney at law, and no woman (before the present proceedings were started) had ever applied or attempted to be an attorney at law. There had therefore been a long, uniform, and uninterrupted usage of what was the common law. He decided the question upon the ground that at the date of the passing of the Solicitors Act, 1843, there was a disability on the part of women to be attorneys. The Act and the amending Acts, said his lordship, had not destroyed the disability imposed by the common law. That being so, the appeal failed. "No doubt," added his lordship, "many women, and in particular Miss Bebb, were in education, intelligence, and competency superior to many candidates who would go up for the Law Society's examinations, but with that, of course, the Court had nothing whatever to do."

The Court's decision appeared to be accepted as a matter of course by the women, who entirely filled the seat in front of counsel. They evidently regarded the appeal more as a means of propaganda and education for the public than as of value in itself.

THE RESOURCE OF READING.

"For your own comfort and happiness I would urge you to have some literary solace outside your own immediate work, that may divert and refresh your mind after you return to it," said the Earl of Rosebery the other day to a meeting of technical college students in Glasgow. "I want to recommend literature to you as an infinite refreshment and resource in the avocations of life. You may think it will be only leaving one fatigue for another, but I venture to assure you that it is not so. One great example is worth a ton of precept, and I will give you the example of Lord Liverpool, who for fifteen years was Prime Minister of England. He was harassed and torn by Cannings and Eldons and all sorts of colleagues, as many Prime Ministers are apt to be, and he had a very arduous time of it. But what he said was this, that the only secret by which he was enabled to go on through his arduous pilgrimage of fifteen years was his practice, regularly renewed and never omitted, of reading for half an hour or an hour before he went to bed in some branches of literature wholly unconnected with his political administrative pursuits. Now, that was the experience of a hard-working man, and I venture to recommend it to you. My words may not come home to you at this moment, when recreation may more probably take the form, and a very wise form, too, of athletic pursuits. But even in these days of youth and bud and hope, when life is so large and easy comparatively before you, it would not be a bad plan to try the germ of a little literature, to begin the practice even to a limited extent, because, believe me, the time will come when you will become a little short of wind; when your legs won't carry you uphill quite as swiftly as they do now, when they will even cease to feel very vigorous on the flat. And when that unfortunate period comes—depend upon it, it will come—you will find the want of some resource in the place of that football which knows you no more."

A TRAVELLER RETURNS.

"It isn't easy to know literary celebrities in London," said Miss Ruth Bedford, who arrived in Sydney last week, after two years' absence in Europe. "They seem to be shy and exclusive, and unless one takes letters from personal friends, there is very little chance of anything more than a mere acquaintance—even if one meets them at all.

"Although Miss Mackellar and I were in London for months at a time, I met practically none of the people one hears most about. But coming out on the Majola we met John Galsworthy. He was going to Egypt, so there wasn't very much time for knowing him, and Miss Mackellar was not strong enough just then to talk much to strangers. Still, we did have a few talks with him. He was rather shy and reserved, and did not open up much. But then that seems to be the way with most literary men and women—judging from what one hears. They seem to keep the best of themselves for their work, and it is only to their very intimate friends that they let themselves go.

"But I had one very interesting experience of authors. Have you ever heard of the Poetry Book Shop in London? It is a little shop in Devonshire-street, a dingy, dusty, little place that one would never notice unless one knew of it. Here every Thursday afternoon at 6 o'clock there are readings by authors of their new works. It was most fascinating. One day we went to hear Maurice Hewlett read "Helen Redeemed." Another day we heard some of Alice Meynell's poems, read by her son, Francis. He is said to have inherited his mother's genius, and we heard him respond for her at the dinner given by the writers. He is a most romantic young man—it is only to be hoped that he won't be spoiled by too much adulation.

"We were to have heard Yeats read a new poem at the little shop, but that very afternoon was the beginning of Miss Mackellar's long illness, and, of course, we could not go. I was terribly disappointed, for I am deeply interested in Ireland and the Irish writers.

I had a delightful visit to Ireland—to Donegal—where I stayed with Lady Hayes, whom you will remember in Sydney as Mrs. Edmund Hayes. It was quite an exciting experience being with her, and made me realise more than I ever could have done here, what the Home Rule question means. All round there was a feeling of something about to happen; we were afraid to speak a word on the subject in the house for fear of being overheard. After a time I was even afraid to mention it in my letters, for fear they might be read—though that may have only been my nervousness. Lady Hayes was asked to allow the men to drill in her grounds, but as she is alone, having neither husband nor son to protect her, she was afraid to give permission. She is very deeply interested in the question while I was there, and presided at an indemnity meeting to arrange for the widows and orphans of those who might be killed if the worst came to the worst. While we were there she gave a feast to all the children of the village on Empire Day, but the parish priest would not allow any of his school children to be present. That will give you an idea of the feeling.

"I was charmed with Ireland. It was more like home than England, not so tame, and more like our own scenery. I am afraid I grew rather tired of the monotonous neatness of the English countryside. At first it charmed me, but after a while I longed for something more rugged. In Ireland one is certainly not oppressed by the neatness. But, oh, the wild flowers there; the primroses and bluebells; and, in Lady Hayes's garden, such rhododendrons you might dream about.

"We had read such descriptions of the grandness of the Donegal Coast that we felt it would be a sin to leave Ireland without seeing it, so we made the tour along the coast. It was very lovely, but I could not help wondering, if they used such adjectives for it, what would they have left to say about our South Coast?

"Please don't think I am one of those 'little Australians' who think that we have everything the best in the world. I am not. I found things to wonder at and envy, every day while I was away. All the wonderful work of man on every side—the towns, the cathedrals, the pictures and statues—filled me with the deepest admiration. The atmosphere that clung about the historic places was a thing we cannot know here. Though I must confess I did not have as many 'thrills' as I expected. I had read so much about the places, and seen the pictures of them so often, that they seemed quite familiar to me in many cases. Westminster Abbey did give me a thrill, and Rouen Cathedral. Bruges, too, and Siena and Assissi carried me away. Indeed, as I say, buildings and pictures and sort of thing more than satisfied me; but in all the beauty of the lands themselves I learned to appreciate Australia as I had never done before, as I think one cannot do until one has been away and seen it from a distance.

"I found my knowledge, small as it is, of other languages most helpful. Of course, English is spoken practically everywhere, and one can manage very well in the hotels and public places with one's own language. But you cannot get at the other people, as you can if you can speak their language. For instance, one afternoon we were walking down the valley of Assisi, and we met an old peasant woman. We walked and talked with her, and she told us much that was interesting about the place. If we had not known some Italian we could not have talked to her. I must say that our little Italian went much farther than our little French. The Italians were more patient with us; they accepted our pronunciation, and talked slowly, so that we could understand them. In France we were overwhelmed by the torrent of words hurled at us—people there were much more scornful of our English accent in pronouncing the French words. Still, however little one's knowledge of the language may be, it does help if one wants to get at the life of the people themselves."

RED GUMS.

Each of the Australian capitals has its own period of seasonal beauty, and Perth has its triumph when the red gums flower.

The road rises abruptly up Mount Eliah, the city is left behind, and on the brow of the hill the gum tree avenue starts. Two irregular walls of trees border a red road, passing through mown grass, with the Swan River in the background. In flower clouds of feathery bloom, each tree stands out against the sky, with colours that range through all the reds, and from orange and creamy salmon to snowdrift white. At the end of the avenue two trees of vermilion red make entrance to a flower procession. From glorious red one passes to creamy, pink, and white, and these give place to glowing crimson again. Here a flowerless tree stands contrasting in its fresh cool green, and, next, an intense orange red rises in radiant colour against the blue of the sky. Then a low-growing tree, in paler orange, and across its crest of flowers, the spires of Perth, and the distant hazy blueness of the Darling Hills. From a gap where a tree has failed one follows the line of the river, then another tree of brilliant orange flames up against the sky. Red after red follows onward until a misty white one breaks the brilliant colouring; and beyond the foam of flowers the azure river winds on its way. With a tree of creamy salmon and a tiny one of brilliant red, the avenue ends on the headland overlooking the wide expanse of blue water, where the river widens into a bay; and the delicate tracings of the Marconi station stand against the distant horizon. The long red road runs on through banksia trees and scrub beside the river, to where the white sand beaches of Cottesloe and Fremantle lie hot and dazzling in the sun.

Coming up to Perth through the purple night, when the soft, brilliant beauty of the flowering gums is lost in hazy darkness, there is still the consciousness of their flower loveliness in the fresh bush scent of gum flowers coming through the night, the scent of gum flowers, which is the same ineffable sweetness, whether from the tiny flowers of the great forest trees of box and redwood and jarrah, or from the big, soft flowers of the red gums of Western Australia. A faint and elusive fragrance, but unconquerable in its individuality, which carries one back across the world to the great air spaces of the Australian bush.

THE O-CEDAR POLISH MOP.

THE WONDER-WORKING WAND FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

DEMONSTRATIONS DAILY.

WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, AND FRIDAY, 11 A.M. TO 1 P.M. AND 3 TO 5 P.M. SATURDAY, 11 A.M. TO 1 P.M.

WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU.

It means relief from the hardest work of housekeeping, the back-breaking drudgery of tedious and constant cleaning. It does more than merely dust; it polishes and cleans in one operation. The mop is padded, and cannot scratch a polished floor or furniture, or injure the most delicate linoleum. It gathers all the dust and dirt, and holds it; then the dust can be shaken out and the mop easily washed. Just a few minutes daily, and your floors are made spotlessly clean, without stooping, hard work, red hands, and tired knees. You can wear a dainty dress, and abolish the dust cap.

THIS IS A GUARANTEED ARTICLE.

We urge you to try it at our risk, and if it does not prove to be one of the greatest boons in your house cleaning, your money will be refunded.

COME AND SEE THIS MOP DEMONSTRATED.

Demonstrations will be held daily until Saturday next in our Kitchenware Department by Mrs. Bon Bernard, and also in one of our George-street windows. The many labour-saving advantages of the O-Cedar Polish Mop will be clearly explained, and those who wish to lighten their daily house-cleaning should certainly attend. As an inducement, we are making a special introductory offer for this week only, lasting until Saturday, 31st January.

THE LOST TRIBES.

BY GEORGE A. BIRMINGHAM.

(ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.)

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

"If his mother," said Mrs. Dann, "wasn't a great-granddaughter of Judas Iscariot, I reckon his father must have been the great-grandson of that patriarch. I've studied Italian art quite a bit, and attended two courses of lectures on the Old Masters. I'd recognise the face anywhere.

Mr. Mervyn looked at Aeneas with fresh interest.

"His beard is red," he said, "very red."

"If it would be pleasing to your ladyship," said Aeneas, "to be taking a bit of a drive along by the river where them big ferns do be growing, there's nothing to hinder my bringing up the pony at any time that your ladyship would appoint. It's little use his Reverence makes of her," he added, as a kind of afterthought, "and it's as good for Miss Delia to be walking as driving. She's young, and has a fine pair of legs under her."

"Look at his eyes," said Mrs. Dann. "It's not his hair I'm going by so much as his eyes. If there are many more people like him in this locality, Phil, I'll do a little original research along the lines of that notion of Nathan P's."

Mr. Mervyn pulled himself together with an effort and said a decided good-bye to his sister-in-law. He got into the phaeton and took the reins. Aeneas Sweeny settled himself cautiously on the ricketty back seat. Biddy lifted her head and looked round to see that everything was ready for a start, and then trotted quietly down the avenue.

"Your Reverence——" said Aeneas at last.

Mr. Mervyn took no notice of the appeal. He had forgotten Aeneas and Judas Iscariot. He was not thinking of the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel. His mind was entirely occupied with the idea of boosting Druminawona. It seemed to him very horrible that he should be called upon to boost. He found some little comfort in the thought that it would be difficult to get the people of Druminawona to join in the effort. Without the co-operation and hearty approval of Father Roche, the parish priest, it would scarcely be possible to start the thing at all. Mr. Mervyn did not think the priest would approve of anything of the kind. He tried to picture a scene in which he and Father Roche would boost together for the edification of their parishioners. His imagination reeled. But Mrs. Dann was evidently a woman of great force of character. She would quite easily overpower him. She might in the end compel Father Roche. They would neither of them like it.

"I beg your Reverence's pardon," said Aeneas again.

Mr. Mervyn did not hear him. He was thinking that Sergeant Ginty, of the Royal Irish Constabulary, would certainly approve of the boosting. The sergeant was a lean, cold-hearted man, full of contempt for Druminawona. He was a native of Portadown, and he despised Connacht. Twenty-five years' service in County Galway had softened the harshness of his northern speech, but had only intensified his admiration for the bustling ways of Ulster. Sergeant Ginty was hopelessly out of touch with the spirit of Druminawona. It is part of the plan for the good government of Ireland that the police should, as far as possible, be aliens in the places where they live. Having enlisted a recruit in Kerry and trained him carefully in Dublin the authorities set him down in some corner of County Antrim. The object is to prevent the possibility of any sympathy between the people and the law, and, as a rule, the system is entirely successful. Sergeant Ginty in Druminawona was a fine example of its working.

Mr. Mervyn had no doubt that once back in Portadown the sergeant would boost spontaneously and well. By contemplating the sergeant he arrived at a certain understanding of the meaning of the word.

Biddy trotted on. Aeneas leaned forward cautiously and spoke into his masters' ear.

"Your Reverence, sir——" he said.

Mr. Mervyn's mind had passed from the subject of boosting. He was troubled by the thought of Bobby Sebright and his marriage with Delia. The prospect was singularly distasteful to him. Mrs. Dann had hinted that Bobby Sebright was a hustler. Mr. Mervyn felt quite sure that he could never really like anyone who hustled. Delia might. He admitted the possibility with regret. It was possible that Delia herself might learn to hustle. She would almost certainly wear smart frocks if she could get them. He thought with regret of a transformed Delia, a daughter hopelessly lost to him.

Aeneas, despairing of attracting his master's attention by mere speech, leaned forward again and shook him by the arm.

"Well, Aeneas," said Mr. Mervyn, "what is it."

"I wouldn't like to be speaking in any way that would be disrespectful to a lady that's a near friend of your Reverence," said Aeneas.

"I am sure you wouldn't," said Mr. Mervyn.

"And, of course, I know well that she doesn't mean the half of what she says. It would be a queer thing if she did, but she doesn't. That sort likes to be funning, and small blame to them."

"I wish I could agree with you about that," said Mr. Mervyn. "I wish I could."

"She has a kind heart," said Aeneas, "and she's one that would be good to the poor."

This had not struck Mr. Mervyn; but he had no contradictions to urge. He said that he agreed with Aeneas.

"It's no more than what I'd expect," said Aeneas, "in any one that would be a near friend of your Reverence, let alone that you could tell it by the two eyes she has, and them twinkling like stars."

Mrs. Dann had been greatly impressed by the appearance of Aeneas Sweeny. It seemed that he had been equally impressed by hers. Biddy, who had been walking very slowly for some time, stopped altogether, and began to eat the grass which grew at the roadside. Mr. Mervyn made no effort to make her go on again. He was interested in Aeneas' estimate of Mrs. Dann's character.

"She's the kind of lady," said Aeneas, "who'll be wanting to do something, be the same more or less, for the advantage of the people of the district where she would be living, whether it might be Druminawona or the continent of America."

Mr. Mervyn recognised the truth of this; but he was not pleased. Mrs. Dann seemed to him over-anxious to benefit Druminawona. He woke to the fact that Biddy was eating grass. He chucked at the reins decisively and made a clicking noise with the corners of his mouth. Biddy was a pony with a conscience. She had resented the way in which Mr. Mervyn had hit her with a whip earlier in the afternoon because she felt that the blow was unjust. She displayed no anger when her head was pulled ruthlessly up from the pleasant grass because she knew that she ought not to be eating grass. She trotted on obediently.

"I'd be the last man in Ireland," said Aeneas, "to be vexed at anything that the like of her would say, knowing well that she'd mean no harm by it, whatever it might be."

Mr. Mervyn was far from being able to attain this mood of high charity. He was ready to admit that Mrs. Dann might not mean any harm by what she said. He was very much afraid that, without meaning it, she might do a great deal. He explained this at some length to Aeneas.

"That's just what I'm after saying myself," said Aeneas. "It's little she thinks of the trouble that might come of the name she's after putting on me. I wouldn't mind it coming from her. And I wouldn't mind it from your Reverence, or Miss Delia, if so be you was to be amusing yourselves by saying it. But it's a name I wouldn't like to get about the place. Sergeant Ginty beyond there in the barrack has a terrible spite against me, and them three young lads of his would take a delight in shouting the like of that name after me, and me going down the street. It could be——"

Aeneas' voice sank to a whisper, and Mr. Mervyn knew that he was getting at the heart of his grievance.

"It could be that some time or another, when I had a drop too much taken—and that's what might happen to any man—unless maybe to your Reverence—I'd strike one of them lads in a way that would make a cripple of him. I needn't be telling your Reverence of the way the sergeant would be acting then. I'd be ashamed, so I would, and me in prison, of the disgrace I'd been the means of bringing on yourself and Miss Delia."

Biddy turned in at the rectory gate. Aeneas, realising that his time was short, came rapidly to the point at which he had been aiming.

"If your Reverence would speak a word to her," he said, "so that she wouldn't be saying the like when anybody be listening, I'd be obliged to you."

Before Mr. Mervyn was able to make any promise Delia burst from the rectory door, and ran to meet him.

"Well," she said breathlessly, "tell me all about her. What's she like?"

"The grandest ever you seen," said Aeneas, "with gold and silver hanging round her the same as pots and kettles on a tinker."

"She seems very nice and kind," said Mr. Mervyn, "and very——very full of life."

"I'm sure I'm glad to hear it," said Delia. "It's time somebody alive came to Druminawona."

Mr. Mervyn sighed. He foresaw that Bobby Sebright would also be alive.

"She has a great way with her," said Aeneas, "you'd wonder to see the two hands of her going this way and that, and her talking like, it might be, the shuttle of old Danny the weaver when he'd be making the tweed."

"Is that true, father?" said Delia.

"She does—I hardly like to say—gesticulate," said Mr. Mervyn. "She emphasises what she has to say with her hands."

"And them ringing like little bells," said Aeneas.

"How lovely," said Delia. "I thought only French people did that. What's her name?"

"Sarah," said Mr. Mervyn, "and, I fancy, Mary."

Delia did not seem at all pleased. She knew that her aunt's initials were "S.M." She had hoped for something more striking than Sarah Mary. Salome, perhaps, or Sophronia, for the "S.;" Melissa, or at the very least Myra, for the "M." She had read in newspapers of American ladies with grandiloquent names. It seemed a pity that this new aunt of hers—who, besides being American was very rich—should have such commonplace names as Sarah and Mary. Mr. Mervyn felt that he ought to improve on his statement.

"She likes to be called Sally May," he said.

"That's better," said Delia.

"Names," said Aeneas, "isn't everything. There's many a one might have a name put on him that he didn't deserve, and it might be hard enough to get rid of it."

His mind was still dwelling on Judas Iscariot. Mr. Mervyn didn't want to have that subject started again. He got out of the phaeton and went into the house. Aeneas' voice followed him.

"If it's pleasing to your Reverence," he said, "to attend to the little matter I was mentioning to you, it would be a great convenience to me."

Delia was too much excited about her aunt to take any interest in Aeneas Sweeny's mysterious business.

"When shall I see her?" she asked. "Will she be in church to-morrow."

"Yes, she will," he said. "She said so. But I'm not sure that she will come in quite the right spirit. I may be misjudging her. Indeed, I don't know whether she's a member of our church. I gathered that her husband, your uncle, Delia, wasn't exactly a churchman. He believed in a sort of modification of the 'British Israel' theory. I don't think any the worse of him for that. Lots of excellent Christians take the greatest interest in that question. But, as far as I could make out from your aunt, he didn't believe in anything else. I remember attending a man once in a workhouse hospital, a returned American. He said he was a Protestant——"

Delia interrupted her father and led him into the dining-room for tea. She had often heard the story of the man who spent 55 years in New York and then came home to die. He remembered nothing about the religion taught him in his youth except the fact that "In a vale in the land of Moab there stands a lonely grave." The words, he said, had been a great comfort to him all his life.

H. L., Mosman: Thanks. You are entitled to a refund if the contract was not completed.

J.O., Melbourne: Will be referred to shortly.

S.S., Sydney: Schipperkes are scarce here. Mr. Cohen imported one, and Mrs. Chubb, of Auburn, Victoria, has also a dog of this breed.

NOTES.

The death is reported of Nuthurst Precocity, a bulldog imported by Mr. C. H. Angus, of Adelaide. This dog won all before him in Melbourne and Adelaide. He is said to have cost over £200. Fanciers throughout the Commonwealth will sympathise with Mr. Angus in losing such a splendid specimen of the breed.

Mr. T. S. Prescott, of Sydney, was a visitor to the show held on Monday of the Victorian Fox and Irish Terrier Club.

Miss Audrey Chirnside, of Werribee Park, has (writes "Standard") disposed of a brace of West Highland White terriers to Mr. H. G. Barnard, of Unley, South Australia. Miss Chirnside is said to be the only breeder in the Commonwealth of this variety. She imported the original stock from Scotland.

Mrs. W. H. Waters, of Victoria, has received from England the two high-class Airedale terriers recently referred to in this column. Musbury Diable, Messrs. Hewitt and Dash's Irish terrier, has also arrived in Melbourne.

Mrs. Arnold, of Stradbroke, Woodville, has obtained from Mr. W. Macdonald, of Hurlstone Park, a promising young Irish terrier. The dog has a harsh coat, good eyes, and a typical head. As the "Daredevil" was unnamed, Mrs. Arnold writes: "The North of Ireland is being kept prominently before us just now. I have therefore called the dog Derry. He certainly is not of a peaceful nature, and all the cats have left his neighbourhood already."

The owners of the Sydney bulldog Ilford Lord Nelson wish to arrange a sweepstake of £5 each for competition among ten of the best of the breed in Australia, the winner to take the lot. Mr. M. P. Bauld, of Malvern (Vic.) has just imported from England Silver Wizard. He has offered to make a two-dog match of it for £50 a side, the dogs to be judged at the March show of the Victorian Bulldog Club. When asked for some idea of the price paid for Silver Wizard, Mr. Bauld laughingly replied, "I paid as much for him—at per pound—as Mr. Sol. Green recently paid for his famous stallion, White Star, and each is as good in his class as the other. In fact, I could have brought out a racehorse from England for the same money."

The bull bitch Bellona, by ch. Greenstone ex Bellinuna, late the property of Mr. H. Lamb, Mosman, met her death through suffocation while travelling on the railway, North Island, N.Z., in December. Just 13 months ago her daughter, Judystone, by Punch ex Bellona, bred by H. Lamb, met her fate in the same way, and almost at the same place. In each case the death was certified to by a veterinary surgeon as due to suffocation, and in both cases the owners tried but failed to get compensation.

DRESSING FOR SKIN TROUBLE.

A collie fancier recommends the following dressing for dogs with simple skin disease:—8oz pure lard, 2oz of sulphur, 1 tablespoonful of kerosene. Melt the lard, and add the other ingredients, stirring well. When set the mixture should be again stirred. The treatment is to well rub in the mixture on the affected parts. This should be done four times, missing every other day. A couple of days after the last application the dog should be thoroughly washed with a good dog soap.

PUGDOG CLUB.

The Pugdog Club of New South Wales has arranged to celebrate its first anniversary by holding a championship parade on Saturday afternoon, February 7, at Kirnbank, Arthur-street, Croydon.

As the parade will be held under the rules of the Kennel Club of New South Wales (Incorporated), all wins obtained will be recognised by that boby, and challenge certificates count towards championships.

There are 15 classes for black pugs, 15 for fawns, and 3 for apricots. Special prizes will be given for the best of each sex, irrespective of colour. Mr. Liddell, who has judged at the Kennel Club and other shows, will make the awards.

WATTLE DAY IN ENGLAND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—You have called attention to the fact that special prominence was given on Monday to the celebration of Australian Wattle Day in London. I may be permitted to explain that this gratifying observance is a direct result of the formation of the Australian Wattle Day League, for the advancement of which in recent years the chief credit is due to enthusiastic Australians in Sydney. About three months ago a branch of the Australian Wattle Day (Federal) League was formed in London, largely through the efforts of three lady residents of Sydney and Adelaide, who were visiting England at the time. The membership of that body, of which Sir George Reid is the head, is rapidly increasing, and one of its first decisions was to celebrate Wattle Day in the United Kingdom on Australian Foundation Day, which falls in the time of year when the wattle is at its best in the old country and the South of France, whence (under the name of mimosa) the Australian wattle is obtained. Even last year, when an "unofficial" Wattle Day was observed in London on Foundation Day, many thousands of Australians and others displayed the blossom, and the promoters of the league expected that the numbers would be multiplied tenfold this year. In Australia itself the league, since it became federated a year ago, is expanding most satisfactorily. New branches are being formed in many parts of the Commonwealth, and even beyond Australia and the mother country the influence of the movement is apparent. I have received from California, Chicago, and South Africa letters intimating that wattle celebrations will be held there, and inquiring regarding the conditions of membership of the league; and a Canadian correspondent is now endeavouring to establish a Maple Society, with the same general purposes as those of the Australian Wattle Day League. Through the efforts of Mr. E. E. Pescott, F.L.S., F.R.H.S. (general secretary in Melbourne), acting on behalf of the league, the wattle emblem has been introduced into the Commonwealth postage stamp and coat of arms; and the South Australian branch, with the presidency of which I am honoured, is directing to the Minister of Defence the suggestion that, if possible, the beautiful bloom shall be represented on all military and naval badges with which the Commonwealth is specially associated. One may fairly claim that the brief history of the Wattle Day movement is a remarkable record of almost instantaneous and ever-increasing success.

I am, etc., WILL. J. SOWDEN,
Federal President, Australian Wattle Day League.

POULTRY.

Questions relating to fancy or commercial poultry-keeping, diseases, etc., should be addressed to "Ancona," "Herald" Office.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Enquirer.—At the close of the laying season and in dry weather, when green food is scarce, the egg yolks become pale in colour. Substitute maize for wheat for a time, and give green stuff of almost any sort, and the colour will improve.

Sandown.—Blue Orpingtons should be of the same type as the other colours of the breed. The ground colour blue should have a darker lacing at the end of each feather, such as is seen in exhibition Andalusians.

Bothered.—Leg weakness is referred to in this column.

Amateur.—To say that your chickens have a growth on the other side of the craw is really too vague a description for anyone to help you in the matter. Your feeding is quite right, but it is most dangerous to scatter fresh lime in the runs. Old lime or mortar is suitable. Chickens, however, never do well in constant confinement; they require liberty. Give more particulars as to symptoms, and remedial measures will be suggested.

Last week witnessed a distinct improvement in the prices of all classes of poultry, immature Leghorn cockerels excepted. Eggs also took the long-expected turn in producers' favour, and from now until April there should be a rising market. Poultry men have for some months been complaining of the low rates, but their grievance will shortly be removed. Anticipating higher prices for table poultry in June and July next, several poultry farmers are already making preparations for hatching, and quite a number of new incubators have been purchased during the past few weeks.

What is known as the day-old-chicken trade—the selling of newly-hatched chickens—originated in England about 12 years ago, and when the custom spread to America an enormous trade was done in both countries. Three or four years ago it began in a small way here, and developed into a large trade, some breeders hatching and disposing of several thousands in the season. The profits of the business are responsible for the great increase, but it has now been overdone both in England and America, many thousands last year failing to find purchasers.

It is said that preparations are being made in this State for immense hatchings during the ensuing season. Breeders should be careful, for there is a limit.

While 250 eggs have been laid by a few hens at some of the Australian egg-laying competitions, the Americans aim at and get considerably better records. At the Ontario Agricultural College one hen gave a trap nest record for a year ended in November last of 303 eggs; while 255, 259, 281, and 282 have been the records put up at one or other egg-laying tests in that country. In a flock of five hens, which included the one which laid 303 eggs, the average was over 240 eggs each. An American journal gives photographs of the hens, and the records mentioned are endorsed by the Agricultural Station authorities.

Within the past few weeks several inquiries have been received as to leg weakness in poultry. This ailment usually appears in half-grown stock of from 16 to 24 weeks of age, in cockerels rather than in pullets, and in the heavy breeds chiefly. The first symptom is a slight weakness of the legs in walking, hardly noticeable to a stranger, but to one who is observant of his fowls suggesting trouble. The gait is unsteady, and the muscles work at some disadvantage. In a few days the bird will be found sitting while eating, and is inclined to walk very little. Later on, however, it presents a different appearance. It is slow to eat, gets less of its share of the food, is pecked at by the others, becomes thin, and a source of worry to the owner. At the first appearance of leg weakness reduce the quantity of fat-producing foods to a small amount. Take away corn and corn meal. If the birds are at all crowded increase the space, or dispose of some of them. Put the weak birds in a place by themselves, thus avoiding their being imposed upon by stronger members of the flock. Rub the legs with tincture of arnica. The morning feed of bran and pollard should contain a good proportion of meat or green cut bone. Pea meal added to the mash will assist in strengthening the birds. Greenstuff should also be supplied.

Professor Dryden, of the Oregon Agricultural Station, who has charge of the poultry experiments carried on there, says: "In our work at the Oregon Station we are trying to reach the result of high egg yield in two ways. First, by using the breeds as we find them, selecting the best layers and breeding from them. Second, by crossing different breeds and using the best layers among the crosses from which to establish a new strain or breed of high producers. The records this year show that the latter method has given us much better results. I believe it possible by the first method to get good results. There are good layers among the pure breeds, but it looks as if the chances of getting a higher percentage of good layers are better from the crossbreds than from the average flock of purebreds. A great many of the purebred birds have been injured in vitality by close breeding or inbreeding for show points. The object in crossing is to improve the vitality of the stock. To get a good egg yield there must, in the first place, be good constitutional vigour. Without vigour the egg records will be low, and the best feature of all is that the high producers were bred from high producers." It is notable that the professor mentions that the cross breeds have given the best results, and the world's record layer of 302 eggs in 12 months was a crossbred. The Australian egg-laying competitions prohibit crosses being entered.

NEW BREEDS AND VARIETIES.

While the English fanciers are responsible for the manufacture of the Orpington in its several varieties, it is actually the only one of the many later-day breeds which can be labelled "Made in England." Plymouth Rocks, which were of American origin, were introduced to England in 1880, and improved in colour and type in that country almost beyond the recognition of the American originators. Wyandottes were also the result of experiments by one or two breeders in the land of the Stars and Stripes. They arrived in England in 1886, and, like the Rocks, were improved in colour and shape by the British fanciers, and from that time to the present have been bred and are equally as popular as the Rocks. The other later-day new breed from America is that known as the Rhode Island Reds, but while it took quite a time to establish the Rocks and Wyandottes in the British Isles, the Rhode Island Reds, which took their name from the State in which they originated, reached England immediately after they were recognised as a breed, and have in a few years' existence in that country enlisted more breeders and exhibitors than did Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks in a quarter of a century. These chestnut-coloured fowls had larger classes at the late Crystal Palace show than any other breed or variety of fowls.

The fancy is, however, a thing of moods, always craving for something new in feathers, whether it be colour or shape. To meet this another novelty has appeared, which promises for a time to eclipse in popularity any of the now-established varieties. The breed, which is known as Buttercups, came from Sicily a few years ago to America. The Buttercups have been bred and boomed for two or three years, with the result that a club has been formed in America to look after the breed's interest, and has now a membership of 200. Some of the American poultry journals now devote a section to what they term "the Buttercup department." Two years ago English fanciers imported several pens from America, and the Crystal Palace authorities at the last show provided classes for them, and over 100 specimens were exhibited.

The Sicilian Buttercups are a medium-sized yellow-coloured fowl, the principal show point being what is known as a cup comb, which should resemble in shape the buttercup. Like all new breeds, they are spoken of as being good layers and excellent for table purposes.

THE UPPER HOUSE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—At the present juncture a question might be asked: Is there in New South Wales a citizen so base who would accept nomination to an honourable house, if he were asked to pledge himself to destroy it? For such baseness there is no precedent in British history. Reform is a reasonable consideration, differing entirely from destruction. One cannot imagine a great party, in an English speaking State, so short of competent men, to find it necessary to place in a responsible position anyone who would so pledge himself. The doing so would be alone sufficient proof that he does not value highly truth, honour, and courage, which the wide world o'er are the badge of the British citizen.

ITCHING OF ECZEMA HORRIBLE.

Mooroopna, Vic.—"I was suffering from an attack of eczema for about one month. The eczema affected my head, wrists, and ankles, and the itching was horrible. I could not get a good night's sleep for more than a week, and soon it came out on the parts mentioned above in a scaly rash. I tried other ointments for a time, but they did not seem to do me any good. I saw the Cuticura Remedies advertised, and thought I would try the Cuticura Ointment, which I bought and applied as directed, and I am glad to say it has completely cured me after using two tins." (Signed), F. Chadaneau, November 23, 1912." Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a sample of each, with 32-page Skin Book, will be mailed free on application to R. # CANBERRA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Before replying to your somewhat acrobatic correspondent's letter of the 22nd instant, I wish to disclose an arrangement which has now been shattered by that letter.

On Tuesday, the 13th inst., the night of my lecture on town planning to the members of the Institution of Surveyors, Mr. Sulman approached me with a view to some arrangement whereby my contentions could be discussed, and some means devised by which they might be met. The press correspondence was to cease and the matter was to be brought officially before the council of the Town Planning Association for discussion and action. This was a perfectly fair proposition, and I agreed to it in my office the next day. I kept my part of the compact, and although I at that moment had a letter in my pocket for the "Herald," I tore it up. Mr. Sulman is the president of the Town Planning Association, I am one of the councillors, and Mr. Taylor is an executive officer. He, at any rate, has not honoured the arrangement arrived at between his superior officers of the Town Planning Association, and this, my present letter, is the result of his breach of discipline (and he a quasi-military officer, too).

The proper course for me under ordinary conditions would be to treat him with the contempt he deserves, but the question is of too much public importance to permit of his nonsense going forth as truth. So let us to his letter.

Your correspondent is truly a magnanimous fighter when he accuses me of wilfully trying to mislead the public during his absence in Melbourne; but this is only on a par with some of his other accusations of mala fides on my part. In the first place, it is not I who am trying to deceive the public, but rather he himself. I am only trying to prevent him succeeding. Secondly, as he forgot to send me word of his intended absence in Melbourne I might perhaps be excused for my ignorance in regard to that, but I can offer him my assurance that I am not the coward he supposes me to be.

I re-assert that your correspondent did not know that the railway came into the town and his quotations from his own letters prove it. Now that he is forced to acknowledge the railway, he digs a hole in the ground and buries it, but erects his railway station on top of a hill so as to make a conspicuous object of it to all observers, then fails to see the incongruity. A truly marvellous man who will surely be worth his weight in few-lizards to Mr. Griffin later on. But had we not better tell him that in draftsman's language, a dotted line does not necessarily mean "underground." Something proposed, as distinct from something decided upon, or existent, is usually shown in dotted lines, and so it is with this railway line. Mr. Griffin had to do something, and he had not the time to do it in. His whole plan is characteristic of that, and Canberra as proposed (for which your versatile correspondent is fighting with both hands and both feet) is the result, viz., an ill-considered misfit.

His advice to Mr. Scott-Griffiths and to me to study the plans and contours, savours too much of the ridiculous to take him seriously at all. So far as he has shown us by his statements, he does not appear to be able to make much of the plans he himself has before him, although he assures us he is a certificated draftsman (Certificate 25.7-94). That is convincing, but what is really more so, is his extraordinary ignorance of the fact that in a process reduction the scale drawn upon a plan must suffer the same reduction as the plan itself. Geological considerations are of some importance in the selection of a site for a town, but they do not enter much into the present controversy.

I have at long last seen a plan of Mr. Griffin's work by the courtesy of someone other than your correspondent. On that plan the scale is correct. On the reputed copy of it, published by your correspondent, the scale is not the same; it has been tampered with by a draftsman, and is in error to an enormous extent. It is upon the veracity of that scale that I am charged with wilful misrepresentation. It is upon the veracity of that scale that your correspondent manages to get six miles of a straight course upon some ponds in the centre of a town, the total measurement of which, from east to west and from north to south, is something less than four miles, and on the diagonal about five and a half miles. I now also assert that there are no playgrounds upon Mr. Griffin's plan, for, like Mr. King O'Malley, "I looked at her," therefore I know now that I was right when I made that assertion before.

There is an old proverb which alleges that "fools rush in where angels fear to tread," not that I wish to convey that your correspondent is a fool by any means; while, at the same time, like the Scot, I hae ma doots about the angel part as well; but he does the rushing in very well, and manages to bump his head with a sickening thud each time. There are many things I fear that he knows more about than he does about town planning, railways, draining, etc., but he rushes in just the same with all the assurance that usually accompanies a superficial or imperfect knowledge of one's subject. How, for instance, can he reconcile a railway running both over a bridge and under it at the same time, with an underground station, well elevated above the surrounding country so as to be a conspicuous object for the admiration of all those who wish to look? I cannot help admiring your correspondent for the way in which he wriggles and squirms to find a cool place in the pan. He is wrong in every statement he makes, and there is no cool spot in that pan. I have before me a letter written by a town planner of note in America to a friend in Sydney, wherein he says, "I know Mr. Griffin fairly well, and believe that with a free hand and expert assistance from a city planner he can evolve a practical plan. . . . As it stands now I fear that the best possible solution will not be brought about, and another world opportunity will be but partially availed of." I am not at liberty to make use of names, but you, Sir, may see the letter if you wish it.

Your correspondent threatens to damn my professional status and that of the unoffending Institution of Surveyors, which it seems to hurt him so much that I should represent. He has risen sublimely in his wrath, and down must come the whole fabric of the surveyors unless I apologise to the public for my sins and misstatements. Well, Sir, it has taken me nearly forty years to gather together the little status which I happen to possess, and only a few days ago I had the proud satisfaction of a public acknowledgment from such estimable judges and citizens as Mr. Sulman and Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald; you may therefore believe that I tremble at the idea of my total extinction at the hands of the secretary of the Town Planning Association of New South Wales. Yet, not even to avert that dire calamity, nor yet to save the Institution of Surveyors, will I apologise to the public for my disinterested attempt to save their intended beautiful capital city from the hands of the despoiler, who, to my thinking, does not appear to care a dump for Canberra for its own sake. One may well ask what is the meaning of this fight to retain the bad and worse than bad features of what at best is but a poor attempt at city production when the misfitting plan comes to be applied to the ground. "Looking over our drawing boards and peering into the centuries" will not avail us much then without the shekels to back up the peering. Personally I would not like to see Canberra lost to us as the Federal capital, but if this abuse and misuse of the site is going to be insisted upon in order to please an American architect and a Sydney faddist, then I very much question whether it would not be better to allow the capital to remain where it is.

Mr. Kelly said, in November last, that he hoped to be in a position shortly to publish Mr. Griffin's plan and report. Neither of them has yet been published in the accepted sense of the terms, and yet we are treated to the humiliating spectacle of an utterly irresponsible gentleman walking about the city with a plan under his arm alleging it to be Mr. Griffin's final layout, and dictating what should and what should not be done, as though he were the great Mogul of the Commonwealth and all its dependencies. It seems to me as though the Federal Ministry are playing the game rather low down when they permit this state of things to go on from week to week: What is the Home Affairs Department thinking of when it passes over the great Australian press to go to a totally unknown man and thrust into his pocket information which belongs to those who have paid—and are still paying for it—the public of the Commonwealth of Australia?

Now, with regard to the Town Planning Association of New South Wales, its objects are published on its letterheads thus:—Objects: To advocate proper planning of Australian cities and towns; modern building legislation; efficient municipal government; up-to-date water, sewerage, and lighting services; to watch Federal city development, and other matters in keeping with the objects of this association. And I want to ask whether these objects are reflected in the letters of its secretary on the subject of Canberra. I do not think they are, and if the association is of a different opinion then I am afraid I cannot see my way to continue on its council of management. Finally, as your correspondent is so hurt at the Institution of Surveyors being so foolish as to have me for its president, and as I really do not like hurting his feelings any more than I can help, I will subscribe myself plainly as

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

QUALITY AND ECONOMY ARE THE ATTRIBUTES OF EVERY PIANO IN THIS SELLING.

Every instrument displayed at the British Pianoforte Showrooms has QUALITY especially—for quality is the dominating feature of such world-famed Pianos as the Thurmer, the Hapsburg, the Mignon—and these are but three Models that are included.

But the recognised high quality of these Instruments does NOT imply high prices, because these Models, though taken-in-exchange Pianos, and of high quality, are priced as Bargains, and Buyers further helped with easy terms.

NO OTHER HOUSE CAN GIVE YOU SUCH A SELECTION—HERE ARE JUST A FEW:—

PIANOS OF PROVED EXCELLENCE.

If, when purchasing a Piano, you expect to obtain an instrument which will give lasting and satisfactory service, DON'T experiment; it's too costly!

You will eliminate all chance of disappointment if you purchase one of our famous models.

For nearly thirty years we have been supplying pianos of the highest grade to many of the best homes in New South Wales, and the increasing business is due solely to the magnificent qualities embodied in these superior instruments.

The rich, mellow tone—the sympathetic touch—the remarkable durability—the handsome appearance, are features which combine to make these instruments so universally and deservedly popular.

Again, you will effect a substantial saving by purchasing at our Warehouse, as we do not merely buy wholesale, nor do we indent, but all instruments are selected at the factory, where we pay spot cash, and every advantage obtained is passed on to our satisfied clients.

Our SOLE AGENCIES comprise the following celebrated "makes":—

(1) The "Schiedmayer," used in most of the Royal Courts of Europe, and has taken first prizes at Exhibitions all over the world.

(2) The celebrated "KRAUSS," whose beautiful singing tone is the talk of the Trade.

(3) The "STEIN," which has become renowned all through the State and other colonies as a marvel of value.

(4) The "RAINSDORF," known by its sweetness and strength of tone, also perfect touch and handsome case.

Owing to the superiority of our instruments many people are parting with their pianos and replacing them with instruments selected from my stock. As a consequence we have among others the following splendid second-hand instruments for sale at reasonable prices:—

"BLUTHNER," "BECHSTEIN," "SCHWACHTEN," "SCHMIDT," "BROADWOOD."

Every new instrument is fully covered with a guarantee. A liberal discount will be allowed for cash, while terms can be arranged to suit clients. Satisfaction is always assured. Write now for catalogues to

HIGH-CLASS SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES.
ELVY AND COMPANY
have much pleasure in inviting the attention of families who wish to purchase a HIGH-CLASS SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTE to the Instruments they are now in a position to offer at Favourable Prices, for their condition for actual service is nearly equal to those Quite New.

It is no guide for the present value that the perhaps very high original cost is quoted. The value of the Piano must be consistent with its PRESENT CONDITION, Efficient Service being the desire of all Buyers.

We have THREE HORIZONTAL GRANDS, of Brilliant Tone, by Makers of great reputation. They are in Splendid Order.

No. 1 is a Brilliant-toned COLLARD and COLLARD, New Model Short Grand.

This is a Lovely Piano, only a FEW MONTHS in use. A Similar Model, NEW, in our STOCK, is £110. This Bargain is only £95.

No. 2 is a BLUTHNER—Boudoir Model—in Rose Case, perfectly renovated, and for service as a New Piano.

A Similar Model, NEW, would not now cost less than £130.

This Bargain is only £70.

No. 3 is a Boudoir BECHSTEIN Grand, in an Ebonised Case.

This is a fine specimen of the Bechstein Pianos. It is in clean condition, has been but little and artistically used, so that its condition for service is most satisfactory. A Similar Model, New, would cost about £170. This Bargain is only £70.

Of Upright Pianofortes we offer as really in Splendid Order for Service the following by High-class Makers:—

|---|---|
| Do., BRINSMEAD, Ebonised | £45 |
| A Fine ROSENKRANZ, in Walnut, only | £50 |
| A Fine ROSENKRANZ, Ebonised, only | £45 |
| A Fine Ebonised SIMON, only | £38 |

The above six Upright Models are also great opportunities for Buyers, as the prices quoted are largely under the present Cost of similar Models quite new.

BEALE PIANOS, BEALE.
You are cordially invited to call and see the BEALE PLAYER-PIANO.

The tone and touch are everything that could be desired, the instrument being readily converted into an ordinary piano. The player action is the most modern in the world, metal being used in all parts where possible, in order to prevent any warping or shrinkage, the compass being 88 notes. It also contains the SOLODANT and AUTO-PEDAL. These, with other mechanical contrivances, enable the performer to produce an interpretation as near as possible to that obtained when played by hand.

Pianos that have remained out of use through the inability of the owners to play them and old pianos taken in exchange, and the utmost value allowed.

FARM AND STATION.

BULK HANDLING.

In answer to questions raised by some Riverina farmers as to how wheat would be handled on the farm under the bulk-handling system, we pointed out that practical men would speedily ascertain the simplest and most economical contrivance for doing this work. Some suggestions made in Western Australia were also given. How groundless is any assumption of difficulty in this direction is shown by an interesting letter to hand from Mr. John Flanagan, a farmer with 50 years' experience, a long period of which was spent growing wheat in the Gunbar district, many miles from a railway. After pointing out the loss that occurs with the bag system from bush fire, damage by weather and other causes, and the fact that the annual saving in expenditure for bags, would pay the interest on the capital necessary for installing the bulk-handling system, Mr. Flanagan writes:—"I have used a horse-power winnower for 20 years, which elevated the cleaned wheat so that it ran into the bags. These winnowers could be made to run the wheat direct into a box-cart. Out of the cart the wheat could be pumped into a home granary, from which it could be run into the box-dray for transportation to railway silos after harvest. The wheat would be graded before being put into the latter, and the grower would get a receipt for the amount of his wheat, showing the grade of it. Once his wheat was stored in a silo it would be safe from destruction. The grower would not need to hurry in selling to the middlemen, and when he did sell there could be no law suit about the quality of the wheat sold. Thus farmers could be selling all the year round as fancy pleased them. We would hear no more about 'scarcity of trucks.' The many benefits that would accrue to the farmers are so obvious to me that I cannot understand some of them objecting to the bulk-handling of wheat as long as the Government and not the companies dealt with the matter. If Government charges were too high for the benefits rendered, they would be always open to amendment by the pressure of political power. But if private companies had a monopoly in the erection of the silos and elevators, then farmers might well dread the new departure. A farmer of 50 years' experience, I cannot see if a farmer erected his own granary on the farm that he would need to buy many bags (even with a harvester) to put his wheat into the home granary."

As there may be a doubt in the minds of some growers as to the practicability of carting wheat in bulk to the railways, it is of interest to find it proved by local experience to not only be practical, but economical. The report of the Western Australian Bulk-handling of Grain Advisory furnishes an account of what we believe is the first instance in Australia of grain being sold and carted in bulk. The report states:—

"That loose or bulk grain can be transported from the farm was proved beyond doubt last season by Mr. Jas. M'Manus, Minnatorpe, Northam. This gentleman successfully carried out a contract with the Standard Flour Mill, Northam, to deliver 11,000 bushels of bulk grain. To carry the bulk grain he had two tanks or boxes built to fit on to his ordinary hay waggon. The first tank he had made was constructed of plain sheet iron, strengthened with bar iron, and weighs 9cwt. Its total cost—labour and material—was £20. The sides of the second tank were made of ordinary galvanised corrugated roofing iron, fastened to a light frame of oregon scantling, the top and bottom being of plain galvanised iron. The weight of the second tank is only 5cwt, and the cost for the material was £5. The cost of labour was not ascertained, as the tank was made on the farm, principally by Mr. M'Manus himself. The wheat intended for transportation in bulk was harvested into bags in the usual way, but the bags were tied instead of being sewn. The wheat was loaded from the tied bags through a door in the top of the 'tank,' the bags being elevated to this position by being placed on a small sack trolley with flanged wheels. This trolley runs on a set of angle iron rails, secured to the back of the waggon. It is drawn from the ground to the top of the box by two double wire rope lines passing over pulleys at the top of the framework and brought back to a simple hand windlass, also attached to the framework of the waggon at a convenient height from the ground. The bottom part of the framework is hinged to the top portion, so that for convenience when travelling it can be swung out of the way. The dimensions of the waggon 'boxes' or 'tanks' are 12ft x 4ft 6in x 3ft 6in, and they carry about 165 bushels each, and are emptied by means of a hole in the bottom, which is opened and closed by a slide door, operated by a simple screw worked from the side of the waggon. The time occupied in emptying one of these tanks is 20 minutes. The bulk of the contents runs unaided through the outlet, and when almost empty the driver enters the tank and sweeps the grain on the flat floor to the opening. Though debiting the single year's transactions with the cost of both waggon tanks, Mr. M'Manus estimates that as the result of handling 11,000 bushels in bulk he effected a saving of £62 10s, and has kindly supplied the undermentioned details:—Altogether he had about 20,000 bushels of wheat to send away. To deal with all these in bags he would have had to purchase 6500 bags. He, however, only purchased 4200, so that he saved—first, the initial cost of 2300 bags, £65; second, the value of 1335 bags, which of the 4200 bags purchased he still has on hand, and which as second-hand bags, are valued at £22 10s. The gross saving was £87 10s, less the cost of waggon 'tanks,' £20 and £5, £25; total, £62 10s. Carting to the mill and harvesting were going on simultaneously, so that the bags in use after being emptied into the tanks were immediately available for refilling in the field."

Very rightly the board considered the work done by Mr. M'Manus as an "important pioneering transaction in the problem of obtaining better methods." Such practical experience should go a long way towards convincing any growers that entertain doubts regarding the bulk handling system. The promised innovation is of such great importance that the fullest discussion of all practical points is desirable. And there is no need to fear that such discussion will have any other effect than to emphasise the benefits that will result with the introduction of modern improved methods of transporting wheat.

TICKS DISCOVERED.

The "Kyogle Examiner" writes:—"A serious discovery of tick is reported from Fawcett's Plain, where a couple of farmers on Thursday were found to have become victims of the pest. More than usual interest attaches to this infestation, as it is the first to involve dairymen in the application of the six months' dipping conditions. A dip is situated adjacent to the infested holdings, and unless alterations in the regulations are previously made the full course, apparently, will have to be gone through. The experiment, therefore, will be watched with interest, as it has so often been claimed that continuous dipping does not deleteriously affect dairy herds, once the effects of the initial immersions have worn off. We hear the department is now manufacturing its own medicament. Mr. Max Henry, when in Kyogle, asserted that the fluid would be absolutely harmless to stock, so that its use here will provide further matter for interesting speculation."

NOXIOUS WEEDS.

NOOGOORA BURR.

The presence of the Noogoora Burr on large areas of leasehold land on the Queensland border is causing serious trouble and loss to New South Wales settlers, who are embraced by the Tweed, Kyogle, Tenterfield, Ashford, Tallarot, Boolaroo, and Boomi shires. Mr. J. Higgins, president of the Ashford Shire, pointed out how desirable it was that the Queensland and New South Wales laws with regard to the compulsory destruction of noxious weeds should be brought into uniformity. An effort is being made, he said, to induce the Government of the northern State to fall into line with New South Wales. In this State it is compulsory to destroy noxious weeds on both freehold and leasehold land, while in Queensland the compulsion ends with freehold properties. The result is that destructive weeds flourish on many leasehold areas, and where these are on the borders of the two States, New South Wales suffers. This particular complaint about the Noogoora Burr arises because nearly all the land along the Queensland side of the Sovereign River is leasehold, and this burr flourishes unchecked. The New South Wales settlers have kept it in check, but their efforts are nullified because the burr grows prolifically all along the low-lying ground on the Queensland side. It reaches a height of ten to twelve feet, and contains millions of seed, of a size larger than the ordinary Bathurst burr. With every fresh that comes down the river this seed is carried on to the low-lying flats of the shires mentioned. New South Wales settlers are compelled to destroy it, and do so, but the neglect of the Queensland leaseholders, whose cattle runs skirt the river, renders the land and the stock of this State liable to be seriously affected. New South Wales stock, when going to water, bring back large quantities of this seed, and distribute it over cleared areas in this State. The burr is specially destructive to wool, the value of which it has been known to reduce by as much as 3d to 4d per lb.

Similar trouble with this and other noxious weeds, said Mr. Higgins, is experienced all over New South Wales, by reason of the fact that nothing is being done to clear the stock routes of noxious weeds. Not only is the Government doing nothing itself, but it has, he says, refused to give the various P.P. boards either the authority or the money to cut and destroy noxious weeds on stock routes. The Shires Association, of which Mr. Higgins is also president, has approached the Minister on this question, and legislation on this point has been promised. This will complete the effective administration of the Noxious Weeds Act, so far as this State is concerned. This, however, will be of no use along the border, at any rate, unless the Queensland Government will fall into line.

WORLD'S HIGHEST TREES.

A popular notion formerly held (writes an English exchange) was that America claimed the tallest tree in the world in the "Sequoia Wellingtonia." But researches show that one specimen of the Australian gum, the "Eucalyptus Amygdalina" overtops the "Wellingtonia." In the Dandenong ranges this tree has reached 480ft. This splendid tree, therefore, surpasses the highest spire in the world, and is superior, probably, to the great pyramid of Cheops.

Some of these trees are reported to be 53ft in circumference, and, as to age, must have existed for many centuries. The late Dr. Woolls, a well-known Australian botanist, computed that the gum would not exceed a diameter of 6ft in less than 200 or 300 years, and he went on to suggest that the trees of enormous height mentioned above must have been 1000 or 2000 years old.

THE NEW ABATTOIRS.

CONFERENCE OF MEAT INDUSTRY.

In May last the Carcase Butchers' Association, the Pastoralists' Union, and other bodies, being anxious to ascertain how the establishment of the Government abattoirs would affect the meat industry, asked the department for information, but as the replies could not be furnished a conference was convened by the Premier, with the view of arriving at an understanding. This conference was held yesterday in the Chief Secretary's office, when delegates thoroughly representative of the industry attended. These included Messrs. J. B. Deakin (member of the Abattoirs Board), W. F. Jaques (Pastoralists' Union), T. I. Campbell (secretary of the Farmers and Settlers' Association), H. N. MacLaurin (representing the Fellmongers' Association), T. A. Field, A. H. Moore, S. Fallick (secretary of the Carcase Butchers' Association), W. H. Watson (secretary of the Fat Stock Buyers' Association), C. Thompson (president), P. W. Tancred, Nicholls (secretary of the Master Butchers' Association), Mallett (representing the Retail Butchers' Association), Acocks, G. H. King (secretary of the Board of Health), Moesche (secretary of the Meat Board), Frazer, Slatter, Badgery, Meggitt, and Gale. Mr. J. Davies, Director of Public Works, was in the chair.

Mr. Moore advocated the retention of the private slaughterhouses. He said that the experiment was tried in Adelaide of doing away with the private places, but it was not a success, as the cost of treating mutton increased by 125 per cent., while that for beef was about 130 per cent. higher. He said that it must not be overlooked that Glebe Island had been looked upon as the head slaughtering place of the country for years past, and if this establishment was closed up along with others a large number of men would be thrown out of business.

Mr. Thompson was of the opinion that all outside slaughterhouses, with three exceptions, over 15 miles from the new abattoirs should be brought in, for then there would, he said, be equal competition.

Mr. Meggitt (representing the Wholesale Co-operative Society) urged that no restrictions be placed on private enterprise—any company should be allowed to start.

Mr. Gale (representing the bacon-curing industry) said that the bacon-curing factories would be greatly affected if they were not allowed to have their own killing establishments.

Mr. Field said that the slaughtering industry should be under the control of one body, and all private slaughterhouses should be included. If the board decided to allow two or three such businesses to continue it would be against the best interests of the industry.

It was eventually decided that the conference was in favour of allowing private slaughter-yards under efficient control.

Among other matters discussed was the question as to whether the board intended to lease the mutton and beef slaughterhouses at the new abattoirs at an upset annual rental, a method favoured by many of the delegates, but Mr. Davis said that the Government had decided not to lease the houses.

With reference to the killing of meat for export, Mr. Davis said that the Government proposed to erect freezing works on the abattoirs area to cost about £30,000. The works, if erected, would be capable of dealing with 10,000 sheep and about 600 head of cattle per day, the cold-storage space being equal to 28 days' killing.

Mr. Field considered that the Government intended to do the right thing in providing the accommodation for the export trade, but carriage by rail to port was unsuitable. He thought that the works should be erected near the water—at Glebe Island for preference—and the carcases be sent down by boat.

Mr. Davis said that the question to be considered was whether the freezing and storing should be carried out where the animals were killed or elsewhere. He said that the Government was of the opinion that the "divorcing" of the two would result in tainted meat.

Mr. Field said that the methods at present used in this State needed altering, and if such were done he saw no reason why our meat should not compete with the New Zealand article.

RABBIT INDUSTRY.

FREEZING WORKS CLOSED.

DUBBO, Tuesday.

After being shut down for several months, the freezing works were opened at the beginning of the year, but after a short run of a fortnight work is again temporarily suspended.

Mr. E. Finn, the trapper's organiser, says that before they resumed work the trappers of Dubbo and Wongarbon interviewed him in respect to conditions under which they would start work. "I had seen the manager of the local works," said Mr. Finn, "and he offered 5d for big rabbits, and 1d for small rabbits; so I concluded it would be unfair to advise men not to commence work. They all, therefore, started, with the result that during the past two weeks they have supplied between two and three thousand pairs a day, but at the end of two weeks the manager announced a reduction in price. He said he would make three grades, and pay 4d, 3d, and 2d for them. This price we considered equivalent to 3d all round. The trappers of Dubbo met at the works, but the manager refused to attend. It was there decided to give the manager till next Wednesday (to-morrow) morning to agree to pay 5d and 1d, and he has been advised that failing his submission, the trappers will require 6d and 2d after Thursday morning."

Mr. Finn says that before they ceased work last year the manager complained of heavy storage charges in London, but he contends that the storage charges in London are now minimised owing to the consumption being heavy in the winter months. Prior to the 1913 strike the manager also said that if the supplies were larger, so that the men would be kept busy at work, the company would be in a position to pay a bigger rate for rabbits.

The manager, Mr. Nicholas, of the freezing works, states that prices were lowered because the company would be losing if they paid the higher rates. The English market for rabbits will expire about the beginning of March, and any consignments at the present time and for the next three or four months would find practically no sale, consequently it would be necessary for the company to place any rabbits purchased during that time in storage, and keep them there until the market revived.

The manager claims that it is unreasonable for the men to expect the same price for rabbits in season as when there is little demand at Home for them. With regard to the price paid at the beginning of the season, Mr. Nicholas states that the price was fixed at 5d and 1d because it was a fair paying investment for the company, and the price was lowered when the value of rabbits and the demand decreased. He says that if the lower scale had been offered at the start it would have been accepted.

DAIRYING INDUSTRY.

GOOD SEASON PROMISED NEW ZEALAND.

AMERICAN MARKETS.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Jan. 21.

Inquiries made go to show the probability of the present dairying season proving one of the most profitable that has been experienced by New Zealand farmers for a number of years. Last winter having been a somewhat mild one, the greater attention which farmers have paid to the feeding of their stock has resulted in the cows coming into profit in better condition than in previous years. This policy of paying more attention to supplying the cattle with extra feed in the winter months is rapidly extending. The spring was an early one, and feed having been plentiful since then, large quantities of milk and cream have been supplied.

One of the main features of this year's dairy business in the dairy industry is the opening up of the new market for New Zealand butter in the United States. Already about 500 tons has been exported to America—principally to San Francisco—and quite a number of orders have yet to be filled. Some small consignments of New Zealand butter have also found their way to New York and Chicago, via London. Those who are in a position to judge, believe there will be a steadily increasing demand for butter in that country, as numerous inquiries are coming to hand asking for particulars with regard to shipments from New Zealand, and reports indicate that so far the quantity of butter sent has given entire satisfaction. The demand in Vancouver for New Zealand butter has been very satisfactory, and no fewer than 1500 tons has already this season been exported to that place.

While neither of these markets has yet given us an opening for the sale of our cheese, we are certainly reaping some benefit from the reduction in the United States tariff on dairy produce, because it is having the effect of enabling the producers in Canada to sell to advantage large quantities of cheese, which were formerly shipped to England, which means that the Canadian exports to Great Britain have fallen off considerably, and, fortunately, New Zealand has been able, in a measure, to make up this deficiency in the supply, and at a payable price.

It will be necessary to increase the carrying capacity for frozen produce on the steamers trading between New Zealand and America. It has been clearly shown that the trade is there waiting to be done, providing we can get our products shipped away promptly to meet orders which are likely to come to hand. As a matter of fact, larger supplies could have been sent in that direction this season if space had been available on the boats. The freight on frozen butter from New Zealand to San Francisco is also considered abnormally high, being 4s 8d per half cwt. box (or 1d per lb), as against 2s 6d per box from New Zealand to England.

THE CORRIEDALE.

Judging by the number of orders which are reaching New Zealand from South America, it would appear that sheepowners in the latter country are impressed with the Corriedale breed both for mutton and wool. Last week Mr. C. A. Ensor, of White Rock, Canterbury, consigned 15 stud rams to a breeder at Punta Arenas, South America. Other orders recently filled include 10 flock rams at 3½gns. to a Hobart purchaser, and 15 ewes at 5gns., a stud ram at 15gns., and 10 flock rams at 4gns., to a New South Wales client.

BAD OR WASTE FRUIT.

The destruction of rotten or bad fruit is compulsory under the Fruit Pests Act, but many fruiterers in the country, handling, as they do, large quantities of fruit, always have a certain amount that has to be destroyed, and at times its disposal by means of the garbage tin is not always satisfactory. Mr. A. Roughley, fruit inspector for the Blue Mountains, recently brought under the notice of the Department of Agriculture the fact that at Katoomba a certain amount of rotten fruit is sent to the local tip, and, being in a pulpy condition, sufficient time is given for any pest to pupate before it is consumed by a slow smouldering fire, which is burning on the outskirts of the tip. The most serious point is that the fruit, which is reduced to pulp on being tipped, could not very well be collected and burnt if so desired. It appears that the practice in Sydney is for fruiterers to arrange with pig or poultry farmers to collect all waste from the shops and boil it for feed. The department suggests that similar arrangements might be made on the mountains and in other country centres; otherwise it will be compulsory that all bad fruits will have to be destroyed on the premises. The present metod of disposal is considered quite unsatisfactory.

PASTURES BOARDS.

MUDGEE.—The Mudgee Pastures Board further considered the position created by the overwhelming demands made for wombat bonus of 10s per head. At the last meeting it was decided to ask claimants to accept 6s. The secretary stated that although notices had been sent to all claimants, only half a dozen had replied. One man had issued a default summons against the board, and as no defence had been entered he was entitled to judgment. The claims amounted to £570. The ordinary expenses of the board for the year reached £780. A rate of 3d on large stock, and three-eights of a penny on sheep would yield £1475, leaving a balance of £125 for bonuses the board might desire to offer. Mr. Cox moved that these rates be received. Mr. Webb moved an amendment that before the rate be levied, the salary inspector be reduced £30, and that of the clerk £15. This was seconded by Mr. Dunn and carried. It was decided to strike a rate of 2½d on large stock, and 3s per hundred on sheep. It was also resolved that the directors' expenses be reduced by half. Each of these motions was carried by a majority of one. It was decided to give one month's notice of dismissal to the rabbit inspector. A bonus of £1 was offered on dingoes.

THE RABBIT PEST.

P. P. BOARD CRITICISED.

ALBION PARK.—Leading dairy farmers complain of the Kiama district Stock and Pastures Protection Board levying and collecting a rate on cattle throughout the district and giving no material benefit in return. It is about seven years since rabbits first made their appearance in Illawarra district, having come by way of roads over Illawarra Range, and up to the present time the board has done nothing to prevent the spread of the pest, nor to eradicate by any means the great numbers already on lands adjacent to the mountain range. So bad has the pest become near Macquarie Pass that a number of farms have been entirely abandoned, and 26 farms which some years ago supported a family are now unoccupied. The fact of such dairying lands being rabbit infested is having the effect of reducing the values of same, and the municipal values suffer thereby. The writer knows of no case where the board has taken any steps to have the rabbits destroyed, nor have any proceedings been taken to compel owners of infested lands to destroy the rabbits. A few owners of lands which were infested have had their holdings wire-netted, and by use of poison and fumigator have cleared such holdings. If action had been taken six or seven years ago by the board to compel owners to destroy the pest no more than 20 persons would have been affected, whereas now the pest has extended all over the district, and may be found in numbers near the ocean north of Kiama and Shellharbour. In dry times vegetables and green crops suffer considerably from the depredations of the pest, and unless some action is taken to rid the district of the pest the dairying industry must suffer to a very great extent, as the carrying capacity of the farms will be very considerably reduced through the number of rabbits living on the herbage and crops.

No action has been taken by the board in regard to the eradication of noxious weeds and plants. Prickly pear has been growing for some years on several farms, and there is danger of the spread of same to adjacent farms. The same applies to thistles, Bathurst burr, blackberry, lantana, Cape weed, etc., which are allowed to grow as the seasons and landholders permit, and in very few instances is any action taken by landholders to eradicate such noxious plants. It is very annoying for farmers who endeavour to keep their lands clean to find every spring a crop of noxious weeds shooting up on their land, as the result of seed being blown or carried by birds from adjacent infested farms.

TRAPPERS MAKING GOOD MONEY.

FOREST REEFS.—The rabbit trade is again very active after a spell of several months, during which the rodents have increased to enormous proportions. The Orange and Blayney freezing works have opened up, and are buying large quantities. Loads up to 400 pairs are daily going through, and many are rabbiting and making good money. Up to £3 to £5 per week is said to be common. Many of the landholders depend on the trappers, and though the price per pair is somewhat low, viz., 4d, a rise is anticipated with the coming cooler weather.

RECORD WHEAT LOAD.

FORBES, Tuesday.

What is considered the record load of wheat was carted to the Forbes railway station by Herbert Hodges, of Budgerabong. The waggon, which was drawn by 11 horses, held 225 bags, weighing 18 tons 2cwt. The waggon weighed another 3 tons. The leading horse of the team was 22 years of age.

DAIRYING.

MARGARINE COMPETITION.

COFF'S HARBOUR.—The report of the Coff's Harbour Butter Factory Company for the five months ended November 30 last is very satisfactory, and shows a profit of £56 19s 9d. The feature of the report is the large sales locally, £1725. The butter manufactured for the period, and inclusive of December, totalled 100,954lb, as against 101,723lb for that period last year, showing a decrease of 769lb. Regarding second-class cream the directors again appealed to all suppliers to do their utmost to forward only sound, first-class cream, and pointed out that although choice first quality butter need not fear competition from margarine, second grade is becoming more difficult to dispose of, when placed in competition with the present day scientifically prepared substitute, and therefore must show a great loss to the producer. Suppliers have the remedy in their own hands to avoid this loss, as, during the hot summer weather, they should all use one of the simple dairy cream coolers now on the market, which, combined with care and cleanliness, is the solution of the trouble.

MEETINGS OF FARMERS.

TEMORA.—The Local Farmers' District Council carried a resolution asking the next annual conference of the F.S.A. to debate the question of the advisableness of asking the Government to erect wheat elevators on the seaboard only for the present, in view of the heavy expense of installation throughout the country.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

DELEGATE.—The weather continues dry and warm. Crops are being cut, and are not very good in most cases. The potatoes need rain very badly. Fortunately there have been sufficient showers during the past few weeks to reduce the risk of bush fires. A good deal of live stock insurances against bush fires has been effected. Wire-netting has been carried on extensively for several years, and is still going ahead. Several landholders propose subdividing into smaller paddocks, believing that they will then have a better chance of beating the rabbits.

GOSFORD SHOW.

The annual exhibition of Gosford and Brisbane Water S. and H. Association was officially opened by Mr. W. M. Fleming, M.P., on Friday, and continued the following day. In view of the dry season the display was highly creditable, and speaks well for the possibilities of the district. The pavilion was fairly well filled, the principal winners in the needlework section being Mrs. Hadfield, of Goulburn, Mrs. Chapman, and B. Harrigan. School exhibits were unusually good, four Public schools competing each with good work, Kincumber leading the van. The chief winner for citrus fruits (for which the district is eminently adapted) was S. J. Black apples, O. J. Gates. Ring events were good, the trotting being specially so. The district handicap was won by The Coon, owned and trained by R. Brownlee. Gosford Handicap by V. J. M'Kenzie's Thelma, with E. Wright's Lady Briton second. Ladies' hack, ridden by Miss Douglas, first, with Mrs. Stace second. In poultry most honours were secured by G. Gondman, of Camden.

A special feature of the show was the excellent luncheon provided by the ladies of Narara, proceeds from which go towards the erecting of a School of Arts at that centre. Financially as well as otherwise, the show was a success, and will lead to bigger fixtures in the future, the trotting track promising to be one of the best.

HOLIDAY IN THE COUNTRY.

GOULBURN HIGHLAND GATHERING.

GOULBURN, Tuesday.

The twenty-fifth Highland Gathering was held on the show ground. The weather was fine, but warm. The competitors included a number from Sydney. The attendance was good. Results:—

Eldridge, 1; P. Cowling, 2. Anniversary handicap, mile bicycle race: J. Payne, 65 yds, 1; H. N. Gannon, 20yds, 2; C. F. Ellis, 110yds, 3. Time, 2m 19s. Running long jump: F. Brogan (2ft), 18ft 6in, 1; G. Gorman (scr.), 18ft 4in, 2. Woodchopping handicap: P. Collins, 4s beh., 1; H. Pooley, scr., 2; H. Hogan, 10s, 3. Time, 1m 23s. Foot race, 100yds: E. Godfrey (12), 1; Watson (13½), 2; G. Gorman (13), 3. Time, 10s. Sheaf-pitching: G. Folkard, 30ft, 1; D. Robertson, 28ft, 2. Tug-of-war: Scottish team won.

SPORTS AT SINGLETON.

SINGLETON, Tuesday.

The holiday was observed by a big sports gathering on the Show Ground. The results of the principal events were:—

All-comers' Handicap, 75yds: H. Ballantyne (7½), 1; E. Dunn (4), 2; J. J. Gleeson (5½), 3. Won by six inches. Time, 8s.

Pony Trot, 1m.—W. Smith's Delight (20s beh.), 1; M. Frith's Lady Jean (15s beh.), 2. Winner's time, 3m.

Half-mile Bicycle Handicap.—W. Adams, jun. (85), 1; F. Hinde (25), 2; V. Holtz (75), 3. Time, 1m 6s.

Pony Hunter's Jump.—T. Stewart's Fairy, 1; G. Moore's Airlea, 2.

Time Handicap Trot, 2m.—W. Smith's Delight (35s beh.), 1; L. Alcorn's Corkscrew (35s beh.), 2. Time, 5m 56s.

One-mile Bicycle Handicap.—W. Adams, jun. (175), 1; V. Holtz (160), 2; C. Short (70), 3. Time, 3m 23s.

MILITARY TOURNAMENT.

ALBURY, Tuesday.

The annual parade and tournament in connection with the local military forces took place in fine weather. The forces on parade were the seventeenth battery Field Artillery, F Company, 43rd Infantry, besides four local companies of senior cadets. The visitors included Lieutenant-colonel Pearce, officer-in-charge 6th Field Artillery Brigade, who represented the State Commandant; and Lieutenant-colonel Wilkinson. The tournament resulted as follows:—

Area competition, teams of 10, physical drill, marching, and general turnout: M Company, 84 points; L Company, 73; E Company, 63; N Company, 60. Bicycle race, 1 mile: Cadet Eisenhauer, 1; Cadet D. E. Bockman, 2. Hurdle race: Gunner C. Cox, 1; Gunner C. Baker, 2. Flag relay race: Private Fromholt's team, 1; Colour-sergeant Rickard's team, 2. Tilting at ring on horseback: G. Osborne, 1; Sergeant Toomey, 2; Gunner Hinks, 3. Tilting at ring on cycle: Sergeant O'Reilly, 1; Colour-sergeant Steele, 2. Jumping, in sections: Sergeant Fromholtz's team, 1. Tug-o'-war: Q.M.S. M'Cullock's team, 1. Flag race: Constable Morris, 1; A. C. Osborne, 2. Open bicycle race: L. Fromholtz, 1; W. J. Cossor, 2; A. Ferguson, 3. Gretna Green race: M'Donald and Broker, 1; David and Monk, 2.

LABOUR DAY AT PORTLAND.

PORTLAND, Tuesday.

An Eight-hour Demonstration was held here on Monday in fine though warm weather. A banquet was held on Saturday night in connection with the celebration, and this was largely attended. Messrs. E. S. Carr, M.P., J. Dooley, W. F. Dunn, and E. Durack, Ms.L.A. were also present. A procession of members of the various trades employed in the town and district marched through the principal portions of the town, and then to the Sports Ground, where a long programme of pedestrian and other events was gone through. About one thousand persons attended the sports.

The following are the results of the principal events:—

Opening Handicap, 100yds.—V. Mortlock, 8yds, 1; A. Martyn, 10yds, 2.

Demonstration Handicap, 130yds.—V. Mortlock, 9½yds, 1; A. Martyn, 11½yds, 2.

Ladies' Race.—Mrs. L. Taylor, 1; Mrs. G. Goodman, 2.

Best Spectacular Display in Procession.—H. L. Tweedie.

MOUNTAIN TRAINS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—At 40 miles an hour the fish rushes through. The excursionists who thronged the train waving and laughing in derision at 47 travellers stranded on the Glenbrook Station—47 regular ticket-holders, who, in order to reach their place of business catch the fish train (sometimes). The 47 swore, not at Mr. Johnson this morning, but cursed the whole railway system from ticket-seller to High Commissioner, impartially, and with good cause.

Railway management that places excursionists before the regular traveller and allows 'Arry and his Donah to crowd out the man, who, by regular travelling, furnishes the needful by which the railway passenger traffic is carried on, is management run mad.

Behold the spectacle—47 business men, who in nine cases out of 10 must be in their offices by 9 a.m., forced to wait while 'Arry and his Donah, nursed by the protecting management, arrive in Sydney at 8.45 a.m. If the man who made the time table this morning, and who allowed the fish to rush through the stations between Springwood and Penrith without stopping to take up their regular passengers, could have been sighted, he would now be no more. This game of sending the fish right through is about played out. The sooner the Commissioners awaken to the fact that business people must get to Sydney, even after their holidays, at their usual time, the better. The patience of travellers living on the lower steps of the Mountains, is about exhausted. Threats were made this morning that if the fish train attempted to run through again, the travellers would stop the train themselves. Rather drastic idea this, but one which might wake up the railway people to the rights of the regular traveller. I am, etc.,

MASTER BUILDERS.

DAY LABOUR.

COSTLY SYSTEM CONDEMNED.

The annual meeting of the Master Builders' Association was held last evening at the Builders' Exchange, Castlereagh-street, and was largely attended. The president, Mr. G. P. Jones, junior, occupied the chair. The secretary, Mr. Phelps Richards, presented the annual report, which contained the statement of the year's building in the city and suburbs as published on January 9.

The report referred to the general slackness of trade that characterised the opening months of last year. This was held to be largely due to caution on the part of the financial institutions necessarily engendered by the socialistic experiments of the Labour Government. The natural demand of the growing population for houses overcame the tendency to slackness, and there still remained a great deal of building to be done before the supply equalled the demand. The increased cost of construction might be relieved if a comprehensive Building Act were passed that would allow modern systems of construction to be utilised in place of the present requirements of the City of Sydney Improvement Act for brick or stone walls of extreme thickness, which not only added to the cost, but reduced considerably the internal accommodation of the buildings.

The efforts of the association to overcome the labour shortage by means of immigration had proved successful. It had been considered advisable to establish a permanent office to regulate the flow of immigration, and to attend to the matter of employment. In conjunction with other organisations, an office was established in Phillip-street.

Referring to the Day Labour Department tendering against builders, the report states that in almost every instance private contractors tendered lower than the department, but in spite of this, the work was carried out by day labour. Such action was obviously unfair. However, representations were made to the Minister, with the result that the Minister offered a small amount of compensation to the lowest tenderers in some instances, and in other instances reversed his decision to carry out the work by day labour, and accepted the lowest tenderer.

In regard to industrial matters, the report expressed the opinion that the settlement of disputes by conciliation in preference to legal arbitration would be productive of much good.

On the question of apprentices the following comment appeared in the report:—"There has been so far no attempt to revise the legislation dealing with apprentices, in spite of the fact that a Royal Commission sat for some considerable time in 1912 to inquire into this subject. It is a matter for regret that the Legislature does not take this subject up and give it the consideration due to such an important question."

The president moved the adoption of the report. He said they could congratulate themselves upon having got through a large amount of work during the year, and the members had shared in the prosperity of the times.

Mr. William Williamson seconded the adoption of the report, and referred to the necessity for a new Building Act. He said many attempts had been made to place a comprehensive Building Act upon the Statute Book, but no Government had yet the courage to deal with such a bill, which was so necessary in the public interest. One of the brightest phases of the report was the conciliation work carried out during the year in meeting the men in conference over working awards.

Mr. Buchanan condemned the system of flats for workmen and their families, who were being driven out of the city, but who could get plenty of land in the suburbs upon which to build bright homes. He thought the association should give an opinion upon the question of the height of buildings in the city. He did not believe in tall buildings. Let them go further afield, and then they would not have men and women working in artificially-lighted rooms, due to the congested state of the tall buildings in narrow streets. There was also the danger of fire.

Mr. D. Stewart said the object of the day labour system was not to give the public value for their money, but simply to find work for a large body of them who were shifted about at election times in order to vote "the ticket." At the present time, for every £5,000,000 expended upon public works, the public did not get value for more than £3,000,000 under the day labour system. It was a disgrace and a waste of public funds. The railways were being built at a cost that would stagger the public if it only knew the exact figures. It was not only a question of cost, but the class of work carried out was not up to standard.

Several other members supported the adoption of the report, which was agreed to.

The financial statement was presented by the treasurer, Mr. Loveridge, and was adopted.

The following were elected officers for the ensuing year:—President, Mr. William Williamson; senior vice-president, Mr. J. T. Turner; junior vice-president, Mr. J. M'Intyre; hon. treasurer, Mr. A. Loveridge; committee of management, Messrs. G. P. Jones, jun., J. M. Pringle, D. Stewart, W. J. Foster, A. E. Boroughs, W. G. Partridge, A. M. Sweetnam, T. Loveridge, and Walter Stuart.

A motion of sympathy with the widow and family of the late Colonel Vernon was carried.

MR. WILLIAM WILLIAMSON,

Who was last evening elected president of the Master Builders' Association, has been for the last 31 years connected with the building trade of New South Wales, principally in Sydney, where for a number of years he has carried out the work of erecting some of the principal buildings, including the Bank of New South Wales in Pitt-street, and several of the large wool stores at Pyrmont. At the present time Mr. Williamson is engaged erecting several large buildings in the metropolitan area, including additions to St. Andrew's College. Mr. Williamson has always been an active worker in the interests of the Master Builders' Association, both as a member of the committee of management and as vice-president. His election to the presidentship was a popular and unanimous one.

REXONA CURES PILES.

Women who suffer from Piles are especially unfortunate in that they cannot talk about their complaint—they must suffer in silence. To all such Rexona comes as a great blessing, for it is easily obtained, easily applied, and the result is always gratifying. The distressing symptoms quickly subside, and mind and body both feel relief from the constant strain almost after the first application.

"I should like to say a few words of praise in regard to Rexona Ointment," writes Mrs. Maggie Munro, Cooper-street, Balmain, N.S.W. "I had been suffering from Piles for some little time, and had tried a variety of well-advertised ointments for my complaint, but I only grew worse all the time. A friend presented me with a tin of Rexona, and being something quite new I gave it a trial. The result was a very pleasant surprise, for in the course of about four day's treatment with Rexona I was entirely rid of the Piles, and there is no sign of them coming on again. Rexona is wonderfully quick and sure in its action, and I intend to keep a tin in the house against emergencies. I should advise any lady suffering as I did to try Rexona. I may say I used Laxo-Tonic Pills at the same time as I used Rexona. These may have helped towards my quick recovery.

Rexona is a remedy which is especially designed to relieve Piles. Those who try it will not be disappointed. Rexona is sold everywhere at 1/6, or in pots holding nearly four times the quantity for 3/.—Advt.

SHEFFIELD SHIELD.

VICTORIA'S HOPELESS TASK.

SLOW BATTING.

The Sheffield Shield match between New South Wales and Victoria was continued at the Sydney Cricket Ground yesterday. Just on noon, a heavy storm passed over the ground from the south-west, and the commencement of play was delayed a quarter of an hour. The wind blew with force almost throughout the day, and subsequent showers interfered with the match. The wicket was easy.

Victoria, who had 341 runs to get to save an innings defeat, recognising their uphill task, played a purely defensive game, consequently the display was not of the brilliant order. They made a better start than in the first innings, the third wicket putting on 103. Both Park and Baring played with extra caution during the partnership, but they hit out at any of the bowling that was loose. When time came, the total stood at 260 for the loss of eight wickets. Thus the visitors have 74 runs to get and two wickets to fall to save an innings defeat. Even though this be accomplished, the match is as good as won by New South Wales.

THE PLAY.

When Ryder (2) and Carkeek (0) came out to continue the Victorian's first innings, the weather was still threatening. Massie (from the Randwick end) and Kelleway were the bowlers, but after Kelleway had been cut for three by Ryder, in his first over, rain fell, and the players retired for 22 minutes.

Ryder began to score fast on the resumption of play, but Carkeek only obtained his first runs after having been at the wickets 24 minutes. The total reached 32, then Folkard relieved Kelleway, and at once met with success, as Carkeek, mis-timing his fifth ball, sent it to Mailey in the slips, and the Victorian wicket-keeper retired.

Baring, who followed, started confidently, and reached double figures quickly, and the first half century appeared in 58 minutes. Shortly afterwards the adjournment for lunch took place, the record being one for 57.

Folkard and Massie were the bowlers after the interval, and they kept the runs down, only two being scored off five overs. Kelleway was again tried, Massie retiring, and the change met with success, as in the Glebe bowler's second over Ryder skied the ball to the on side, and Kelleway, getting under it, brought off the catch. Ryder batted 87 minutes for 30.

The record was two for 66 when Park joined Baring. This pair gave the Welshmen great trouble. At first the tens mounted slowly, but the pace increased, although it took 116 minutes to make the first century. Sixteen runs later rain stopped play. On resuming both batsmen scored more freely, and at the tea adjournment Baring was 66, and Park 45, the total being 162.

On resuming, Massie and Macartney bowled. The partnership of Park and Baring had realised 100 for 66 minutes. Baring should have been out immediately after. He touched a fast one on the off from Massie, and it sped low to Macartney at first slip, but he failed to gather it. A few minutes later Park placed Massie in the slips to Mailey, and he held it. Park was batting for 77 minutes for 47, obtained by careful play. His total included seven fours.

Sewart joined Baring. Only a single was added, when Baring hit Massie high to long-on, and Andrew brought off a fine catch. He made 71 by patient and good all-round play. He was 131 minutes at the creases, his total including nine fours.

Armstrong was warmly cheered on his appearance. One run was added, when Sewart, in attempting to play back to a well-pitched ball from Macartney, was completely beaten.

E. V. Carroll partnered his captain, and both quickly ran to double figures. The second century went up for 195 minutes' play. Both batsmen had the bowling beaten, and scored freely. They added 50 runs in 27 minutes. Changes were made in the bowling without effect. At 235 Mailey relieved Folkard. His second ball kept low, and Armstrong chopped down on it. Away it went square to Folkard at point, and he held it. Armstrong was 43 minutes at the creases, and made 31. The partnership had realised 64. Matthews was next. He should have been out before he was double figures, for he gave two chances in the slips off Massie. The board showed 250 for 245 minutes. Ten runs later Carroll was caught in the slips by Kelleway off Massie. He made 35.

Kiernan followed, but only made 5, when he was clean bowled by Mailey just on time.

The attendance totalled 600, and the gate takings £15 0s 6d. The match will be continued to-day at noon.

DOCKYARD PICNIC.

MR. CUTLER PRAISED.

MINISTER ACCESSIBLE TO MEN.

A large crowd attended the first annual picnic of the employees of the Commonwealth Naval Dockyards at Clifton Gardens yesterday.

At the official luncheon, the president (Mr. W. J. Hosking) occupied the chair. In proposing "the Federal Parliament," Mr. P. Reidy said they had received quite as good treatment from the present Government as from the last. (Hear, hear.) They would, however, like some assurance that the positions of the old hands would be secured to them, and that they would not be passed out on reaching the age of 40.

Senator Millen replied at length, and was followed by Senator M'Dougall, who said it was a scandal that Mr. Cutler would not be again among them at such a function. "I have heard from one of the engineers that the Cockatoo Island plant is unfit for the work," he added. "I am indeed pleased to hear Senator Millen's speech on the matter. That talk of unfitness is all wrong. I am glad to hear that Senator Millen is going to build ships of commerce. If they build them the State will own them, and that is one of the socialistic ideals. Since Senator Millen has been Minister for Defence, I have had no difficulty in approaching him on your behalf." (Applause.)

Mr. Robert Howe, M.P., said that Mr. Cutler was the one man who had made Cockatoo Island what it was.

Mr. West, M.P., said he was rather surprised to hear Senator Millen's remarks in view of the company he kept. (Laughter.) A trip round Australia would show the Minister that it could be opened up by the mercantile marine quite as much as by railways.

In replying to "the State Parliament," Mr. J. Storey, M.L.A., said he remembered Cockatoo Island when it was a very small place, and chiefly a repair shop.

In proposing "the Naval Establishments," Mr. W. J. Hosking suggested a system of bursaries whereby bright boys, on completion of their five years, might be sent to the shops in England. (Applause.)

Mr. Cutler, in reply, said he was sure the work of Cockatoo would bear all criticism and compare with the rest of the world. "Cockatoo is fitted to make all the war vessels we will want for many years to come," he said. He thanked the men for their loyalty to him in the past.

NORTH COAST RAILWAY.

Mr. A. Adam, of Tinonee (Manning River), states that there is no shortage of sleepers on the North Coast railway at Taree. The construction branch has 20,000 sleepers on the fourth section, Taree to Wauchope. The line has been completed from Taree to Camden Haven, a distance of 32 miles from Taree, and the sleepers are not wanted for that part of the line. The sleeper-cutters are busy cutting the balance near Camden Haven to complete the line to Wauchope. "Why," he asks, "could not these sleepers be loaded in trucks, and sent to places where there is a shortage?"

LAW REPORT.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Docker and a jury.)

Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

CROWN CASE FAILS.

Percy M'Donald was charged with, at Sydney, on October 17, having conspired with another man to defeat the course of justice.

Mr. E. J. Peterson appeared for the accused, who pleaded not guilty.

At the conclusion of the Crown case Mr. Peterson took the point that there was no evidence that the accused had conspired as alleged, and, on it being upheld by his Honor, the jury was directed to acquit the accused, which was done, and he was discharged.

POSTPONED TO NEXT COURT.

The hearing of the charge of false pretences preferred against James Crawford in connection with the sale of a laundry business was postponed to the next sessions, on the application of the accused, on account of the absence from the State of a material witness for the defence.

THE PARSONS' CUP.

WOLLONGONG, Tuesday.

Hazy weather prevailed for the second day of the competition for the Parsons' Cup, and this militated against shooters obtaining good scores. None of the teams came up to the score made by the Eastern Suburbs on Saturday. A. W. Parsons secured the best score of the day, 68, and R. Cohen (Millthorpe) got second top with 66.

The winning teams were as follow:—

Eastern Suburbs: R. C. J. Demsey 62, A. Mason 60, T. Renwick 62, D. M'Callum 64—258, £7 and Cup.

Wollongong: A. A. W. Parsons 68, H. Parsons 61, R. Bourke 60, A. S. Parsons 65—254, £4.

AMUSEMENTS.

Right into the middle of its sixth week goes the revue "Come Over Here," and yet there is no diminution in its popularity. Her Majesty's Theatre is nightly filled with pleased patrons enjoying to the full the novelties presented. The vocal numbers of Miss Olive Godwin and Mr. Edmund Sherras, the dances of Mr. Stone, Mr. Fred Leslie, and Miss Ivy Schilling, the buffoonery of Mr. Jack Cannot, Mr. Osborne, and Mr. Leslie Holland, and the Anniversary Regatta Ballet, the Telephone Tangle, and the Venetian Carnival all combine to pass time merrily. Another matinee is advertised for to-day.

It is no idle boast that Monsieur Beaucaire, as presented by Mr. Lewis Waller and his talented company, at the Theatre Royal, is a production of rare artistic finish. It portrays so delightfully the extravagances, as well as the romances of Eighteenth Century England. Miss Madge Titheradge, Miss Lizette Parkes, Mr. Quartermain, Mr. Alex. Thompson, Mr. Frank Woolfe, and other artists all assist Mr. Waller in the success of the romantic comedy. There will be a matinee to-day.

On Saturday week Mr. Lewis Waller will stage for his last five nights Gerald Du Maurier's play, "The Royal Rival," in which the visiting star will appear in one of his famous roles, that of Don Cesar de Bazan. Marita will be played by Miss Madge Titheradge, and the King of Spain by Mr. Charles Quartermaine, while others prominent in the cast will be Messrs. Frank Woolfe (Don Jose de Santarem), Alec F. Thompson (the Marquis of Montefiore), Halliwell Hobbes (captain of the guard), and Miss Marianne Caldwell (the Marchioness of Montefiore).

There will be a matinee as well as an evening performance at the Criterion Theatre to-day of the popular American comedy "Officer 666," which so entertainingly displays the abortive efforts of the New York Police to arrest the smart picture thief in the young millionaire's mansion. Mr. Fred Niblo is the mainspring of the machinery, but able assistance is provided by Mr. Sydney Stirling, Miss Josephine Cohan, Miss Beatrice Holloway, Mr. Robert Greig, Mr. Maurice Dudley, and Mr. E. Pirie Bush.

Pinero's sparkling comedy, "His House in Order," which began its Australian career so auspiciously on Saturday evening, at The Little Theatre, has won deserved attention from theatregoers during the past few days. There will be a matinee to-morrow, when Mr. Hugh Buckler, Miss Violet Paget, Little Kathleen Lindgren, Mr. Gerald kay Souper, Miss Tempe Pigott, Mr. Alfred Bristowe, Mr. Reginald Wykeham, Mr. Kenneth Brampton, and Mr. Cornell will show how the second wife of Filmer Jesson, M.P., failed to keep his house in order.

Great crowds have visited the Adelphi Theatre during the last few days to witness the second instalment of the Aladdin Pantomime, and all the new songs and novelties have won the same enthusiastic reception as the initial items. The "Toy Matinees" begin this afternoon, and every child in the audience will receive a gift. The sensational act of Valentine and Bell, the songs of Miss Mabel Batchelor and Miss Carrie Moore, and the comedy of Mr. Percy Clifton and Mr. Edward Stanley, and the gorgeous Eastern spectacles, are the big attractions at the pantomime.

The last four nights are announced of "A Day at the Races," for after Saturday afternoon there will be no more Joy and Gloom, no more Tango by the Kandy Kids, and no more of the burlesque business of Mr. Dave Nowlin and Miss Ravensburg. This sporting farce is to be withdrawn on Saturday evening in favour of "The Grafters," which made such a hit in Sydney some months ago.

A varied programme of diverse interest commands the attention of lovers of vaudeville at the National Amphitheatre, which is crowded nightly. The star attractions are Brent Hayes, the magician of the banjo, the Four Lyrical Songsters, Dorothy Harris, Esmeraldo the Xylophone artist, Chief Eagle Horse the Indian baritone; the American Ginger Girls, Lack and Ford, the acrobats, and the bulldogs of Gardner.

A VOCAL RECITAL.

A vocal recital will be given in Paling's Concert Hall on Friday afternoon by Mr. George Grimms and his pupil, Mr. Cecil Houghton, a tenor of promise.

OTHER ENTERTAINMENTS.

"A Message from Mars," which is to be produced on Saturday at the Lyceum, is said by Spencer's management to be one of the most remarkable examples of cinematographic stagecraft that Sydney has yet witnessed. At present "When the Earth Trembled," which depicts the great earthquake at San Francisco, is the chief feature of a strong programme. The usual matinee begins to-day at 2.30.

When a beautiful girl tells her life-story on the cinematograph screen, it is only to be expected that the tenderest feelings of the romance-loving public will be touched to the extent of going to see it. As a matter of fact, West's two theatres, the Olympia and the Glaciarium, are filled nightly by crowds desiring to behold "At the Convent Gate." This, the latest success, is backed by a variety of other excellent films.

A remarkable series of wild animal pictures, taken in the heart of the Dark Continent, is shown in "In the Wilds of Africa" at the Crystal Palace. On Thursday a new programme will include "English Gazette," "A Love of '64," "Wiffles—His Mother's Darling," "National Park of Lapland," "The Wedding Gown," and "Her Sister's Kids."

The opportunity makes the thief is the text of "Giant Circumstance," the feature film to be presented at the Lyric Theatre next Thursday. Other attractions are to be "Fate's Decree," "A Masked Mix-up," "Niagara Falls," a beautiful scenic feature, and "Slippery Pimple."

A brisk bill of new attractions will be screened on Thursday next at the Colonial Theatre. Among these may be mentioned "Famous Scout to the Rescue" (drama), "Max as a Conjurer" (comedy), "Manila" (scenic), "Calino, Water Diviner" (comedy), and last and most important, "A Waif of the Desert."

Thursday's change of programme at the Empress Theatre should serve to maintain the popularity of this up-to-date little theatre. Among the new pictures to be shown are another "Talkograph," "A Cunning Intrigue," "Matrimonial Manoeuvres," "Beauty Spots in the Highlands," "The Trail of the Lost Chord," and "Simple Simon as Customs Officer."

An excellent programme is being presented this week at the American Picture Palace in Pitt-street. "The Great Dock Catastrophe," "Redemption of Railway Jack," "Who is the Savage?" "Pimple's Ivanhoe," "The Devil and Tom Walker," "Rent in Arrear," "Pearl as Clairvoyant," and "The Redeemed Chain," are some of the numerous attractions.

THE DANDIES.

The Dandies continue to give their select performances nightly at Eden Gardens, Manly. Next Monday "The Tango Tea" will be presented by special artists.

ANCELON-CHAPMAN RECITALS.

The plan is now at Paling's for the next Ancelon-Chapman recital, prominent features in which will be scenes from "Ivanhoe," with Miss Stella Chapman as Rebecca; a scene from "Othello," with Mr. Douglas Ancelon in the main part; and an excerpt from "Rob Roy." There will also be presented a number of one-act comedies and sketches and several recitations. Torzillo's orchestra will supply the music.

THE WHITE CITY.

The Great White City is made for merriment, fashioned for fun, and specially designed for the purpose of driving dull care away and adding to the gaiety of nations. It enabled visitors to see all sorts of amusing and thrilling spectacles, including the fiery dive for life of Miss Marie Thelin, and the acrobatic display of Hennessy and Martell. With names like that, these two stars should put plenty of spirit into their work. The people's playground will be open to-day from 2 till 11.

Among the special shows is the Japanese Village in the White City, and to reach it the visitor must pass through a wicket gate in the side of the mountain, and along cool, subterranean passages till he comes out into the starlight again. A demure and placid little Japanese lady, who is painting a name on the fan at the door, will presently disappear from her stall, and on the big open stage a juggling girl, all strength and skill and daring, will appear in company with a lithe Japanese youth. Kosen Maruichi and Yu Maruichi are son and daughter of a juggler, so noted in his own country that he has been specially retained as Court juggler at Tokio. Royalty has been robbed of its entertainment to give the people of Sydney an opportunity of seeing the Yegawa family of acrobats, balancers, and jugglers. This troupe was employed at the Bangkok Court for the amusement of the Emperor of Siam.

HOSPITAL BENEFIT.

The first matinee to be held in aid of the Renwick Hospital for Infants and the Royal Hospital for Women will be given on February 16, at Her Majesty's Theatre, which is being lent for the purpose by J. C. Williamson, Ltd. As every theatre in Sydney is participating in the campaign to raise £12,000 for the two hospitals, it is intended by the committee to make the programme to be presented representative of the other theatres which are co-operating in the scheme. A number of artists from other houses will appear at the matinee on February 16.

THE SECRETS OF THE DRESSING-ROOM.

It has always been a complaint against theatre management that while the men may adjourn during an interval the gentler sex have nothing more interesting to engage their attention than the drop curtain. At Monday's matinee and evening performances of "Come Over Here" a concession to those who remained in their seats was made. It consisted of raising the curtain and disclosing the principals of the revue preparing for their scenes in the second act. Those in the auditorium were initiated in the mysteries of make-up. The ladies were shown exercising those arts of beautification that have so long remained a back-of-stage secret. Comedians were "discovered" applying hectic noses and other aids to comedy. All the while a running conversation was kept up. Topical gags were discussed and much amusement afforded. The ripples of laughter from the audience showed that the novelty was enjoyed.

COUNTRY NEWS.

MUNICIPAL.

MACLEAN, Tuesday.

Of the fourteen candidates nominated for the Maclean Municipal Council, six were found to be disqualified, some through the names not being on the roll, and others because of the rates not being paid up. The following eight were elected:—C. E. Henson, W. A. Connor, W. Boden, John Cameron, Jas Fogarty, Edward A. Powell, W. D. Robertson, John Skinner. There is one vacancy to be filled.

THE CHURCHES.

WEST MAITLAND, Monday.

The children of St. John's Roman Catholic parish were entertained at a picnic on Maitland Park to-day, in honour of the departure of the Bishop of Maitland for Rome on Saturday next. There was an attendance of about 700, which included a number of clergy. Dr. Dwyer, Bishop of Maitland, delivered a farewell address to the parishioners of St. John's Cathedral last evening. He said it was a solemn obligation of the Bishop to visit the Holy Father once every 10 years. He expected to be away from the diocese for nearly 12 months. The Bishop has appointed the Right Rev. Monsignor Meagher, of Singleton, administrator of the diocese during his absence.

THE OYSTER TRADE.

NELSON'S BAY (Port Stephens), Tuesday.

A large and representative meeting of Oyster lessees was held here on Saturday evening, to discuss the supposed glut in the oyster market. It was unanimously decided that the glut was caused by inefficient means of distribution. It was proposed to establish a strong co-operative company, whose members will be able to market approximately 3000 bags of oysters annually. Special attention is to be given to means of distribution. A further meeting is to be held on January 31, to allow of practically every lessee concerned attending.

COFF'S HARBOUR, Tuesday.

As the doctors are rigidly adhering to the B.M.A. agreement, it is probable that the local lodges will follow the example of Grafton and elsewere, and come to terms.

TENTERFIELD, Tuesday.

Last week a new Aster turbine horse-drawn engine arrived for the local fire brigade. This afternoon First-class Fireman Edwards, of Kogarah station, and the local brigade gave a successful demonstration. It is probable the municipal council will lay down a main in the principal streets, with pumping station and tanks.

WEE WAA, Tuesday.

At the Oddfellows' district conference at Pilliga, the election of officers resulted as follows:—Bro. F. Hardgrove, Grand Master; Bro. A. E. Hawkins, district secretary (both of Wee Waa); Bro. M'Grath, deputy grand master.

The Director-General of Public Works advises Mr. Black, M.L.A., that the Minister has listed the proposal for the construction of a railway from Wee Waa to Coonamble for consideration. This is viewed with satisfaction here, as it is held that the proposed route is far superior to either of the other suggested lines.

Mr. F. S. Findham, of Dunoon, has been appointed Church of England reader at Pilliga, vice Mr. T. Billingham.

LANG VACANCY.

CANDIDATURE OF SIR ALLEN TAYLOR.

The ex-Lord Mayor, Mr. A. C. Cocks, presided over a meeting of Sir Allen Taylor's friends yesterday afternoon. Sir Allen is offering himself a a candidate for the Lang Ward in the City Council, the vacancy being created by the retirement of Mr. Cocks.

In opening the meeting, Mr. Cocks said that during the period of his Lord Mayoralty, Sir Allen Taylor had devoted more time and energy and spent more money on the welfare of the city than any other man. His work had been crowned with excellent results.

Sir Allen Taylor said that he was not, if elected, going to be a source of obstruction, but was going to endeavour conscientiously to assist in bringing about good government in the city. Millions had been spent in the city, but it had been spent wisely and for the benefit of the citizens. It was their duty to have a comprehensive scheme of city improvement which could be developed steadily year by year. He was not one to say that they should not borrow money. If the work warranted it the money should be secured and spent.

A motion that Sir Allen was a fit and proper person to fill the vacancy was carried unanimously.

TWO CANDIDATES.

Nominations closed yesterday. Two candidates, as follows, were nominated:—

Sir Allen Taylor, of 89 Pitt-street.

John Spencer Brunton, of Stanway House, 77 King-street.

Another nomination—that of Robert Puflett, of 701 George-street—was informal.

TIMBER COMMISSION.

The Federal Commission which is making inquiries into the Powellised wood process arrived from Melbourne yesterday, and immediately commenced its sittings. Mr. Gregory (Western Australia) is the chairman, and the other members are:—Messrs. King O'Malley (Tasmania), H. Sinclair (Queensland), Bennett (Victoria), and Burchell (Western Australia)—all members of the House of Representatives.

The objective of yesterday's evidence was the contract system for the supply of timber for the trans-Continental railway.

Colonel Miller, Secretary of the Home Affairs Department, and also Administrator of the Federal Territory, was the first witness. He said he knew of no railway constructed with Powellised timber.

The Chairman: Do not you think that the drastic conditions of the contracts might lead some contractors to try to placate some of the officials?

Witness said he had heard a lot about that sort of thing, but he had never in his experience come across a case of the kind. The Western Australian contract was 160,000 sleepers behind in delivery, consequently the Federal Government had power to cancel the contract. Some of the Federal contracts were loosely drawn, and no deposits taken. Speaking personally, Colonel Miller said he had only been 70 days in the last 12 months at headquarters. This was unsatisfactory to him.

Mr. H. Vine Hall, managing engineer of the City Council, said that the troughing used round the electric light cables was Powellised. Five years ago white ants had eaten into the timber, causing breakdowns in the service. Since the wood had been Powellised there had been no damage from the ants. Timber thus treated shrank slightly if exposed to the weather.

LEATHER EXPORTS.

REDUCED PRICE ABROAD.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The Interstate Commission met this afternoon to continue its inquiry into the tariff as affecting the leather industry.

The evidence given by Mr. Herbert Burgess, leather manufacturer, indicated that the leather exported from Australia was sold abroad at a lower price than local buyers paid.

Mr. Burgess stated that in his opinion there would probably be a difference of one halfpenny per lb less in the price at which Australian leather was sold, say, in London, compared with the price paid for the same material in Australia. This was after freight and other charges had been added. This difference in price enabled Australian leather to compete with the products of Europe, Great Britain, and America. The value of leather exported from the Commonwealth had increased from £470,000 in 1909, to £622,000 in 1912.

CHARGE OF ABDUCTION.

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

"This is one of those romances of which we hear from time to time," remarked Mr. C. M. Muirhead at the Adelaide Police Court when Rupert Walters, a smart-looking youth of under 19 years, was charged with having unlawfully taken away Frances Susan Cherrell Rogers, living at Somerset-street, Richmond, Victoria, against the will of her mother.

Mr. Muirhead, who appeared for Walters, said the young people had fallen passionately in love with each other. Defendant had given up working as a master butcher at Camberwell, Victoria, in order to take the girl away. He had obtained employment in Adelaide at the establishment of a motor-car builder. "If it can possibly be done, I would very much like the case to be tried in this State," he continued. "These young people want to remain here, and we want more population. (Loud laughter.) The young man wishes to work in Adelaide and to marry the girl."

Inspector Burchell applied for a remand until Friday pending the arrival of a police escort from Victoria. He asked for substantial bail, as there was "much behind the case." The request was granted by Mr. T. Gepp, S.M., who fixed bail in one surety of £50, and an additional £50 surety.

Y.M.C.A.

A POPULAR INSTITUTION.

EXPANDING ACTIVITIES.

The annual business meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association of Sydney was held last night. The president, Mr. E. K. Satchell, presided.

The annual report summarised the attendances for the year in the different departments of the association's activities as follows:—Religious 18,479, social 13,903, physical 15,158, education 2473. The balance-sheet showed a debit balance on the year's transactions of £900 11s 5d. The hope was expressed that the association's friends would wipe out the overdraft during the ensuing year—the diamond jubilee year of the association.

The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said that during his year as president of the organisation he had come very closely in touch with its activities, and was very deeply impressed with the necessity that existed for the association, and the amount of good which it did for the young men of the city. It was gratifying to notice that their membership was on the increase, and he hoped to see this year their members swollen to over 2000. The demands made for accommodation were so great that it was found necessary to erect another story to the building, and very shortly 21 more bedrooms would be ready for occupation.

The report was adopted.

The following officers were elected:—President, Mr. John Kent; vice-presidents, Sir James Fairfax, Sir Henry Stephen, Messrs. A. W. Meeks, Hugh Dixson, E. V. Satchell, W. G. Crane, D. Walker, John Parry, R. A. Dallen, and F. Cocks; treasurers, Messrs. E. Vickery, and J. T. Tillock; hon. secretaries, A. G. Baxter and G. F. Caldwell.

PARK-STREET WIDENING.

The question of the widening of Park and William streets was finally settled by the City Council last night. The general purposes committee reported against the proposal to widen those thoroughfares to a hundred feet from the Town Hall to the top of William-street, at Darlinghurst.

Alderman Stephen considered that the widening of Park-street should be gone on with, as early as possible, but the Government and certain of the municipalities should help them. The opening of the new roadway to Woolloomooloo would bring enormously increased traffic into Park-street.

Alderman A. M'Elhone opposed the proposal. The scheme for relieving the congestion was the construction of a tunnel at the foot of Cathedral-street.

Alderman T. H. Kelly remarked that the widening of William-street was not a wild cat scheme. It would cost £87,000, apart from business disturbances, and he thought the present was an opportune time to make the improvement.

Afte two hours' debate the scheme was thrown out.

Alderman Meagher moved that the resolution of the council providing for the widening of Yurong-lane, pursuant with the arrangement made with the Government in the matter of the transfer of the cattle saleyards be rescinded, and that representations be made to the Premier in favour of a variation of the arrangement. The motion was carried.

NORTHERN MINERS.

HIGHER WAGES WANTED.

NEWCASTLE, Tuesday.

The miners in the Newcastle field intend to apply for an increase in the hewing rate of coal. If the application is successful it will mean that the price of coal will be raised. At to-day's meeting of the Miners' Delegate Board the following notice of motion came from the Wallarah Lodge:—"Seeing the cost of living has materially increased during the last few years, and the rates of pay to miners have not been increased, we, the members of the Colliery Employees' Federation, ask for an increase of 8d per ton on pick-won coal, and 4d per ton on machine-won coal."

The motion was passed unanimously.

BURNING FATALITY.

TWO CHILDREN'S DEATH.

WEE WAA, Tuesday.

A burning fatality occurred here on Saturday, two children of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Campbell, of Wee Waa, dying from injuries caused through flames from methylated spirits.

The evidence at the inquest showed that the husband was away on Saturday morning, and Mrs. Campbell was getting the breakfast ready. She had a Primus stove at one end of the table, and the two children were seated at the table. There was a flare, and the flames set fire to the two children's clothes. Mrs. Campbell tried to put out the flames, and her screams brought a neighbour, Mrs. Schwager, who extinguished the fire, and telephoned for Dr. Hutchinson. The boy, aged 5 years, died on Saturday night, and the girl, aged 2 years, at noon on Sunday. The coroner returned a verdict of accidental death.

MURDER CHARGE.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

Henry Terns Hopgood appeared at the Central Police Court to-day before Mr. E. Eglington, P.M., charged with having, on the night of January 17 or morning of January 18, wilfully murdered Bridget Mary Hopgood, his wife, at Mayne.

Sergeant Burgess stated that he saw defendant at the Valley Police Station. Constable Nugent, who was present, said: "Sergeant, this man says he has killed his wife." Defendant said: "Yes, I killed her in the timberyard down by the bowling green. She's been trying to poison me for the last two weeks, by putting poison in my food." "How did you kill her?" defendant was asked, and he replied: "I hit her on the head with a piece of six by six hardwood." Witness described the finding of the body of the woman in the timberyard.

Defendant was committed for trial.

TRADE WITH BRISTOL.

FREMANTLE, Tuesday.

Among the passengers by the Marmora, which arrived to-day, are Messrs. H. L. Riseley, and E. Manning Lewis, two members of the Bristol Publicity Committee, who have come out to Australia with a view to seeing what can be done to develop trade between Australasia and the port of Bristol. "Already we have monthly services to and from Australia," said Mr. Riseley, "but we are anxious to still further develop the trade. Bristol is the western gateway of England, and offers special advantages to the Commonwealth. Our cold storage facilities are admitted to be the best in the United Kingdom." Mr. Lewis is superintendent of the Bristol Docks.

BUSH FIRES.

BYRON BAY, Tuesday.

Bush fires are still burning, chiefly on heath lands.

CAMPBELLTOWN, Tuesday.

A bush fire broke out on Glenlee Estate yesterday afternoon, when upwards of 500 acres of grass was destroyed. Some of the farmers on the estate had practically all their grass burnt, and had the wind not changed when it did, the chances are that the outbreak would have been doubly serious.

STEALING ON A STEAMER.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

Arthur Miller, 48, labourer, was charged at the Central Police Court, before Mr. Eglinton, P.M., with having stolen articles to the value of 10s 6d on board the steamer Carpentaria, on January 24. The magistrate said he would have to inflict a heavy penalty. He looked upon this as a very serious offence. Defendant would be fined £20, in default, six months.

TAVIUNI HELD UP.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

A difference of opinion has arisen between the Union Company and firemen in regard to the manning of the coastal cargo steamer Taviuni. One signed off and the company was unable to fill the vacancy owing to the fact that the firemen requested an extra hand in the stokehole. The company refuses to give way. Meanwhile the ship is held up.

CASUALTIES.

CRUSHED BETWEEN BUFFERS.

An engine-cleaner named Robert Turner, 19, of Bedford-crescent, Dulwich Hill, was at work in a workshop at Eveleigh at 9 a.m. on Monday. While standing at the end of one engine another approached suddenly, and caught Turner between the buffers. He was taken by the Civil Ambulance to Prince Alfred Hospital, and there admitted suffering from internal injuries.

INJURED IN A COLLISION.

A collision between a motor car and a buggy occurred on the Cronulla-road on Sunday afternoon about 5 o'clock. The buggy was badly smashed, and the occupants, Mrs. Margaret Corp and her husband, of Arncliffe, were thrown out. Mrs. Corp was injured, receiving a fractured rib and shock. She is now in St. George Cottage Hospital.

DEATH FROM BURNS.

Katherine Morrison, 45, married, residing at 18 Belmore-street, died in the Sydney Hospital as the result of burns received on Saturday afternoon. She was attending a spirit lamp when her clothes caught alight.

BOY SHOT.

Several young fellows were wading in a lagoon at Glenbrook (Blue Mountains) on Monday, when duck shooting.

One of the sportsmen was armed with a revolver. George Waugh, 15, who lives in Myrtle-street, Leichhardt, got into deep water, and the youth who had the revolver threw his arms about Waugh's shoulders to draw him back into the shallow. In his effort, however, he must have touched the trigger. A sharp report rang out, and Waugh was shot. Medical aid was sought, and later Waugh was brought to Sydney. At Prince Alfred Hospital he was admitted with a bullet wound in one of his lungs.

BLUE FISH BAY TRAGEDY.

A finding of drowning while temporarily insane was recorded by the City Coroner yesterday in the case of Charles Ingall, 56, a Tamworth landowner, who drowned himself at Blue Fish Bay, Manly, on January 20.

Frederick Shield, secretary of the School of Arts, Molong, said that at midday he saw deceased walking below the cliffs at Blue Fish Bay. He suddenly threw off his hat and jumped into the sea.

Mrs. Rhoda Ingall said that she left her husband in Cliff-street, Manly, while she went to get him some milk. When she came back he was gone. He had been under medical treatment.

FATAL BURNS.

RAYMOND TERRACE, Tuesday.

The five-year-old son of Mr. G. Schafer, of this town, died from burns received through playing with matches, which ignited his flannelette pyjamas. He got the matches before the other members of the household were out of bed, and his screams directed their attention, but before the clothing was removed he was badly burned.

MAN'S THROAT CUT.

LITHGOW, Tuesday.

It is reported that a local carter named Robinson, employed by W. Ewer, Main-street, was found with his throat cut at his employer's residence, where he resided, late on Saturday night. He was conveyed to the hospital in a state of collapse.

INVALID INJURED.

PARKES, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bailey, of Jubilee Cottage, Molong-road, were out driving, when the horse stumbled, and Mrs. Bailey, who is an invalid, was thrown out, and the wheel of the vehicle passed over her body. She was badly cut about the face and neck, and one wound in the latter necessitated the insertion of several stitches.

SHUNTING ACCIDENT.

COWRA, Tuesday.

While shunting a water train to the dead end of the railway line at the station a man named Cecil Poole was seriously injured. The brake on a tank would not work, and while applying a heavy iron bar it rebounded, and he was struck heavily on the right jaw. He now lies at the hospital in a critical state.

GIRL'S LUCKY ESCAPE.

WEST MAITLAND, Tuesday.

A sensation was caused at the railway station on Saturday evening by a young girl falling on the line just as the on-coming passenger train was passing the gates at Elgin-street. Willing hands quickly lifted the girl on to the platform, when it was found she had struck her head against the rails, and had been rendered unconscious.

Constable Kennedy had her removed to the hospital, and she recovered consciousness two or three hours after the accident.

RIDING ACCIDENT.

NARROMINE, Tuesday.

Robert Currie, of Strathalyn, was the victim of a serious riding accident. The pony he was riding slipped and fell, throwing him heavily to the ground, and breaking his collar-bone.

GUNNER SERIOUSLY INJURED.

WAGGA, Tuesday.

A serious accident occurred on Sunday while members of the Australian Field Artillery were proceeding to Gumly Common. It is stated that the horses attached to a gun carriage driven by Gunner Birrell became frightened, and bolted, with the result that the carriage was overturned. A man on the driving seat with Birrell was thrown clear, but the latter was pinned under the gun, and was so badly injured that he had to be brought into the hospital for treatment. The greatest injury was caused to one arm and shoulder. The arm was amputated immediately after his admission to the hospital.

SERIOUS BUGGY ACCIDENT.

GUNNEDAH, Tuesday.

A man named Harry Field, while driving with his wife in a sulky at Tambar Springs, collided with a tree. Both were thrown out. Field was hurt internally, and his wife had an arm and a rib broken, and sustained scalp wounds. They were both brought to Gunnedah Hospital.

A LAD INJURED.

MOREE, Tuesday.

A lad named Victor Kirkby, son of a local auctioneer, was engaged practising tent-pegging on Monday, when his horse swerved and the rider was thrown, his head striking the ground. He was unconscious for over 24 hours, but escaped other serious injuries.

CARPENTER COMMITS SUICIDE.

HILLSTON, Tuesday.

Last night a carpenter named Frederick Leeder committed suicide by taking cyanide, which he purchased a week previous for the purpose of destroying rabbits. He had only been about 10 months in the district.

FALL FROM A TRAIN.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

While a train was crossing Clarendon-street railway viaduct to-day, Reginald Allen, aged 36 years, a letter-sorter, fell from one of the carriages on to the footpath, a distance of 25 feet. His skull and jaw were fractured, and he died soon after being admitted to the Melbourne Hospital.

GERMAN EMPEROR'S BIRTHDAY.

The German flag was displayed on ships in port, and on a number of German business houses yesterday, the occasion being the 55th birthday of the German Emperor. In the morning a reception was held at the German Consulate, in Pitt-street, when, besides the Consular representatives, among those who called were:—Colonel J. S. Lyster, Lieut.-Colonel Luscombe, Captain F. H. Brownlow, Colonel Wallack, Archdeacon Gunther, Pastor Schenck, Dr. A. Scheidel, Dr. Harold Norrie, Messrs. John Harper (Acting Chief Railway Commissioner), James Fraser, and Harry Richardson (assistant Commissioners), James Spurway (secretary to Railway Commissioners), H. Y. Braddon (president of the Chamber of Commerce), Gustav Reiner, A. Gordon Wesche, Charles C. Lance, T. W. Keele, H. D. Walsh, Harold F. Norrie (Harbour Trust), Oscar Plate, G. Waldthausen, J. P. Franki (manager Mort's Dock), T. Knoblauch, F. Hundsdorfer, J. H. P. Meyer, George A. Parkes, C. U. B. Gurnet (secretary of the Chamber of Commerce), R. D. Meagher (Speaker of the Legislative Assembly), William S. Christie, Jean Peron, Paul Chauleur, Paul Marcus, August Bell, J. J. Roth, Hague Smith, H. A. Moltermann, Julius Goldschmidt, F. Kirchner, C. W. Langer, E. Verne Richardson, E. Wischweh, Max Wurcker, and Albert H. W. Reick.

WAGGON DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Mr. William Morris, carrier, whose waggon was recently completely destroyed by fire at Alexandria, states that the outbreak was due to a smouldering fire in a mass of rubbish, and that water was not obtainable to extinguish the flames.

HONOURING PIONEERS.

MACLEAN, Tuesday.

A celebration in honour of the pioneers, who settled on the Clarence prior to 1866, today attracted a very large gathering. The town was profusely decorated. A procession started from the lower end of River-street, headed by mounted troopers, followed by the cadets' pipe band and a bullock team drawing a timber waggon, carrying a butcher's boat, manned by members of the Harwood and Maclean Rowing Clubs, school children, the Brushgrove Brass Band, motors, and other vehicles, carrying pioneers, the Maclean Brass Band, and public vehicles. The route of the procession to the show ground was thronged with thousands of people. The pioneers were entertained at a banquet on the show ground, and a programme of sports was held.

TRAGEDY AT BREEZA.

GUNNEDAH, Tuesday.

At Breeza on Monday two men, named James Vernon and George Argent, it is reported, had a quarrel. Vernon, it is alleged, drew a revolver and shot Argent through the shoulder. Vernon afterwards ran away some distance and shot himself in the head. Argent was brought to the Gunnedah Hospital at night, but his condition is not thought to be dangerous. Vernon lived a couple of hours, but never spoke.

LA PEROUSE FATALITY.

It appears that only two men were in the boat which was upset at La Perouse on Sunday. Freeman, who was mentioned as a probable victim, was not one of the party, having decided at the last moment not to go. The body identified is that of William Gibb, a tailor, aged 50, of Park-road, Paddington. He was engaged in business in Market-street, city.

The second victim was Alexander Soutar, of Silver-street, St. Peters.

NEUCHATEL PAVING.

In reply to questions by Alderman Evan-Jones, the Lord Mayor informed the City Council at its meeting last night, that an area of 22,231 square yards had been paved in the city, with neuchatel asphalt during 1912 and 1913, at a cost of £30,000. Tenders had been called for the paving in Chalmers, Pitt, Hay, and Castlereagh streets, but the Neuchatel Company were the only tenderers.

UPPER HOUSE.

LABOUR LEAGUE'S NOMINATION.

FORBES, Monday.

Mr. G. F. Hutchinson, of Sydney, has been nominated by the Ashburnham Labour Council as a suitable person for appointment to the Upper House. Mr. Hutchinson was, till recently, a resident of Forbes, and took a life-long interest in municipal affairs, being 11 times Mayor. During one Parliament he represented Ashburnham.

A correspondent writes that one night last week he went at 9.30 o'clock to post letters at a pillar-box at Randwick, when he found it being cleared, notwithstanding the fact that the notice on the pillar-box gave the clearance time as 10 o'clock. He was informed that the box had been cleared every evening for the last month at 9.30 p.m. He urges that the postal authorities should notify the public when a change is made in the time of clearance.

WOMEN'S HOSPITAL.

At the annual meeting of subscribers to the Women's Hospital, Crown-street, yesterday, the following officers were elected:—President, Judge Backhouse; vice-presidents, Mrs. G. M. Merivale and Miss Margaret Harris; trustees, Judge Backhouse, Mesdames G. M. Merivale, T. H. Kelly, Mr. G. M. Merivale, and Mr. H. C. Hoyle, M.L.A.; directors, Lady Barton, Mesdames J. A. Dean, R. M. Sly, Stuart Osborne, Arthur Lassetter, Robert Richards, Kelso King, J. M. A. Bonthorne, Miss M. A. Allison, and Mr. David Fell; hon. treasurer, R. S. Wickham.

DIRTY SCHOOL.

BROKEN HILL, Tuesday.

Some months ago a new infants' school was completed at Railwaytown, but was only opened to-day. When the two newly appointed lady teachers went to take charge of the school they found the interior inches deep in dust. The pupils were sent home, and the teachers had to set to, to clear up the building.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

Mr. George Sara, who attained his 100th year on November 30 last, died at Willunga on Saturday morning. He was in good health, and was partaking of his breakfast, when he choked eating a plum, and paralysis ensued. He was a Cornishman. The deceased was a contractor, and erected many public buildings in the country districts. Recently the Methodist Church presented him with a cheque for £100, representing £1 for each year of his life. He had four children (two of whom are living), 24 grandchildren, 34 great grandchildren, and two great great grandchildren.

BAND PERFORMANCES.

It was recommended by the health committee of the City Council, at the meeting of that body last night, that the tender of the New South Wales State Military Band for performances in the city parks be accepted for a period of one year, at the rate of 7s 6d per performer for each performance. The Labour aldermen advocated that the standard rate of 10s be paid. Aldermen Jones, Kelly, and others pointed out that most of the bandsmen were amateurs, and that the council did not make any money out of these performances. The committee's recommendation was adopted by 10 to 4.

INTERSTATE SAILING.

COMMENTS ON EVENTS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PERTH, Tuesday.

The uncertainty of sailing was strikingly exemplified by the championship race on Saturday and the handicap yesterday. The breeze was similar on both days. On Saturday the Australian sailed beautifully, and won easily from the Queensland boat, Vanity. Yesterday the latter put up a brilliant performance by giving all the Western Australian boats time, and winning. She also beat Australian, from which she received 2m 45s. The margin would have been more, but for Vanity being fouled by a launch during the race. Australian's showing was quite disappointing. True, the error of using a third gib with the second mainsail did not improve her chance; but this did not altogether account for her defeat. It must be admitted that Vanity sailed a great boat, and the manner in which she outpointed the others on a wind was the feature of her performance. Spring got every ounce out of her, and it was mainly her good windward work that brought her out on top. As a result of last week's trials and Saturday's race, Vanity's crew seemed to be more at home yesterday. At any rate, they did remarkably well, and this win, coming on top of Vanity's creditable second on Saturday, should give heart to the 18-footer men at Brisbane in their efforts to re-establish the class on something like its old solid footing.

The performances of the Western Australian boats in both races were disappointing; in neither did they distinguish themselves, and their sailing was only mediocre. Westana, which defeated Nimrod and others here two years ago for the championship, was the best performer, with third in Saturday's race and second in yesterday's. In the latter, however, she had four minutes start from Vanity. Eileen, which was third in yesterday's race, appears to be a good boat; but requires to be handled better. The most disappointing of the Western Australians in the interstate events was Euris, which has been very successful here; but does not seem to be able to do any good in interstate races. Bad luck, in the way of mishaps, is proverbial, and the carrying away of her mast on Saturday was another addition to her list of accidents. She also lost a mast here on the previous Saturday. She was nicely rigged yesterday, and had every chance; but held very bad wind, and could not pace it with the others on the work. Aeolus, Cygnus, and Robin were the remaining competitors in yesterday's race. Aeolus had a mishap to her mast shortly after the start, which settled her chance; but Cygnus made more use of her 6 minutes start than Robin, and might possibly have finished third but for getting foul of a non-competing boat near the finish.

Everybody's using it now, using what? Rexona Skin and Facial Soap, of course. Price 1/ tablet.—Advt.

IN MEMORIAM.

BOAZ.—In sad but loving memory of my dear friend, Mrs. M. Boaz, who departed this life at 20 Parkham-street, on January 28, 1912. Though lost to sight, to memory dear. Inserted by her old friend, Mrs. King, Ryde.

BOAZ.—A tribute of love to the memory of our dear mother, M. C. Boaz, who passed away January 28, 1912.

Your daughter's heart is breaking, mother,
With sorrow, grief, and woe.
Oh, how I miss you, mother dear,
It's only God that knows.
Sadly we miss you; but yet in our sorrow,
My own darling mother, your memory we'll keep.
Never till life ends shall we ever forget you.
Dear to my heart is the place where you sleep.

Inserted by her loving daughter and son-in-law, F. M. and W. V. Boyce.

BOAZ.—In sad but loving memory of my dear mother, M. C. Boaz, who passed away January 28, 1912.

What is home without our mother,
What are all the joys we meet,
When her loving smile no longer
Greets the coming of our feet.
A faithful mother, true and kind,
No friend on this earth like thee will I find.
Two years have passed, and none can tell
The loss of my mother, I loved so well.

Inserted by her loving daughter and son-in-law, V. and H. Turnbull, and grandchildren.

BOAZ.—In sad but loving memory of my dear wife, Maria Chester, who departed this life January 28, 1912. Inserted by her loving husband, William B. Boaz.

BOAZ.—In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away January 28, 1912.

Missed day by day.
We who loved you sadly miss you,
Though we know that God knew best.
When He eased your pain and suffering,
And took our dear mother home to rest.

Inserted by her loving children, Florrie, Millie, and Syd.

BOAZ.—A tribute of love to the memory of my dear mother, who passed away January 28, 1912.

Dearly we loved her, so sadly we miss her.

Inserted by her loving daughter and son-in-law, Clarrie and Will Andrews, and grandchildren.

BOAZ.—In sad but loving memory of our dear mother, who departed this life January 28, 1912. Inserted by her ever-loving son and daughter, Joe and Maggie, and grandchildren, Bertie, Leslie, and Edie.

DUGGAN.—In loving memory of Margaret Duggan, who died suddenly January 28, 1907.

I often sit and think of you,
And think of how you died;
But oh, it was hard to think
We could not say good-bye.

Inserted by her loving brother and sister, Edward Bolinson, and Mary Ann Goff.

ELLIOTT.—In loving memory of our dear brother John, who departed this life January 28, 1910, aged 26 years.

We cannot forget him, we loved him too dearly,
And often we think of a dear long ago;
But unknown to this world, he stands by our side;
And whispers these words, "Death cannot divide."

Inserted by his loving sister and brother-in-law, George and Mary Worthington, and nieces.

HEMING.—In sad and loving memory of my dear father and mother, F. and A. Heming, who were drowned in Sydney Harbour January 28, 1906. Inserted by their loving daughter, Millie.

MAIGRE (nee McCarthy).—In loving memory of my dear wife and our mother, who passed away January 28, 1913.

There is one bond death cannot sever—
Loving remembrance, which lasts for ever.

Inserted by her loving husband and family.

SPECIAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE SYDNEY MAIL.

AUSTRALIA'S POPULAR WEEKLY.

NOW READY. NOW READY.

A NEW AUSTRALIAN SERIAL:
"A GIRL OF THE PLAINS."

Our new serial is "A Girl of the Plains," and publication begins in this week's issue. The author is Belle Moseley, of Adelaide. She has kept to conventional lines in the construction of her novel, and the story flows smoothly chapter by chapter to the inevitable happy ending. The Girl is "Miss Ruthie"—as they call her on the station, and it does not take the reader long to learn to admire this sweet and brave Australian girl. There are many interesting passages on station life. There is a certain amount of calculated villainy; some stirring tragedies; some pathos—all, indeed, that we expect in a novel of the kind, and a good deal more, for the author's cleverness lifts the book well above any tawdriness, and holds the interest to the end.

THE CITY REFORMS.

There is no reason why the business of Sydney should not be conducted in as prompt and intelligent a manner as that of any big private concern. The only cause that can prevent the city departments from doing their work as efficiently as the departments—for example—of a great general store is laziness or incapacity in the staff. If laziness exists in the rank and file this can only be because of incapacity at the head of affairs. Somebody in each department is—or ought to be—in a position to banish laziness from that department if he so chooses. The problem is simply to define who that person is, and then to see that he does choose—or goes elsewhere. There is no other road to efficiency in any business. The only possible method is to define the scope of the department, appoint the best man to the head of it, trust him with sufficient room for discretion, and then hold him mercilessly responsible. It seems to be a scheme of this sort which the Lord Mayor has now sketched out for the City Council's business. The enterprise of supplying electricity to users in the city ought, in his opinion, to be separated from the rest, and dealt with as a distinct commercial undertaking. He suggests that it should be directed by a general manager together with two subordinates—an expert manager and a business manager—apparently somewhat in the same way in which the railways are separated from the other Government undertakings of New South Wales. It should keep its own accounts and be treated as similar city undertakings are elsewhere, as a self-contained enterprise. The rest of the city departments should be under the general control of the town clerk as general manager. Their heads would presumably be definitely subordinate to him, would take their directions from him, and would be responsible to the council through him for the efficient conduct of their departments. If they failed in this, if explanations were not forthcoming for him, or his directions not promptly carried out by the subordinate heads of departments, then new heads of departments would have to be sought for from whom the requirements of discipline could be obtained without question.

The Lord Mayor, in the report which he presented to the council last night, suggests that these new and heavy responsibilities should be thrown on the town clerk. Whatever may be said to the contrary, this plan is really a new one; and, in common fairness, the Lord Mayor must see that the town clerk is given sufficient freedom from the petty functions, with which it has been the custom to overload him, to enable him to give his attention solely to the much larger and more important duty of supervising the city's departments and the heads of those departments. It is absurd to pretend that this will be an easy task for Mr. Nesbitt. He has to exercise control over a number of officers who have been allowed, largely by the action of previous Mayors and aldermen, to consider themselves as independent of his control; and it would make a heavy demand on the strength of character and the business capacity of any man to establish his position satisfactorily under such circumstances. In common fairness the town clerk should be given special and adequate relief from the minor duties which at present would render his new position impossible for a Napoleon. In regard to the other officers, exactly the same may be said. That the merging of the city cleansing department with the city surveyor's department is a matter of immediate necessity is quite obvious from the innumerable clashings which appear on the face of the reports themselves and of the correspondence between the officers responsible. A far wider scope is to be given to the city surveyor's department—which is probably a well-justified reform—and the Lord Mayor clearly thinks that the present city surveyor is the man to be entrusted with these enlarged and important duties. It is to be hoped that he is right, and that Mr. Gordon, when he is put in possession of the requisite powers, will show that he has the capacity to transform Sydney from a dirty city into a clean one. He is likely to have his opportunity—which is more than the chief inspector of city cleansing ever had—and far more success will be expected than any so far attained. But now that responsibility is to be fixed in one man there should be no possibility for unfairness or lack of recognition. By the results, and the results alone, should Sydney's officials stand or fall.

INCOME TAX TROUBLES.

It is becoming increasingly evident that taxpayers are having great difficulty with their income tax returns this year. While it is the duty of the Commissioners of Taxation to extract as much from taxpayers as the law fairly allows, it is also manifestly the desire of those with taxable incomes to pay no more than they are legally compellable to pay. In these circumstances, the law on the subject should be clearly set forth, so that even the ignorant would have but little difficulty in knowing exactly how they stand. Instead, the Act of 1912, as it left the Legislature, is so imperfect a measure that it is often very difficult for anyone, even those skilled in interpretation, to be absolutely confident that he is not infringing some section, and so rendering himself liable to the heavy penalties provided for those who endeavour to escape taxation. The Commissioners themselves labour under this awkward dilemma that they are expected to protect the revenue on the one hand, while they have some responsibility to the public on the other. As far as we can see, they are doing their best in the circumstances. The present Act cries out insistently for amendment in directions that will make it more workable, though it is too late for anything to be done for the current year. The Treasurer has promised amended income tax legislation, but his trouble seems to be rather to get in more money for the exchequer than to make the process of taxpaying less burdensome and inquisitorial. The imposition of a flat rate on companies, as long as the rate is not fixed too high, will be a move in the right direction, as every company manager who has had experience of the present Act fully realises. Besides, it is recognised as but fair that companies in their corporate capacity should be called upon to find part of the money required for the government of the country. This in no wise justifies the striking of an unduly high rate which would savour of confiscation, and might induce some companies to register themselves in some outside country where the law is less oppressive.

There is one small crumb of comfort that may be appropriated by those who are finding it an obnoxious task to fill up their returns for purposes of income tax assessment, and that is that things might easily be worse. In Germany, for instance, even the smallest incomes, such as do not nearly reach an amount which our tribunals would regard as a living wage, are subject to taxation. In many other countries in Europe the rates of income tax are such as would put ours to shame. In Japan certain large incomes are penalised to the extent of 5s in the £, or its equivalent in Japanese currency. That is one of the prices that the peoples of those military-ridden countries pay for the privilege of keeping their frontiers like armed camps. It is interesting, too, to note that the British Government contemplates some radical revision of the whole income tax system, though in precisely what directions we are not informed. Mr. Asquith, referring recently to the great increase in expenditure on the navy as well as upon social reforms, the latter alone absorbing no less than 40 millions more per annum than was the case ten years ago, said that in his opinion the time had come for a complete re-examination in all directions, "both upwards and downwards," of the whole system of exemption, of abatement and of graduation of the income tax, that tax which Mr. Gladstone in his notable phrase said was calculated to make "a nation of liars." Mr. Asquith was of the opinion that the whole income tax system had grown up in "a most haphazard fashion," and that the time had therefore arrived in which those provisions should be replaced by others calculated to make the tax wider and more effective in its incidence, and "more productive in its yield." In the United States, too, for the first time in its history, an income tax of a substantial character is being collected this year. In bringing our income tax legislation once more under review, we are, therefore, in the fashion, but that is about the only thing that may be said in its favour. Everywhere Governments are increasing their expenditures, and everywhere they are reaching out with eager hands for the wherewithal to replenish their steadily emptying treasury chests.

LORD DENMAN'S SUCCESSOR.

The task of the British Government in appointing a successor to Lord Denman is by no means easy. The difficulty arises, of course, out of the nature of the position to be filled. Whilst there may be quite a number of British Peers well qualified to represent the King in this part of the Empire, as far as their high standing and personal character and abilities are concerned, there are comparatively few who add to these gifts certain requisites of equipment indispensable to the efficient discharge of the duties of Governor-General of the Commonwealth. During our short history we have discovered that the question of private means is vital if the chief representative of the Sovereign is to maintain the proper dignity of his position. Therefore it is desirable that a man of wealth should hold the appointment. In the next place, the holder of an office the duties of which necessitate a considerable amount of travel in a country of magnificent distances should be possessed of a robust constitution. This is the more to be urged since the vice-regal residence in the more genial climate of New South Wales has been closed, thereby compelling the Governor-General to face the extremes of Melbourne seasons too continuously, together with the quite unnecessary amount of travelling to and fro, which is one of the unsatisfactory results of the shabby policy of the State Government. It is obvious that the post is not suitable for one advanced in years, and the difficulty is to find a man in the prime of life whose strength is sufficient and whose experience is adequate.

It is to be hoped also that the choice of the Home authorities will fall upon one who will be equal to the emergencies of the political situation with which he will be faced almost immediately upon his arrival. The state of parties in the Federal Parliament presages difficulties. Assuming that Mr. Cook will send on the measures passed by the House of Representatives to the Senate, and that their prompt rejection by that body will follow, it is not hard to realise that one of the first tasks facing the new Governor will be of the nature of the exercise of prerogative. Unless a dissolution takes place before the new Governor-General's arrival, and the consequent appeal to the country results in a definite mandate to one or other of the existing parties, the incoming representative of the Crown will have to deal with an acute crisis before he has had a fair chance of examining the true inwardness of things political. It is the consideration of these matters that enables one to realise the difficulty to which we have referred. A Governor-General of Australia to be ideal must combine qualifications not very easy to find. Skilled in diplomacy, popular in an unconventional country, personally able to bear considerable physical strain, of sufficient wealth to be more or less independent of a somewhat meagre salary for so expensive a position, a man of wide vision and broad sympathies, and withal one with a strong guiding hand on the helm of State—such seems the type needed in this country. As to possible candidates whose record is known and appreciated, the name of Lord Chelmsford suggests itself to Australians. We should deem the Commonwealth fortunate were it to secure the services of so well-proven a man. But we fear our late Governor may not be available, as he is now engaged in important Imperial work elsewhere. In the meantime it is to be hoped that the knowledge of our country gained by Lord Emmott and the other members of the British Parliamentary party may be found of service in selecting the best possible man for this important position.

AN EMPIRE SURVEY.

The cabled summary of the report of the Dominions Royal Commission on the problems of immigration, postal and cable services, and marine transport, furnishes evidence that on three at least of these problems very full and adequate evidence was taken, and the suggestions made for improvement and closer co-ordination are well worthy of consideration. If the same cannot be said for marine transport, it is because the commission, in the absence of as full evidence as in the case of the other subjects, was dubious of making any decided recommendation. For the absence of evidence the commission is not to blame. That blame must rest on the shipping companies, whom the commission castigates as running counter to the Imperial intentions of the Legislature. The most glaring cases of freight discrimination by British shipping companies against the British manufacturer and in favour of the foreign manufacturer, were given in the New Zealand testimony, but neither there nor anywhere else was any explanation attempted by the shipping companies concerned. Apparently, they were content to let the case against them go by default. It is, however, a serious matter when powerful private companies are able to upset arrangements made for the Imperial benefit and for the furtherance of Imperial trade, and, instead of seconding those efforts and sacrifices, go out of their way to encourage foreign trade. The matter should be probed still further. It is not a new complaint. It has been made even against British railways, but now that a Royal Commission has roundly condemned it, the further step may be taken of inquiring what means can be adopted to prohibit such unfair discrimination. If the British manufacturer wishes to retain and increase his trade, it is for him to exert pressure in the proper quarter. How far the ideal of 40 feet depth for harbours, in view of the increasing size of steamships, will be realised in Australian ports may be judged by the fact that two weeks ago the Harbour Trust informed the Chamber of Commerce that it was proposed that the depth of water at low tide at the Pyrmont railway and Darling Island wharfs would shortly be 35 feet. Will this be another instance of Government, while believing it is providing for to-day, finding that it has really provided for conditions which existed the day before yesterday?

Akin to the shipping problem is that of better postal facilities. We are, it seems, paying too much for the speed of the boats which serve us. Sir Thomas Sutherland had some such complaint in mind when he told the P. and O. annual meeting last month the story of his interview with Mr. Chamberlain, who had suggested a twenty-knot service. The chairman of the P. and O. Company declared that, even with huge ships to carry the coal requisite for maintaining a twenty-knot service, "they would not be able to deal with that great trade in refrigerated produce which is so essential to the prosperity of our colonies." Mr. Chamberlain, we are told, thereupon said no more about the faster service. But we remember that the times do not stand still. They move. Since that story had its being there have been vast improvements in steamships, and even with coal a more economical use is promised, so that it may not be quite so long as Sir Thomas Sutherland imagines before we get a twenty-knot service. The suggestion that the mails should not be subsidised, but should be carried at poundage rates, if no faster service is provided, is bound to be considered by the Government, as well as its corollary that the money so saved should be devoted to developing new inter-Imperial routes. With that part of the report recommending an improvement in the method of selecting immigrants there must be agreement, and we are hopeful that much will accrue from the new arrangement between New South Wales and Victoria shortly to be put in force in the United Kingdom under the direction of Mr. Percy Hunter, but we can by no means agree with the further suggestion that the Maltese are suitable for the colonisation of the tropical and semi-tropical parts of Australia. We welcome most of all immigrants of the British race, and after them immigrants of the Teutonic races of the Continent.

DANIEL COME TO JUDGMENT.

When the future historian of Australia conducts his researches into the records of an obscurantist sect in the twentieth century, which arrogated to itself the appellation "democratic," he will, in inspecting the archives of the State of New South Wales (if, indeed, they are preserved, and he is permitted to consult them), come across a certain gathering in the city of Sydney which will arrest his attention. He will find it recorded that a representative meeting of a political party then in power in the State decided to exclude from its deliberations (which affected the whole community as the policy of the party was there decided) the chroniclers of the period, except those who were its servants, and he will be interested to notice that one of the delegates to this meeting spoke of the presence of the representatives of the press as being a desecration of, and a sacrilege in the building in which the meeting was held. The historian will rub his eyes, and ask whether this was not some medieval junta deciding in secret the fortunes of the country and fearful lest knowledge should interfere with its schemes and machinations. He will find in his study of democracy in many lands that it depends for its very life on the fullest publicity and the widest knowledge of its doings and aims, and can only continue pure and public-spirited in the face of keen criticism. Looking to the alleged causes of the strange action with which he is confronted, he will observe ample space devoted to a full, accurate, and fair report of the proceedings in the newspapers which are denied admission to these secret meetings. These being the conditions obtaining in the living present which we may assume will be noted by the student of our doings in a later age, we may be permitted, as a portion of the press which has been attacked, to enter our emphatic protest, not merely against the action which affects ourselves in common with other journals, but also against the spirit animating the resolution passed by the Political Labour League, which we regard as inimical to the best interests of public life in this country.

Having made this protest, we may well inquire what manner of man it is who accuses the representatives of the press of desecration and sacrilege of a noble building. Is it a modern, divinely-inspired, Hebrew prophet chiding the chosen people of these later times for the defilement of their holy possessions, or a Cato in supreme old age uttering words of wisdom based upon a blameless life, to the multitude with regard to their shortcomings? When a man has the impertinence and effrontery to use the expressions which fell from the lips of Mr. Richard Denis Meagher on Monday, we may remind him that he must first come into judgment with clean hands. He has grossly insulted men who have on the whole performed responsible, laborious tasks with patience, discrimination, impartiality, and accuracy, men who are workers in every sense of the term, who even belong to a trades union, registered under an Arbitration Act, just as the most militant constituent of the Political Labour League. When Mr. Meagher speaks of desecration and sacrilege let us tell him this: that when he ascended the Speaker's chair in the Legislative Assembly of this State he desecrated the historic building which is associated with the beginnings of representative government in Australia; when he presumes, in any public position, to criticise the actions of other men, and to impute motives, he defiles the pure waters which flow from the springs of honourable conduct and all that is associated with the best traditions of British public life. We may regret that so sagacious and respected a political leader as Mr. Watson should adopt the reactionary, anti-democratic course with which he was associated on Monday. But, when a man who has been more than once declared unfit, by the highest Court of Law in the land, to practice as a member of an honourable profession, bans the whole press of the State, we are entitled to protest with all the emphasis at our command against what amounts to a public scandal.

The "Sydney Mail."—What the Harbour Trust has done in the way of improving the port of Sydney and the gigantic works upon which it is at present engaged are comprehensively dealt with in this week's "Mail." The story of the Trust's achievements is accompanied by a number of excellent illustrations. Reference is made to the proposal of one of the members of the Trust for the resumption of Farm Cove for big shipping—a scheme which would entail the sweeping away of the Botanic Gardens. The question of immigration is further dealt with, and the attitude of the Labour party explained. The Anniversary Day celebrations are illustrated—the hoisting of the flag at Governor Phillip's statue, and the regatta, while the race meeting at Randwick is fully described. Progress and change in the city of Sydney are illustrated by a fine view of the water front at Darling Harbour, and another of Darlinghurst Gaol, which it is proposed to convert into a Public school. An interesting article on the beginnings of cricket in Australia is accompanied by portraits of notable New South Wales and Victorian cricketers of the past, and there are also snapshots of the play in the New South Wales-Victoria match on Saturday last. There is a striking full-page picture from the big timber country of the North Coast, and amongst many other attractive features is an illustrated article in "Outdoor Australia" on the Five Islands, near Wollongong. It is not generally known that, in addition to the mutton birds and seagulls, there are hundreds of penguins breeding on these islands.

Naval Defence.—The Prime Minister (Mr. Cook) is quite in accord with the suggestion made in the "Cape Argus" that an Imperial naval conference should be summoned by Mr. Asquith. "The Ministry's views on this matter are well known, I hope," said Mr. Cook, in discussing the matter in Melbourne yesterday. "There would be many advantages, no doubt, in such a conference. I am not at all insensible of difficulties in the way. There are difficulties in Canada, and there are difficulties in the old country, but they seem to have enough to do to occupy their attention for some time, while we would welcome any suggestion that might come. The Imperial general conference is due next year in any case, but the question of Empire defence is becoming more and more a matter for serious consideration on the part of the Dominions, and, naturally, we who are contributing well over £1 a head would like, if possible, to see the outlook defined for the whole Empire. It is very curious reading to see the sums contributed by the different Dominions. It will be found that there is the greatest disparity between the amounts, to say nothing of the high total expended every year by the Imperial Government. Australia now stands at the top of the Dominions, and is well up in comparison with Imperial expenditure.

New Federal Department Advocated.—Colonel Millieri, Secretary to the Department of Home Affairs, gave evidence yesterday before a Commission inquiring into the powellising wood process. He stated that since the establishment of the Department of Home Affairs there had been a great growth in Federal buildings, etc. The time had now arrived, in his opinion, when the whole of that work should be carried out by a Department of Public Works, with a director-general, who would be responsible to the Minister. This would be the means of avoiding much of the present waste and extravagance. The chairman endorsed Colonel Miller's suggestion.

Abolition of Patrolmen.—In all probability the khaki-clad corps of patrolmen, established during Alderman Clarke's term of office as Lord Mayor, will within the next few weeks find their occupation gone. The city health officer (Dr. Purdy) has informed the Lord Mayor that the patrolmen are of very little use in keeping the city clean. "In view of the police taking over the control of the streets as regards traffic and obstruction, and the comparatively few prosecutions laid recently from information supplied by the patrolmen, and the fact that a considerable amount of paper, tram tickets, and other refuse is still to been on the streets, I am of opinion," Dr. Purdy told the Lord Mayor, "that better results could be obtained by the expenditure of the whole or part of the money paid for the patrol service by employing a gang of men or boys, whose duty it would be to pick up all waste paper and other refuse. In Melbourne the block-boys pick up tram tickets and other waste papers. In Bournemouth (England), one of the cleanest towns I have seen, men are employed going round the streets each morning with a pointed iron rod, with which they collect tram tickets and other pieces of paper." The Lord Mayor has recommended the City Council to adopt the health officer's suggestions.

Day Labour.—In the annual report, which was submitted at a meeting of the Master Builders' Association last night, reference was made to the wide difference that often exists in the cost of contract and day-labour works. It is not always possible to find out the actual cost of a work carried out by day labour, but an interesting illustration was given in the report of the difference that occurred in actual jobs. The report shows that the price of the Dungog Public School, which was carried out by contract, was £1600; the Public school, Naremburn, carried out by day labour, was £2600; and a Public school at Uralla, a contract work, including extra work, fencing, sheds, etc., to the value of £930, £2659. The plans and specifications of these schools were practically identical. The schools built by contract were in the country, where many of the materials and a great deal of the labour cost much more than in a suburb of Sydney, where the day labour school was erected. As instancing the differences in tendering, two cases given in the report are worth noting:—Teacher's residence, Spring Terrace:—Lowest tender, £551; highest tender, £565; cost by day labour, £798. Tenders for erecting 16 shops and dwellings in the Rocks area, Sydney:—H. J. Thompson (lowest), £15,600; Department of Public Works, £16,583.

Tarred Metal Roadways.—Stress was laid by the Lord Mayor (Alderman R. W. Richards), in a report presented to the City Council at its meeting last evening, on the necessity for falling into line with modern improvements in street construction. He stated that the days of dry macadam for roadways on which there was much heavy traffic were over. He favoured tarred metal roadways, which, when properly laid with specially prepared materials, were more satisfactory and fairly sanitary. The present antiquated barrel watering-carts should be disposed of to the purchaser offering the highest price, and the council would do well in securing a sufficient number of street-watering motor vans for the central streets, while the square water vans fitted with disc spray, horse-drawn, should be used in residential areas and in such places where it would not be practicable to conduct economically these operations by the motor vans.

A Breadless Town.—Visitors to Cronulla were unable to obtain bread from Saturday evening until Tuesday morning. A veritable bread famine prevailed, causing much domestic discomfort and inconvenience. All sorts of expedients were indulged in as substitutes for the staff of life. Not a few vacant seats in church were caused by fathers or mothers, or both, falling back upon the preparation of damper or scones.

Free Water.—In has often been said of unearned increments, such as a big win at a race meeting, that they are "easy come, easy go." So it is with the water that is supplied free by the Water and Sewerage Board, the value of which is estimated in a report just issued at £23,650 annually. Despite every care on the part of the board's officials, much waste takes place which it is very difficult to check. The chief consumers on the free list are the Government, the public hospitals and charitable institutions, municipalities for public parks, street watering and cleansing and other municipal purposes, and the navy. The probability is that the board will have to appoint a "waste" inspector, whose duties will be to supervise the consumption as far as possible, and bring under the notice of the board any flagrant instances of extravagance.

TO-DAY'S CAUCUS.

FEELING AMONG LABOURITES.

CABINET MEETING.

Members of the State Ministry met in the Premier's office yesterday afternoon to discuss the political situation. All the members of the Cabinet were present, with the exception of Mr. M'Gowen and Mr. Edden.

It transpired that the various Ministers have got everything ready in their respective departments in case Caucus should decide to dispense with the services of any of them. The Estimates connected with the various departments are now all prepared, so that incoming Ministers will have no difficulty so far as those are concerned in the coming financial session.

After the meeting closed, the Premier, Mr. Holman, had nothing to say, and hurried off in his motor car. One of the Ministers, being asked if a list of candidates had been picked by Mr. Holman for submission to the Caucus, said he understood that in all there would be twenty-two aspirants for office. A second Minister candidly remarked in answer to a question that Caucus would very likely provide a few surprises. He added that he knew "a set" was being made against Mr. Griffith, Minister for Works, but whether the faction concerned was strong enough to put into that chair their own nominee (generally, said to be Mr. John Storey, late chairman of the Public Works Committee) was another question.

DIVISION OF FEELING.

In Parliamentary Labour circles there is a feeling that the readjustment of portfolios believed to be contemplated by the Ministry will not be sanctioned at to-day's Caucus meeting. Although there is a Liberal precedent for linking the offices of Mines and Chief Secretary, the feeling on the part of the rank and file of the party is said to be strongly in favour of keeping the Mines Department under a separate Minister, in which event Mr. Edden, it is stated, has a good chance of re-election, though a close vote as between him and Mr. Grahame and Mr. Estell is predicted.

It is generally understood that the Premier will go to the Treasury. That Mr. Cann is leaving there has already been received one outward proof. It is not customary to hang the portraits of Treasurers till they become ex-Treasurers, but yesterday Mr. Cann's photo had been added to the mural adornments of the Ministerial anti-room. With Mines a separate portfolio, Mr. Cann may be accommodated as Chief Secretary. The strong feeling voiced among Labour members against a member of the nominee chamber being made the first Minister for Public Health, is said to have minimised Mr. Flower's chances of being in the new Ministry, except as Vice-President of the Executive Council. Mr. Flowers is an active administrator, and his loss would be severely felt by Mr. Holman.

The position of Mr. Hall, the Minister for Justice, is generally regarded as being a source of anxiety to the Premier, whose desire is to see the ex-Commonwealth member occupy the dual position of Attorney-General and Justice. Some members of the party have not been slow to express disapproval of this, despite Mr. Holman's plea that he could hardly do without the assistance in the Cabinet of such a legal and Constitutional authority as Mr. Hall. Mr. Crawford, who has graduated as a barrister, is mentioned as a candidate for one or other of the legal positions in the Cabinet.

THE MELTING-POT.

The Lands portfolio will go through the common melting-pot treatment, and, though Mr. Trefle will have several opponents, he is expected to win home. The vacant agriculture portfolio will create keen competition, the names of Messrs. Black and McGarry being associated with it in advance.

Although he is one of the strong men of the Cabinet, it is stated authoritatively that Mr. Carmichael will have no walk-over. The Minister for Education, despite his record in the Department, is said not to be a persona grata in quarters whose influence will be felt in the Caucus to-day. Two honorary Ministers are to be chosen by the Caucus, one for the Department of Labour and Industry, in succession to Mr. McGowen, and the other to assist Mr. Holman at the Treasury. It is understood that they will not be paid at first, but that legislation will be introduced at the first opportunity to appropriate salaries for the two offices. The proposed new Department of Public Health is to be placed on the same basis, and, on the understanding that it is not to carry a salary for the present, Mr. Flowers may be appointed pro tem in recognition of his work in connection with hospitals and in other spheres that will appertain to this Department. But once the office is made a salaried one, the Caucus feeling seems to be that a representative of the Assembly should hold it.

After the Ministerial positions have been filled, the Caucus will turn its attention to the Public Works Committee, and the chairmanship of committees. Four members have to be chosen to the Works Committee, and Messrs G. Miller, J. B. Nicholson, and H. D. Morton (the ex-Speaker) are spoken of as "certainties" for three of the vacancies. All these three are inexperienced members so far as the committee is concerned, and it is stated on reliable authority that the chairman will be found in one of the Legislative Council nominees, Mr. J. Travers, a pledged Labourite, and a member of the last committee. For the chairmanship of committees Messrs. T. Thrower, H. Hoyle, and G. R. W. McDonald, are said to be the most favoured of the candidates.

The Caucus meeting opens at 10.30 a.m. The ballots will be exhaustive.

The Ministers hope to get through this session by the end of February, so as to leave Mr. Holman free to attend the Premier's Conference in March.

PERSONAL.

VICE-REGAL.

His Excellency the Governor, attended by General Finn, private secretary, inspected the contingent of Belgian naval cadets in charge of Commander Cornellie at his office yesterday morning.

His Excellency received a farewell visit from Mr. T. R. Johnson, who introduced Mr. Harper, Acting Chief Commissioner, and Mr. Fraser, Acting Commissioner, to the Governor. The Premier and Mr. M. V. Murphy, Chief Magistrate and Administrator of Norfolk Island, who is on a visit to Sydney, also called upon his Excellency.

Sir Richard Butler, Commissioner for Public Works, and Ex-premier of South Australia, accompanied by Mr. S. L. Labatt, South Australian Engineer of Harbours, left Sydney last evening for an inspection of the Barren Jack reservoir. Another member of the party is Mr. W. J. Sowden, president of the South Australian Public Library, and Manager of the Art Gallery.

Among the passengers by the Victoria from Auckland to-day are the Count and Countess De Montague, who arrived in Sydney by the Maloja last week, and are on a pleasure tour. The Count is a French nobleman, and he and his wife are keen anglers, and will spend most of their time in the Dominion trout fishing.

The council of the Sydney Chamber of Commerce will entertain Mr. T. R. Johnson, the retiring Chief Railway Commissioner, at a luncheon, to be held at Farmer's rooms on Thursday, the 29th instant.

Mr. W. G. Spence, M.P., has been re-elected president of the A.W.A. by a majority of 14,000 votes.

Mr. Hiram J. Rowthorn, postmaster at Kogarah, and formerly for many years postmaster at King-street, city, has been promoted to the position of officer in charge of the telegraph accounts branch, G.P.O., Sydney.

Dr. MacDonald, chairman of the council of the British Medical Association, arrived in Melbourne on Monday by the R.M.S. Otway, on his way to Auckland, to attend the approaching Australasian Medical Congress, which opens on February 9.

Mr. T. A. Browne (Rolf Boldrewood) has recovered from his recent illness.

Mr. George Fox, 78, member for Normanby in the Queensland Legislative Assembly, died at his residence in Brisbane early yesterday morning.

LATE MR. REEKS.

CLUE BEING FOLLOWED.

POLICE SAID TO HAVE BEEN TRICKED.

LONDON, Jan. 27.

It is reported that the police are sending an officer in a fast boat to catch the steamer Grampian at St. John's, on Thursday.

The police refuse to deny or confirm a report that it has been found that the suspected man on the Grampian, who gave his name as George Rogers, of Market-street, Huntington, gave his name and address falsely.

It is pointed out that the captain's telegram was unofficial. If he received an answered an official message, that fact has not been disclosed. The police are now in wireless communication with the Grampian.

The principal of the Engineering Academy states that Mr. Reeks sent a note saying he was going to the Midlands, and would return on the Tuesday. He destroyed the letter, but believes the writer mentioned Wolverhampton.

After visiting his solicitor on Monday, the deceased gentleman returned to his hotel. There he learned that Ramsden had just gone to Leeds. He then went to his room, hurriedly wrapped his pyjamas and hair brush in some brown paper, left the hotel, and did not return.

The police state that the cartridges purchased by two men at Hooton and James's on the Monday, were not those found beside the body.

An autopsy has been made to see whether the murdered man was drugged, but the result has not been disclosed.

Captain Anson, chief constable of Staffordshire, believes that the late Mr. Reeks was not killed on the spot, but was taken there in a vehicle. He adds that, although blood stains were found six feet from the body, the medical evidence disproves the suggestion that the deceased staggered there. The probability is, according to the chief constable, that the murderer laid the body there whilst he reconnoitred the pit shaft, then dragged it to the hollow, afterwards covering it with the overcoat.

The police are much surprised that Mr. Ramsden, of Chicago, the late Mr. Reeks's companion, did not come forward to assist them in their efforts to clear up the mystery. The Wolverhampton police traced Mr. Ramsden to Leeds, but he could throw no light on the tragedy. He stated that Reeks was a casual acquaintance, whom he met at Liverpool at his hotel on the Saturday, and that he parted from him on the Monday. The police are satisfied that Mr. Ramsden has accounted for his movements.

Mr. Reeks told three people that he intended to visit Wolverhampton, including the purser on the Empress of Ireland, by which he travelled from Canada. He also told a solicitor, before whom he swore an affidavit in connection with some Board of Trade papers.

On January 22, the Liverpool police got on the track of a man who booked in the Midlands for Canada by a liner which sailed during the week. A wireless instruction was sent to detain him. A booking clerk on the North-western line at Wolverhampton stated that on the Tuesday night a man presented a voucher and booked a passage on the steamer Grampian. The man's manner was agitated. His description tallied with that of the individual who arrived with the late Mr. Reeks in Wolverhampton. The Grampian sailed on the Wednesday, and was due at St. John's on the 30th. The captain of the Grampian, it was reported later, had sent a wireless message in reply to the police, stating that the suspected man aboard was an immigrant, that he denied any knowledge of the murdered man, and that a mistake had evidently been made respecting him.

IN CHINESE MARKETS.

COMPETITION WITH UNITED STATES.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.

The Commerce Department has advices from Hong Kong stating that lower quotations of flour from Australia and Canada are tending to drive out the United States product from the Chinese markets.

In November, the despatch states, large imports of Australian flour entered. whereas hitherto Australian flour was received only during times of famine, or when prices were unusually high in the United States.

STORMS IN AMERICA.

NUMEROUS FATALITIES.

ACTUAL LOSS OF LIFE UNKNOWN

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 26.

Severe storms for the second time in the present year have visited California.

Several persons were drowned, including a millionaire and his wife, during a mountain cloudburst near the millionaire colony of Montecito.

Railroad communication is at a standstill, and hundreds of people are homeless. Ranchers are marooned owing to floods in low-lying districts. The loss of life is unknown.

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 26.

An avalanche swept over the mountain side near Storrs, killing three people and injuring three others, and wrecking four houses. The dead men were miners employed in the neighbourhood. They were trapped in their houses and crushed to death.

The inhabitants are fleeing expecting another avalanche.

LABOUR.

BUILDING STOPPAGE.

CLAIM BY STRIKERS.

LONDON, Jan. 26.

The strikers in the London building trade claimed unemployment benefit under the National Insurance Act on the ground that they were dismissed after due notice, but the authorities refused the claim on the ground that the unemployment was due to a trade dispute.

It is estimated that 31,000 men are idle in the building trades, and there are 13,000 coal porters and carmen idle.

Building operations in London, including work at the Commonwealth building, are practically at a standstill.

The Building Industries' Federation has resolved upon all workers withdrawing from their jobs where the builders have discharged men for not signing the agreement to work with non-unionists.

The decision affects the plumbers, crane-drivers, and others, though the masters never required them to sign the agreement.

THE COAL PORTERS.

The coal strikers are granting permits for the hospitals to be supplied, but they have refused to grant the Salvation Army a permit on the ground that it was the intention of the organisation to sell coal.

LONDON, Jan. 27.

There are signs of an early collapse of the coal-porters' strike.

Many of the malcontents are resuming work. Free labourers have been attracted by the wages offering, and are averaging from 35s to 45s per week. They are maintaining almost a normal supply.

The union is ill-supplied with funds.

MARTIAL LAW PROSECUTION.

JOHANNESBURG, Jan. 26.

A court-martial has been opened for the prosecution of Messrs. Drake, Steyn, Ferquena, and Oliver, who were arrested under the martial law regulations.

The first two accused are charged with causing an explosion and the others with having possession of explosives.

RELEASE OF MR. CRESWELL.

The Government has remitted the sentence passed on Mr. Creswell, leader of the Labour party in the Transvaal, not wishing to deprive Labour of one of its principal mouthpieces in Parliament.

PANAMA.

THE TOLLS QUESTION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.

President Wilson conferred with the Foreign Relations Committee on the question of Panama tolls and the Japanese land controversy.

The President stated that there was no critical situation arising out of either question, but he wished systematically to endeavour to test the committee's sentiment on various pending important questions. He hoped, with Mr. Bryan, that peace treaties would soon be ratified. The Japanese question was still open for negotiations.

In regard to the Panama tolls, it is understood that the President expressed a desire to see a general arbitration treaty with Great Britain ratified first, and hoped that afterwards Mr. Adamson's resolution now pending would be carried, thus suspending the operation of the free tolls provision for two years.

Diplomatic correspondence is meanwhile proceeding.

NAVAL AFFAIRS.

THE ADMIRALTY CRITICISED.

SPENDING UNAUTHORISED MONEY.

LONDON, Jan. 27.

The "Daily News," commenting on naval affairs, says:—

"The Admiralty thinks it has done nothing improper in spending several millions which Parliament has not voted or Cabinet approved. This is a dangerous precedent. We are faced with a grave violation of the Constitution when our expenditure is allowed to run on for months without the responsible Minister drawing Parliament's attention to it."

"It is useless," the paper adds, "for the Admiralty to plead that it made a miscalculation."

CANADIAN NAVY.

AUSTRALIAN POLICY DISCUSSED.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.

During the naval debate in the Senate, Senator Bostock said that Australia, after following "contribution" as its naval policy for a few years, finally abandoned it.

No one, said the Senator, accused Australia for thus acting of disloyalty. Therefore, no one ought to accuse Canadians who desired their own navy of disloyalty.

If the Empire was to be held together, he added, the feelings of Australians and New Zealanders would have to be considered, and the whole question of Pacific defence taken up without delay.

THE ZUYDER ZEE.

GREAT RECLAMATION SCHEME.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 27.

The Government's scheme for reclaiming the Zuyder Zee involves reclaiming 815 square miles, and the conversion of 557 miles into a fresh-water lake, at a cost of £15,750,000.

The scheme provides for 18 miles of concrete embankment on the opposite side of the Zuyder Zee, to carry a double line of railway and a carriage road.

It is expected that the land will give the State a rental of £1,250,000.

THE DOMINIONS.

COMMISSION'S REPORT.

IMMIGRATION.

IMPORTANT RECOMMENDATIONS

LONDON, Jan. 27.

The Dominions Commission report has been issued.

It states that the most urgent problem in Australasia concerns a better distribution of population and improved oversea communications. "At present," says the Commission, "the Dominions are spending a great deal with doubtful success in their attempts to secure agricultural workers. It is therefore natural to suggest that some portion of the expenditure could be more profitably devoted to bearing with the mother country a share of the cost of some system of Government farms for testing and training in the United Kingdom. This scheme would be easier if immigration were under central control in Australia, but even under the existing regime it affords hope of success. Australasia mainly requires youths with adaptability. This requirement could be met equally as well from the towns as the country if suitable training were provided."

DOMESTIC SERVANT PROBLEM.

Although Australasia needs more domestics, the Commission is unable to endorse the view that a suitable surplus exists in the United Kingdom. "Family migration," it says, "is open to serious objections under the present arrangements, which are susceptible to improvement. The system whereunder immigrants are recruited is antiquated and defective. The arrangements in Australasia for the reception of women need attention and development.

"More immigrants are needed to fill tropical and sub-tropical Australia, for which Malta seems a suitable recruiting ground. It would be advantageous to divert to Australasia some part of the present Irish migration. Emigrant ships should provide more adequate privacy in the segregation of single women, and the hospital accommodation should be increased.

"The deepening of the larger Empire harbours is urgent to meet future requirements of inter-Imperial trade. First-class harbours should have a working depth of at least 40ft."

FAULTY POSTAL FACILITIES.

The Commission regrets that it is unable to take a favourable view of the oversea postal facilities enjoyed by Australia. "The postal service," it says, "is inadequate, and the existing speed of the mail services does not justify the large subsidies." If enhanced speed is unobtainable at a reasonable cost, the Commission would prefer to see the mails carried at statutory rates, the money so saved to be devoted to improving Imperial communication in other directions—for instance, the new routes which Australia is opening up. Thefefore it would be unjustifiable to bind the States, it considers, to subsidise the Suez service beyond a brief period.

"The termination of the P. and O. Company's contract," it adds, "renders the time opportune to re-examine the problem on broad Imperial lines. The Australian cable rates are too high, restricting the use of the cable to the commercial classes, and checking free intercourse with the Motherland.

"The Dominions' cables work far below their maximum capacity, and certain modifications in deferred messages and week-end cables should be made immediately. Daily cable letters should be introduced. The minimum for week-end cables should be reduced to 12 words at 6d a word, to which the British office is favourably disposed."

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST BRITISH SHIPPING.

The Commission found that the freight discrimination against British shippers, whereby certain British shipowners transport goods from the Continent to New Zealand at lower rates than from British ports, is thoroughly unsatisfacory, runs directly counter to the patriotic and Imperial intentions of the New Zealand Legislature, and acts detrimentally to British trade. "No adequate defence has been made," it says, "though repeated opportunities have been given."

The Commission reported that further scientific investigation of the artesian water supply of Australia was an important question. The substitution of bulk-handling of wheat for bagging was also worthy of examination. Further co-ordination of statistical methods to secure uniformity was urgently desirable. It recommended an Empire conference of statisticians. Preferential advantages granted to British goods were prejudiced to some extent by the fact that each Dominion required a different form of certificate of origin. It urged the appointment of a uniformity commission.

Gratification is expressed at the cotton-growing experiments in Queensland, the improvement of Port Phillip, and the confining of loan issues to definite remunerative purposes.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 26.

ULSTER.

LONDON, Jan. 27.

Mr. Birrell (Chief Secretary for Ireland), speaking at Bristol, denied that Ulster was to be thrust out.

He added, "Long before civil war begins the Government will have an opportunity to tell the country what they offered, and what Ulster refused."

Sir Edward Carson, in a speech at Lincoln, said:—"If Mr. Redmond wants a genuine extension of real local government in Ireland I will join him. If he wants the removal of any abuses in the government of Ireland, any social and economic reforms, or any injustices remedied in social and religious circles, I will help him. I am a man of peace, but not of peace at any price."

The Customs officers in Londonderry have seized a quantity of bandoliers and haversacks which were consigned to a former Unionist Parliamentary candidate.

SHIPBUILDING.

FUTURE OF COCKATOO ISLAND.

MINISTER'S FORECAST.

The Minister for Defence (Senator Millen), speaking yesterday at the luncheon at the naval dockyards' employees' picnic at Clifton Gardens, indicated that not only additional warships, but merchant ships as well, will be built at the Cockatoo Island yards.

"I am pleased to have had the opportunity of meeting so many of the staff of what is not the least important of the Commonwealth Government's undertakings. I hope I may be permitted to make one or two observations on naval matters without being accused of introducing politics into a gathering which should be free from them. You who work in Sydney know something of the future of the establishment. First of all, I suppose we differ on many points, but there is one thing upon which, I think, we must all agree.

"The Commonwealth has taken over Cockatoo Island, and we can all meet together in common cause to make it a success. I recognise that whatever Government is in power must accept that view, and we must see that Cockatoo Island is not starved.

A NEW VESSEL.

"With that idea in view, we invited Parliament to agree to an appropriation of £175,000 for the establishment, and there was no demur. Cockatoo was no good, unless the men there had work to do, and I hope that within the next few days, as a result of what is now before my colleagues, orders will be given for the construction of at least one more vessel at Cockatoo. (Applause.) Then, again, it is not much use if the programme is confined to a single ship, or two ships, or even three ships. One ought to go further, and see that there is a programme of such a nature that there will be no fear, in the event of a change in the political arena, that that programme will be upset.

"I have already told a deputation of delegates from Cockatoo that my ideal of a Government establishment is not one that works at high pressure one day, and dispenses with half its hands the next. We ought to be able to give permanent employment to a certain number of men. There are difficulties in the way, but I do not think they are insurmountable. I intend to see what can be done in the way of planning a programme extending over three or four or five years, so that we will be able to employ permanently a certain number of men. As far as possible, I will endeavour to make the staff a permanent one.

"In all collections of human beings there are bound to be grievances. Men would hardly be human beings if they had no grievances. I am quite prepared to meet the men and discuss any matters which may be in dispute in a reasonable way. At a very early date I will invite you all to meet me. I do not think there are any grievances which you have at the island which cannot be remedied if you will meet me as I am prepared to meet you."

BUILDING MERCHANTMEN.

Continuing, Senator Millen said that Cockatoo was only commencing its career as a naval building establishment, and as such it should not only be a very important adjunct to the naval policy, but a great stimulus would be given to the work if the building of merchant ships were undertaken. He was of opinion that Cockatoo could be increased until it could undertake such work, and be made a very important factor in the commercial shipbuilding of Australia. Of course, the island would be necessarily a place for the building of warships, but he hoped that in the near future it would be the place for the construction of the commercial marine of the country.

"We are only a small people," he concluded, "with limited resources, and there may be a time when Cockatoo Island, so far as the building of warships is concerned, might not be fully employed; but there is no need why it should be idle."

HORSE RACING.

A GOVERNOR'S TRIBUTE.

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

His Excellency the Governor (Sir Day Bosanquet) paid his last official visit to a racecourse in this State at Victoria Park yesterday, and the opportunity was taken at the luncheon by the chairman of the Adelaide Racing Club (Mr. W. B. Carr) to address a few words of farewell. There were also present the Mayor of Adelaide (Mr. A. A. Simpson) and the Speaker of the House of Assembly (Mr. L. O'Loughlin).

In proposing his Excellency's health, Mr. Carr said that, in common with all sections of the community, those who had the interests of horseracing at heart deeply regretted that they were to lose the services of Sir Day Bosanquet as Governor of the State. During the five years of his office he had missed attending only two meetings at Victoria Park, and then his official duties had called him elsewhere.

His Excellency, in reply, said that one of the greatest charms of life here was to be found in the fine manly sports and pastimes, which exercised an important influence upon the formation of national character. Of these sports, racing was one of the most interesting, and he was sure that when properly carried out the sport was productive of beneficial results. (Loud cheers.) "I hold," he said, "that a taste for manly, rational, out-of-door amusements is essential to the formation of character."

MINE CREEP.

EXTENSIVE DEPRESSION.

PERTH, Monday.

A bad creep has occurred in the workings in connection with the northern series of lodes on the Bullfinch Proprietary mine.

The stopes in this part of the mine have been taken out on the square set system of timbering, and to all appearances the workings were as safe as timber can make them. At 5 o'clock yesterday morning, however, the ground from the surface to the 200ft level suddenly collapsed, and a depression about 200ft wide by 20ft deep has been caused.

Fortunately there were no men in the workings at the time the fall occurred, the afternoon shift on Saturday going off at 10 o'clock on Saturday night, when everything was safe in the workings, and the shift was not relieved by a night shift. Had the fall occurred when the miners were in the stopes it is probable a number of fatalities would have occurred.

Mr. Hay, manager, interviewed to-day, stated the fall occurred at 5 o'clock on Sunday morning, when no miners were in the workings.

SYDNEY'S STORM.

HOUSES UNROOFED.

The storm which passed over the city about noon yesterday was responsible for five houses being unroofed at Waterloo, while at Randwick one of the City Council's transformers was struck by lightning and practically ruined.

The five houses unroofed were 41, 43, 45, 47, and 48 Morehead-street. They were occupied respectively by John Garvie, James Weston, Charles Small, Charles Bass, and Walter Leeman. The roofs were lifted bodily and hurled out into the roadway. Fortunately the occurrence was not attended with any personal injuries.

The transformer that was struck was in Avoca-street, and the damage is estimated at about £300.

NEW STEAM LINE.

FROM AMERICA.

A VANCOUVER COMPANY.

It was recently announced by cable that the Merchants' Trust and Trading Company, Ltd., of Vancouver (B.C.), was about to start a new line of steamships between the Pacific Coast of America and Australia.

Particulars of the proposal, which is now stated to be nearing finality, show that the company has behind it in the venture several prominent English capitalists, and that the intention is to run a line of 13-knot steamers, with extensive insulated space and one-class passenger accommodation, similar to many of the steamers which now come here via the Cape of Good Hope. The Merchants' Trust and Trading Company, Ltd., is said to have a subscribed capital of 1,000,000 dollars.

Mr. John Gould, one of the principals of the company, recently outlined the proposal in a letter to Mr. James Towns, of the State of Victoria (Australia) Bureau for Canada and United States at San Francisco. The letter read as follows:—

"We have seen Mr. J. W. Kelly, the Victoria Land Commissioner, during his visit here, and he advised us of the good opening for a line of steamers of about 13 knots speed, with good refrigerator space, and capacity of about 100 superior third-class accommodation, to run either monthly or bi-monthly, from the Pacific Coast through to Melbourne. He intimated that, if we were prepared to make a firm offer, he considered it advisable for one of us to visit Melbourne at an early date, and put such offer before the Victorian Government, when he considered there was a good chance of obtaining either a guarantee of a minimum number of passengers for each sailing for a period, or else a subsidy.

"I should be glad of your views and any information you could give in connection with a line running direct from the Pacific Coast to Melbourne, with the option of going to any ports in Australasia as desired, after calling at that port."

Mr. Towns replied at length, expressing the fullest confidence in the advice offered by Mr. Kelly, and suggesting that the proposal should be placed before Mr. Watt, Premier of Victoria, with a view to obtaining a subsidy. "The Melbourne business people," continues the letter, "have for many years been anxious to secure a direct service with the Pacific Coast, and the Government, I believe, would be persuaded to accede to any businesslike proposal." Mr. Towns also pointed out that the one-class passenger accommodation should prove popular, and the prospects of securing full cargoes of frozen meat, butter, and other products were good. He thought the Panama Canal would be the means of causing a greater influx to Melbourne, which was "the Federal capital, and had a population of 600,000." He also suggested that Mr. Tinn, while in London, should interview the Hon. Peter M'Bride, Agent-General for Victoria, on the subject, who might make a tentative arrangement.

In thanking Mr. Towns for his communication, the Merchants' Trust and Trading Company, Ltd., stated that they were very much in earnest over the proposal, and expected their plans to come to a head in a few weeks' time.

"SAD SYDNEY."

IMPRESSIONS OF BELGIAN CADETS.

NO STREET CAFES.

The Belgian cadets from the training ship L'Avenir, who have been staying at the Royal Naval House, will return to Melbourne to-day. Yesterday they visited National Park, first paying an official call, under Commander Corneille, on his Excellency the Governor (Sir Gerald Strickland) at the Government offices in Macquarie-street. The introduction was made by Captain Rushall, representing the Minister for Defence. His Excellency inspected the cadets, and after shaking hands with the officers expressed his gratification at the visit, and his willingness to do all in his power to render their stay a pleasant one. Commander Corneille, in thanking his Excellency, declared that they had already received very many kindnesses.

The cadets appear to have enjoyed their visit to Sydney. "It is more pretty than Melbourne," said one, "I do not like all the streets arranged in squares." Their opinion of the architectural beauties of Sydney, such as the G.P.O., for instance, was singularly unenthusiastic, but their praise of "our harbour" was rapturous. But some things puzzled them considerably.

"Why is your Sunday so sad?" asked one plaintively. "In Belgium we go to a cafe, we visit the theatre, we hear music, we amuse ourselves well. But in this country there is nothing! Everything is closed. There is what is strange—but of a strangeness!"

"How do you find this climate?" they were asked.

"But it is beautiful that," was the answer in a tone of warm conviction, "only it is sometimes too hot, and there is too much dust."

"It is worse in Melbourne," broke in another; "there one stifles sometimes, one can hardly breathe."

"But why," asked one, "do you not have street cafes in Sydney? Nowhere can one sit down—except on the ground. And yet many people here like to sit down for hours at a time. I see them in the parks, or in the gardens. Last Sunday I even saw two men who sit on the pavement against a wall. I passed them there at 2 o'clock, and when I came back at 7 o'clock still they remain, sitting always, with the arms folded. It is a strange pleasure that!"

But a companion took him up eagerly. It was true what his friend had said, but yet he was of the opinion that they were a people most industrious, the Australians. Had he not seen from the train all the farms, the houses they had built in the country? Ah, it was a good country for the working classes—better than the United States.

The mention of strikes seemed to amaze him. "Have you that many strikes here?" he inquired in surprise. "Truly the workman is never satisfied."

Mr. Shearston, superintendent of the Royal Naval House, will be sorry to bid the lads good-bye. "It is unaccountable to me," he said yesterday, "that the Belgians in Sydney have taken absolutely no notice of the cadets' presence. Both Captain Rushall and I called at the Consulate, but each time the Consul was out, and the Vice-Consul, or Deputy-Consul, was apparently too busy with his own affairs to bother about anything else. I have had sailors, ordinary A.Bs., here of almost every nationality under the sun, and this is the only case in which the residents took no interest in visitors from their own country. The only exception in this instance was that of some modistes from a big shop in the city, who came down here in great eagerness to know whether there was anyone from their own town among the cadets. When they actually found there was one the rejoicings and excitement were tremendous."

RUSH FOR LAND.

URANA, Tuesday.

There were 63 applications for two homestead farms near Daysdale. They came from all over New South Wales and Victoria, and will be dealt with here on January 29.

PRINTERS' STRIKE ENDS.

LAUNCESTON, Tuesday.

The printers' strike in Launceston came to an end to-day.

The linotype men go back at the original rate (3d per 1000) for six months, when they will receive 3½d for four years. Jobbing hands receive 61s for six months, and after that 63s per week.

FATAL FIRE.

INMATES JUMP FROM A BALCONY.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

A fire took place in the early hours of this morning at Taringa, near Brisbane, where a large two-storied wooden building, occupied by the Salvation Army as a rescue home, was rased to the ground, not a stick of the contents being saved, and three of the inmates meeting their death as a result of the conflagration, seven others being more or less injured.

The names of the killed are:—

CONNIE DENZER, 16, who is understood to have been burned to death.

CHRISTIAN MARZOL, 30, and Miss HALBURN.

The last two died from injuries received in jumping from the upper balcony in their frantic efforts to escape. The last-named is said to have been a domestic employed at the institution.

The injured were:—

GRACE LORD, 20, laundress, injury to spine.

MILLIE DOUGLAS WILSON, 23, single, employed at the home, fractured arm and burns on the throat, chest, and neck.

BESSIE KIRKLAND, 32, injury to right foot and shock.

SARAH WHITELOCK, 36, burns, abrasions, bruises, and shock.

NELLIE SHEARER, 30, fracture of ribs, injury to muscles of right foot, abrasions, and shock.

MARY HARVEY, a widow, 60 years, shock.

ANNIE LATHAM, 29, shock and burns.

It is stated that the officials were awakened shortly after 3 p.m. by a cry of fire from one of the inmates. Springing from their beds, they found the building already a mass of flame at the rear, and the staircase on fire. All the 35 inmates, as well as the officers, had been sleeping in dormitories on the top floor, and there was a scene of panic as they endeavoured to escape the flames. Some jumped from the balcony to the lawn, a distance of 20ft. Most of them escaped very luckily, but others sustained injuries.

As the flames spread, the consternation increased. Connie Denzer was amongst those who were got safely on to the lawn, but, suddenly remembering some article in her bedroom, she dashed back into the burning building before any one could stop her. Those outside waited breathlessly for her reappearance, but she never returned, and the remains were subsequently discovered in the smoking ruins.

Miss Wilson was one of those who performed heroic duty, and, in attempting the rescue of inmates, she had one of her arms broken, and was injured about the face. Miss Halburn was safely removed from the burning building, but died from shock, after being removed to the hospital. The third victim, it is believed, had her skull fractured in jumping from the balcony.

The fire raged so fiercely that the building was completely destroyed in little over half an hour.

Doctors were early on the scene, and after the sufferers had been given medical attention they were removed to the General Hospital.

The laundry, which was in a separate building, and expensively equipped, was destroyed, and only the stables were saved. The fire had obtained such a hold before the alarm was given that the firemen were practically powerless. All the brigades could do was to devote their attention to prevent the flames from spreading.

Jan Nightingale, aged 26, has been arrested in connection with the fire, and will be brought up to-morrow morning charged with murder.

OUTBREAK AT TENTERFIELD.

BUILDINGS DESTROYED.

TENTERFIELD, Tuesday.

Following the fire here on Boxing Day—then stated to be the largest in the history of Tenterfield—another still larger occurred about 4 o'clock this morning. Originating in a brick general store in Main-street, occupied by Whit Roper, the flames rapidly spread to three adjoining buildings on the north, occupied by the Tenterfield "Courier," Edmonds' music and fancy store, and Mallouf's drapery store. The musical instruments and other goods were rescued from Edmonds' store, but the contents of the remaining three stores were completely destroyed, and only the walls were left standing.

The new fire engine, delivered only last week, refused to act for half an hour, and then it was too late to save the buildings.

All the buildings and the goods were insured, but, the owners state, not for full amounts.

TWO BUILDINGS DESTROYED.

GILGANDRA, Tuesday.

At 2 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in a four-roomed cottage in Morris-street, occupied by Pearce Hearne, a produce dealer, and spread to a large shed occupied by Riley, Newman, Ltd., skin and wool producers. Both buildings, with their contents, were destroyed.

Hearne and his family only just escaped before the building collapsed.

The first alarm was given by a sister. Soon a large crowd was on the scene, but owing to the scarcity of water they could do very little towards saving the structures. Fortunately it was a calm night, otherwise the cottage adjoining and the Roman Catholic Convent Church would undoubtedly have been demolished.

In Riley, Newman's store, about five tons of hides and tallow were stored, which were uninsured. The buildings were both insured.

The only articles saved from Hearne's was a rifle and two chairs, and these were afterwards burnt in the street.

The damage is estimated at about £600.

A COAST HAZE.

FLOATS OFF UNDAMAGED.

The steamer which created the excitement at Cronulla on Monday night by coming close into the beach turned out to be the Wear (1866 tons), belonging to James Paterson and Co. Proprietary, Ltd.

She was bound from Tasmanian ports to Sydney, and enjoyed a fair run until passing Green Cape, when bush fires along the coast caused a heavy haze over the coast-line, and rendered the task of picking up land-marks and lights almost impossible.

The vessel proceeded cautiously along the coast until after 10 o'clock on Monday night. According to the distance logged, it was estimated that she should have been about four miles north of Sydney Heads by this time. A light was noticed shortly afterwards, and the Wear stood in towards it. Suddenly she grounded on sand, and remained fast.

The vessel's water ballast was pumped out, and, with the aid of her engines, the steamer floated off without having sustained any apparent damage. Early yesterday morning she proceeded on to Sydney, and arrived here at 8.5 a.m.

It is stated that the lights of the picture show on the beach at Cronulla, which were partly obscured by the haze, were likely to cause some confusion, but Captain Keates would not say whether these were mistaken for other lights.

The steamer was discharging her cargo at the Federal Wharf yesterday, and she will probably be floated into dock for sighting as soon as this is completed. So far as can be ascertained at present she has sustained no damage.

GREAT FLIGHT.

STEEPLECHASING IN THE AIR.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

Harry Hawker, the young Australian airman, gave an exhibition of flying this afternoon at Elsternwick.

Ascending rapidly, the airman volplaned to the lower level again, and, at about 500 to 600 feet, described right-hand and left-hand circles, "banking" at an angle of 45 to 50 degrees, and whirling down at an enormous speed to within a few feet of the ground.

He "steeplechased" over fences and trees, drove up again into the air, soared with his engines shut off, and, mounting still higher, set off in the direction of Hawksburn, striking the course of the Yarra.

From 5000 feet elevation he volplaned to Government House grounds, circling them at a height of about 2000 feet. He then struck across Albert Park to the seashore, and arriving back over Elsternwick golf links, made a beautiful spiral volplane, ending in a sharp dive to the lower levels, again landing in the golf links at 36 miles an hour, after about 20 minutes in the air.

The crowd rushed across the ground to the machine, and cheered the airman.

LONGWORTH WINS THE 440.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

The amateur swimming championship carnival was brought to a successful conclusion at the Dry Dock last evening. The attendance was excellent. During the evening a new breast-stroke record for 220 yards was established by E. G. Finlay, of Western Australia, of 3 minutes 10 seconds. Results:—

Country Championship of Queensland, 100 yards.—T. V. Dowzer (Rockhampton), 1; M. Shields (Rockhampton), 2; J. Saunders (Ipswich), 3. Time, 1m 4s. The title had been previously held by Dowzer, who on this occasion won by about two yards.

220 Yards Breast-stroke Championship of Australia.—E. G. Finlay (Western Australia), 1; W. Finney (Victoria), 2; E. Fox (N.S.W.), 3; C. Rodway (Tasmania), 4. Time, 3m 10s. It was announced that the winner's time was an Australasian record. There was not more than a fraction of a second between the winner and the second man, Finney (of Victoria), the previous holder of the title, and holder of the previous Australian record, 3m 13s.

440 Yards Championship of Australia.—W. Longworth (N.S.W.), 1; S. Springfield (Queensland), 2; C. Healy (N.S.W.), 3; C. Graham (Queensland), 4; J. W. Saunders (Queensland), 5. Time, 5m 42s. A good start was effected. Longworth was first at the turn, and the order in the second lap was Longworth, Healy, Springfield, Graham, and Saunders. Coming home Longworth led to the finish by about 5 yards, with a splendid race for second place. The judges declared Springfield second.

FARMERS UNITE.

FIGHTING THE UNION.

COOLAMON, Tuesday.

On Saturday Mr. W. P. Dyce presided over a meeting of 600 persons, mostly farmers, for the purpose of combining to resist the demands of the A.W.U. Nearly all enrolled. It was decided to appoint an electorate organiser. Members will man the chaffcutter, handle freight, and do anything necessary to become independent of strikers. The district farmers have never been so unanimous as now. The chaffcutters' hands are still idle, and are encamped. The lumpers threaten to cease work this week. The employers are firm.

UNION CHARGES.

LEVY ON PRODUCE CARTED.

WAGGA, Tuesday.

Important business was transacted at a meeting of the Wagga Farmers and Settlers' Association. It was resolved that no fees be charged to men receiving work through the office of the association. It was moved that chaffcutters registering with the association be given preference by members. The organising secretary said that he had an interview with a carrier, who said that they were charged £1 1s for a member's ticket by the union, but a proposal was mooted to make it £2 2s; furthermore, they were being levied 4d per ton, and were being fined for a breach of the regulations. This carrier had declared that carriers were willing to fall into line with the association. It was stated that an arrangement had been come to with agents and the union to purchase wheat and chaff irrespective of whether it was black or white.

Mr. Brunskill said that as long as farmers agreed to conform to log rates they would not be declared "black." He was not prepared to do this to build up a monopoly.

The general feeling of the meeting was that they wanted an assurance that their wheat or chaff would be handled either by agents or by other people. It was stated that when agents had bought produce from a non-union farm it was declared white, but when the same farmer carted his goods to the railway it was declared black, and would not be handled. This was considered helping to build up a monopoly.

A list of 73 names was submitted for new membership.

ROBBERIES.

BURGLARS AND PICKPOCKETS

On Monday night, Mr. James R. Lawson's house in Holden-street, Ashfield, was visited by thieves. The family had been out during the evening, and, returning at about 9 o'clock they were startled at seeing one man astride the sill of one of the windows and another standing on the verandah. On their approach the men ran away. One of the bedrooms had been dismantled slightly, though nothing of value was missed.

Two months ago burglars attempted to open a safe in the office of the Grainger Silvering and Bevelling Proprietary, Ltd., at 272 Pitt-street. Some time on Monday last thieves again entered this office by breaking the glass of a back window. A box of 50 cigars, belonging to the manager, was the only thing stolen. At midnight a passing policeman noticed the front door open, and that way the thieves apparently made their exit.

William Lacey, of Illawarra-road, Marrickville, on Monday afternoon had a leather purse containing 4 sovereigns and a £10 note stolen from his pocket.

On Monday morning diamond rings worth £180 were stolen from the house of Norman C. Bucknell, Llangollen, Spit-road, Mosman.

BLOWN OUT TO SEA.

CAIRNS, Tuesday.

The missing sharebroker, Mr. Clarke, has been discovered at Double Island Hotel. Mr. Clarke said he left Cairns on Friday night in a rowing boat, and was carried out to sea. He, however, managed to reach the mainland on Saturday. He camped at Hartley's Creek that night. On Sunday morning he set out to reach Double Island Hotel. He had to swim innumerable creeks, in some of which he nearly lost his life from floating debris. He swam the last creek at 7 o'clock on Sunday evening, and reached Double Island Hotel.

UPPER HOUSE.

DICTATION BY P.L.L.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

A large number of delegates were in their places early last night, the annual P.L.L. conference being booked to begin at 7 o'clock sharp. A very decided effort is being made this year to conclude the business of the conference in reasonable time, so as to allow the country delegates to take part in the whole of the business before their various leaves of absence expire.

Almost immediately after the ringing of the president's bell, there was noticed a stir amongst a number of delegates, and when at last order was restored, and the chairman called upon a speaker, the burden of the disturbance was shown to be the press reports of the opening day's proceedings of the conference. The president was asked how it came about that, despite the exclusion of the press by express resolution, that morning's papers contained substantial and accurate reports of the whole day's proceedings. "Even now," said one delegate, "the doors of this room are open, and we don't know who has got in." The president (Mr. E. H. Farrar, M.L.C.) then stated that definite instructions had been given to the doorkeeper that only delegates, members of the Federal State Labour parties, and "friends of Labour," who were vouched for by delegates or members, were to be admitted. In reply to this statement of the chairman, another delegate asked how, if this were the case, it came about that Mr. Robert Patten, the Liberal Federal member for the Hume, Mr. T. J. Campbell, and another gentleman happened to be sitting in the hall? Mr. Farrar thereupon repeated the instructions that had been issued to the doorkeeper, and added that he would be obliged if any gentlemen who had secured admission by reason of any temporary neglect of the doorkeeper would retire at once. Messrs. Patten, Campbell, and their friend at once rose and left the hall, and when seen afterwards these gentlemen said they were incensed at the pointed objection which had been taken to their presence. Mr. Patten said he objected very strongly to the imputation that his presence was not desirable, because only "friends of labour" were desired. "I have always contended," he said, "that I am a friend of labour, and since my election to the Federal Parliament, I have endeavoured to faithfully represent every section of my large constituency." Mr. Campbell was also indignant at what he called the insult of the pointed reference made to his presence. He said he had been invited by Mr. J. C. Watson to visit the conference, and on the previous day he had been welcomed by that gentleman and several other prominent representatives of the Labour movement. "Of course I left the hall after the president's statement," he said, "but I feel that it was a gratuitous insult to me. I was not there as a spy, but simply as the general secretary of a very large association of farmers and settlers, and because I was anxious to better understand the general attitude of a large section of the P.L.L., with whom my association at the present moment happens to be in conflict."

From this onward a vigorous exclusion of all except those who came within the category of the qualifications mentioned by the chairman was exercised, every newcomer being closely scrutinised and questioned as to his bona fides as a "friend of Labour."

UPPER HOUSE ABOLITION.

The chief business of the night's session was the discussion upon a series of resolutions on the agenda paper with regard to plank one of the Labour fighting platform—the abolition of the Legislative Council. The Tichbourne P.L.L. had given notice to move that,—"Providing the Labour party are returned to power, steps be immediately taken to abolish the Upper House." A large number of consequent resolutions were on the business paper, all urging in emphatic language that the Upper House be dealt with at once. The Tichbourne P.L. League, however, had priority, and the delegate of this league opened the discussion. His remarks were of a general nature only, and reviewed the legislation which had been checked in the revisory chamber.

Mr. Lamond took up the discussion at this point. He commented severely upon the rumours which have gained publicity during the last week that the Government had decided upon the personnel of a batch of appointments to the Upper House. This was a matter, he said, in which conference had every right to assert its authority. If there were to be any appointments made to that chamber at all, and he supposed that was the only way by which the chamber could be abolished, that conference should take to itself the right of saying who should be appointed, and from what source they should be drawn. A calculation had been made, by which it appeared that eighteen appointments were necessary in order to swamp the Upper House, and secure a certain majority for a bill to bring about its abolition. If that were so, a reasonable suggestion would be to allow eighteen nominees to be selected as follows:—

Labour Council, six.
A. W. Union, two.
Newcastle Unions, two.
Cobar Unions, one.
Broken Hill Unions, one.

He (Mr. Lamond) would suggest, however, that the whole matter be inquired into by a special committee of the conference, in order that the claims of the various sections of the movement might be considered.

This suggestion seemed to secure almost unanimous approval, and after several delegates had spoken in support of it, an amendment to that effect was carried, and Messrs. J. C. Watson, H. Lamond, J. F. Purcell, Carl Johnson, and Mrs. Dwyer, were elected as the committee to report.

A notable feature of the debate was that, although a number of Parliamentarians were present, including Messrs. Hall (Minister for Justice) and Carmichael (Minister for Education), none of them took part in the discussion. The Premier (Mr. Holman) did not arrive at the conference until just as the question was being put from the chair.

"LIBERAL UNIONISTS."

The only other discussion of any note which took place last night was one upon a number of similar proposals appearing on the agenda paper affirming that members of unions, before being allowed to vote in selection ballots for Labour candidates, should be compelled to sign a pledge that they would support the candidate selected by the ballot.

A large number of delegates spoke to the question, but the principal speech was contributed by Mr. Bowman (A.W.U.). It was complained by a number of speakers representing Labour Leagues as distinct from unions that many members of unions were Liberal supporters. No restriction was placed upon them, it was declared. They were admitted into the unions by payment of the entrance and subscription fees, and no obligation was placed upon them to support Labour in politics. Members of leagues on the other hand, were individually pledged to support Labour candidates, under a penalty of seven years' disqualification, and the case of Mr. Page, M.L.A., of Botany, was imported into the discussion by way of illustrating the point. One delegate declared that it frequently happened that Liberal unionists deliberately brought about the selection of the weakest man, in order to encompass Labour's defeat. The case of the selection by members of the Tramway Union of the candidate for Waverley, who eventually won the seat by 59 votes on the second ballot, was cited as a case in point.

Mr. Bowman made a vigorous reply to the contentions of previous speakers. On behalf of the A.W.U., the biggest union in Australia, he said he protested against the insinuation of disloyalty cast upon unionists generally by the introduction of such a propo-tion. It may be true that in every union there were a certain few who did not vote Labour, but they were the insignificant minority, and it was not only futile, but insulting, that conference should be asked to legislate for the suppression of these few. The great body of unionists were loyal, and he had no doubt would remain loyal for all time.

The proposal to alter the rules as suggested was defeated by a substantial majority.

THE MINISTRY.

TO BE SELECTED BY BALLOT.

A proposal was made to suspend the standing orders to discuss the method of the election of Ministers by caucus. It was moved that the selections be by open voting. This, however, was lost. Caucus will to-day select the Ministers by ballot.

THE PRESIDENCY.

The Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Mr. Meagher, Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald, Mr. W. L. Duncan, and Mr. D. Guthen were nominated for the presidency. Ballot papers for this election, and for the election of other officers and the executive committee, will be issued on the assembling of conference to-night, and the results will be declared at 10 p.m. on Friday. Messrs. Turner, M'Carthy, and Holden were appointed to act as scrutineers, Mr. A. O'Brien being the returning officer.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT.

PORTFOLIOS AND THE UPPER HOUSE.

The proposal from the A.M.A. to suspend the standing orders to deal with the question of the allotment of portfolios, having particular reference to the Mines Department, was discussed at length. The A.M.A. asked that the portfolio of Mines be allotted to a separate Minister. This was lost. The matter will be left to the Premier to decide.

The Tichborne P.L.L. proposed,—"That steps be immediately taken to abolish the Upper House." This was carried.

MOTIONS DEFEATED.

The following motions were defeated:—

By the Surry Hills P.L.L.—That clause A of plank 1 be amended to read as follows: "Abolition of Legislative Council," "Initiative, referendum, and the recall."

By the Drummoyne P.L.L.—Alteration of Rule 4: That members of unions eligible under rule 4 should be compelled to sign the local league roll, before becoming entitled to privileges of membership. This to apply only to Newcastle, Broken Hill, and the metropolis.

By the Annandale P.L.L.—That rule 4 be amended by striking out last four words in bottom line.

By the Federated Storemen and Packers' Union of Australia.—Rule 5, Amendment: Last two lines to read "financial members of bona fide trades unions, 6d."

By the Enmore P.L.L.—Alteration to Rule 6: That rule 6 be added to by inserting a sub-clause insisting on all those taking part in a selection ballot signing a book containing the labour pledge, which all league members have to sign. Such book to be kept at place of polling on day of ballot as well as the ordinary book which all league members must sign before voting.

By the Alexandria P.L.L.—Amendment of Rule 6: That in clause c, rule 6, the words "and the member must present proof, et. seq.," down to the words "local State electorate," be struck out, and that the words "and the member must attend a branch meeting and there sign the roll book," be inserted in their stead.

By the New South Wales Loco. E.D.F. and Cleaners' Association Committee, amendment to rule 6—Trade Unions which are affiliated and financial under rule 18 may secure full league membership for their adult members by paying annually to the executive the sum of 6d for each financial member resident within the State; or branches of a union affiliated and financial under rule 18 may secure full league membership for their financial members by paying annually to the executive the sum of 6d for each financial member resident within the electorate in which the branch is situated.

Conference accepted invitations from the "Worker" trustees, and from the Professional Musicians Union, to inspect premises; and from Mr. Bain, to attend Princess Theatre.

A GIRL'S RIGHT.

HIGHER EDUCATION SYSTEM.

ADDRESS BY MINISTER.

The new North Sydney High School for Girls, on Lane Cove-road, Crow's Nest, was opened yesterday by the Minister for Education (Mr. Carmichael). The building is two-story, with brick walls. The main building contains 12 rooms, each 26ft by 22ft. There are also two teachers' rooms and a visitors' room. The floors are of concrete, reinforced with steel bars. Lighting and ventilation has been carefully studied. A gymnasium has also been erected separately, the main room being 50ft long. The assembly areas and pathways have been asphalted. The work was carried out by day labour, and cost £8600.

Mr. Carmichael spoke about the remarkable change that had taken place in the Education Department during the last few years. "The fact that this is the first building erected in the State for the higher education of Public school girls," he said, "makes it necessary for me to say a word about the education of girls. In any organisation of public education the point to be kept in view is the necessity of providing different kinds of education to fit the needs of the persons to be educated, and special consideration has, therefore, been given to the educational needs of the girls attending the public schools. At the primary school provision is made for the teaching of needlework in all classes from second-class upwards, while throughout the country, the wives of teachers take a very special interest in giving the bush girls whatever training is possible in other domestic arts. At the beginning of last year domestic superior public schools were introduced, at which girls may receive a training in everything relating to home management. One of the most striking developments of the present age is the entrance of women into every field of occupation. She is now holding her own in commerce, art, literature, and science. The calling of woman is something more than to be the cook, nurse, or dressmaker of her home, for above this material side of a woman's life she has a right equally with men to share in the refined and intellectual enjoyments of life. Especially is she called upon to be the intellectual companion of man. When she marries she must be able to enter into her husband's interests, and she must have interests of her own, that will lift her above the position of a household drudge. It is necessary, therfore, in the education of girls, to guard against what might be called 'lopsidedness.'"

DEATH OF A MAN.

STRONG REMARKS BY CORONER.

The City Coroner yesterday inquired into the death of a clerk, Thomas W. Mullholland, 61, who died from hemorrhage at Prince Alfred Hospital on January 16.

Constable Sharples stated in evidence that at 8 p.m. on January 16 the son of the licensee of the Bank Hotel, King-street, Newtown, told him that a man was lying in the yard, having fallen down the steps some time previously. Going to the hotel, witness found the deceased was breathing heavily, and the back of his head was cut. Subsequently witness was shown a flight of eleven steep steps where deceased had fallen. The licensee's son told him that while at tea, at about 6 p.m., he had heard a thud. Shortly after he and a barman found deceased lying at the bottom of the steps. They carried him down to the back yard, thinking he would soon be all right.

In recording a verdict of death from natural causes the coroner said: "The evidence shows that this man was treated in a most inhuman manner. He was allowed to stay on the premises while under the influence of liquor, whereas he should have been put out of the hotel. The licensee is liable to a penalty for this offence. Deceased was found at the bottom of the stairs unconscious, and bleeding from a wound in his head, and that should have been sufficient to cause someone to get attention for him. But he was apparently of no more use to the hotel, and was picked up, dragged down to the yard, and practically dumped on a rubbish-heap. If he was put in the stable unconscious, it is ridiculous to say he could have got up and walked out again. The son should certainly have gone for a policeman earlier than he did. It was indeed a most callous act to dump the man in the yard. This case should be brought under the notice of the licensing inspector, so that there shall be no chance of a further occurrence of this sort."

CITY CONTROL.

A STATE OF CHAOS.

REFORMS OUTLINED.

REPORT BY THE LORD MAYOR.

A few weeks ago a report was submitted by the late Lord Mayor (Mr. A. C. Cocks, M.L.A.) on the eve of his retirement from office, emphasising the need for the reorganisation of the City Council's service. A longer and a stronger report on the same subject was presented to the City Council at its meeting last evening by the present Lord Mayor (Alderman R. W. Richards), who indicated many directions in which savings might be effected and increased efficiency secured.

"We are all," Alderman Richards stated in his opening remarks, "united in an honest endeavour to ameliorate the conditions obtaining, and can be relied upon to do our best to bring about the removal of the uneconomic and embarrassing methods that now exist so that economy, expedition, and efficiency may be secured. Recently the council had before it statements alleging that chaos reigns supreme within and throughout the service, that there is no direct control, that each department is a law unto itself, and that generally there is a condition of affairs that calls for prompt action and immediate remedy of the weaknesses that beset the service. I recognise that those conditions obtain to a greater or lesser extent, and I made known my views to the officers, giving them the opportunity to make whatever recommendations they considered would relieve the service of the disadvantages under which it may labour, and provide a way for bettering the administration of the affairs of the city. The officers responded, and their reports indicate that they are fully alive to the necessity for reorganisation and amendment.

OVERLAPPING AND EXTRAVAGANCE.

"It is clear from these reports that the time has come for the council to grapple with the position. It is abundantly manifest that there is departmental overlapping, circumlocution everywhere, no regard for expedition, and extravagance in the administration and execution of works and other requirements of the service. Aldermen will naturally ask, Why is this so? The town clerk, upon assuming office in 1902, was regarded as having supreme control over all departments, and as responsible for the proper organisation and efficient administration of all services of the council.

"For some time after entering upon his duties Mr. Nesbitt made it perfectly plain that he was seized with a full knowledge of his duties, and exercised the powers that in his first report he claimed to belong to the functions of his office. Recently, however, it would appear that by reason of certain actions on the part of one of my predecessors he has become disheartened by undue interference and restraint exercised against his desires and efforts to keep the council fully informed. The town clerk has informed me that many instructions had been issued by the Lord Mayor to the heads of departments individually without his knowledge. Such a breach of privilege would, of course, tend to hobble the town clerk, and to hamper and discourage him in the active pursuit of control and direction, and open the door leading to chaos. Why the town clerk did not resist such interference is to me not understandable. Heads of departments, I am told, have ignored the authority of the town clerk and his right or power to supervise and direct the various departments and respective branches of the City Council. It is a matter of regret that such objectionable contingencies have arisen, causing, as they do, dislocation, dissension, dissatisfaction, discomfort, and unrest among the officers whose duty it is to give their best services for the general good of the city. In these circumstances the best results are obviously unattainable."

ELECTRIC LIGHT SERVICE.

The Lord Mayor discusses the advisability of the reconstitution of the City Electrical Engineer's Department, with the object of placing the electricity undertaking on a basis similar to those operating in cities of the United Kingdom and America, where such concerns under municipal control are separate and distinct from other municipal departments. "Electricity supply is," he says, "of such a nature that technical considerations enter largely into the business aspect, and the difficulty of obtaining men who, while technically proficient, are possessed of good sound commercial training, is responsible for the development (especially in America) of the commercial engineer. With a competent man, commercially and technically capable, at the head of the council's electric light business—one who would act in the capacity of a general manager, who would be able to discriminate on technical matters, aided by an officer who might be termed the 'technical manager'—there would be every prospect of success. Two divisions of the staff are requisite, and may be placed under the heads of 'Technical' and 'Business' respectively. The result would be that all business would be handled direct, thus avoiding the present delays of the town clerk referring the matter to the officer concerned, and he in due course reporting to the town clerk, who then attends to the business, thus involving unnecessary delay, duplication, and circumlocution." Proceeding, the Lord Mayor says that modifications consistent with the preservation of the council's authority might possibly be arrived at that would result in the better management of this department.

The report forwarded to him by the city surveyor is described by the Lord Mayor as "an emphatic commentary upon conditions that should not be." In his report the city surveyor stated that the disorganised conditions at the Wattle-street depot were due chiefly to dual control. If all the employees at the depot were placed directly under him a considerable saving could be effected. "Any comments of mine on the city surveyor's references to the depot," wrote the Lord Mayor, "would be superfluous, and I shall not, therefore, say more than that I agree with the views expressed, and suggest that the services of the staff that is stated to be unnecessary, be dispensed with, which will result in an estimated saving of £45 per week.

The recommendation is made that the city surveyor's and the city cleansing departments, which are now controlled by separate heads and separate staffs, should be amalgamated.

The condition of the refuse destructors at Pyrmont and Moore Park called for immediate action on the part of the council.

The annual cost of the resumption branch of the legal department is £1658. The city solicitor had undertaken to do the whole of the general resumption work for the council for the payment of 1000 guineas per annum, relying upon the council meeting him fairly in the way of extra remuneration toward meeting his expenses if at any time the extent of the resumptions became abnormal. The Lord Mayor recommended the council to approve of this proposal.

Reference is again made by the Lord Mayor to the necessity for the amendment of the City Building Act to admit of modern methods of reinforced concrete and steel construction, as had during the last decade been actively adopted in the cities of England, Europe, and America. He stated that he had been authorised by the Premier (Mr. W. A. Holman) to say that he would carefully consider the proposed bill, with a view to its enactment. It was a matter that required thorough consideration at the hands of the council; and the officers in conference with the Institute of Architects and Engineers, having the benefit of the experience and regulation of other cities to guide them, could draft up-to-date provisions that would result in a comprehensive Building Act.

On the motion of Alderman W. P. M'Elhone, the report was referred to the finance committee.

GENERAL CABLE NEWS.

LONDON, Jan. 27.

Lord Knutsford is seriously ill, his condition being critical.

The Cunard and White Star lines have announced reductions of 4 dollars in the Eastbound rates, and 2½ dollars in the West-bound rates, to meet the reduction made by the Hamburg-Amerika Company.

BURNING FATALITIES.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OCCURRENCE.

QUEBEC, Jan. 26.

The clothes of Wilfrid Robin, aged 13, caught fire through an explosion of coal oil while trying to light a stove.

When the boy's clothes caught fire he rushed in amongst his relatives, seeking help.

As a result nine other people caught fire, and six were burnt to death.

LORD DENMAN'S RESIGNATION.

LONDON, Jan. 27.

The "Daily Telegraph," in a leader on the Wattle Day celebrations, says that Lord Denman's ill-health and resignation have brought a note of sincere regret amid the rejoicings.

Other newspapers contain eulogistic references to Lord Denman's services to Australia.

LATE LORD STRATHCONA.

LONDON, Jan. 26.

At the memorial service in Westminster Abbey in connection with the funeral of Lord Strathcona there was a large attendance of notable people. King George, Queen Mary, Queen Alexandra, and the Duke of Connaught were represented. Captain Collins (Secretary to the Commonwealth), Mr. Thomas Mackenzie (High Commissioner for New Zealand), and the Agents-General for the Australian States were present.

The pall-bearers included the Duke of Argyll, Lord Lansdowne, Lord Aberdeen, and Mr. Lewis Harcourt (Secretary of State for the Colonies).

Queen Alexandra sent a wreath with an autograph tribute, "In memory of the Empire's kind benefactor." The Commonwealth Government also sent a wreath.

After the ceremony in the Abbey the funeral procession proceeded across London to Highgate, where the interment took place.

ANNIVERSARY DAY IN LONDON.

LONDON, Jan. 26.

In connection with the celebration of the anniversary of the foundation of Australia, a thanksgiving service was held in St. Dunstan's-in-the-East, among those present being Sir John M'Call (Agent-General for Tasmania), Mr. A. A. Kirkpatrick (Agent-General for South Australia), the Bishop of Rochester (Dr. Harmer, formerly Bishop of Adelaide), and Bishop Thornton. The congregation numbered 150, mostly ladies. The Rev. C. E. Doudney, formerly of South Australia, delivered a stirring sermon from the text, "Righteousness exalteth a nation." He emphasised that Australia was the only instance of a nation founded without bloodshed, and expressed the hope that Australia would lead in civilising and Christianising the bad old world.

The Wattle Day League held a reception at the Metropole, which was largely attended, those present including Lord and Lady Emmott, Sir H. W. Just, Captain Collins, Mr. Thomas Mackenzie, Mr. M'Bride, Sir John and Lady M'Call, and Mr. and Mrs. Kirkpatrick. Sir John M'Call, in the course of his speech, paid a tribute to the services of Lord Strathcona to the Empire. He regretted the absence of Sir George Reid, High Commissioner for Australia.

Songs and recitations were contributed by Australians.

The "Daily Telegraph," the "Morning Post," and the "Times" publish leaders on Wattle Day. All the newspapers have long accounts of the celebrations.

ENGLISH BILLIARDS.

GRAY V. NEWMAN.

LONDON, Jan. 26.

Great interest is manifested in the match between Gray and Newman, especially in regard to Gray's skill with ivory balls.

The opening of the match was quiet; Gray's best effort off the red losing hazard was at the interval, when he scored 69 out of a break of 76. His best break was 110 against Newman's 104.

Scores at the close of to-night's session were:—

|---|---|
| Newman (rec. 4000) | 5167 |
| Gray | 645 |

Gray was in poor form during the evening, and was unable to control the ivory balls for his favourite stroke. His best runs were 17 and 13, losing hazards.

This is the first public match in which George Gray has used ivory balls. Three games have been arranged, and each for £250 a side.

SOUTH AFRICAN TOUR.

CAPETOWN, Jan. 26.

The Marylebone team defeated Orange River Colony at Bloemfontein by an innings and 374 runs.

The visitors lost eight wickets for 565, and then declared. M. C. Bird made 2??, and J. W. Hearne 108.

Orange River, who followed on, were dismissed for 117 and 74, Barnes taking seven wicket for 41, and six for 38, and Douglas four for 34.

Satisfaction was expressed by the Prime Minister (Mr. Cook) to-day at the decision of the State Governments of Victoria and New South Wales, to join in the Commonwealth's amended scheme for representation of Australia at the Panama Exhibition.

AUSTRALIAN SINGERS.

VIEWED WITH ENVY.

MADAME DOLORES' ASSERTION.

FREMANTLE, Tuesday.

Madame Dolores, who is about to commence a concert tour of New Zealand and Australia, is a passenger by the Zieten, which arrived to-day.

It is about three and a half years since she was last in Australia, since when she has been touring Europe and South Africa. This makes her sixth visit to Australia.

Madame Dolores states that she is in good form, and, although she has just recovered from an illness, critics who have heard her since her recovery assert that never before has she been in such good voice. Her illness, she says, was brought about by overwork, but for the past few months she has been resting at her home in France. Although she did not have an opportunity of hearing any young Australian singers at present on the Continent, she states that they are all doing well, and their success was viewed with a certain amount of envy by Continental singers. Madame Dolores is accompanied by Mademoiselle Vaudour, who has been her constant companion for the past 30 years. She will make a three months' tour of New Zealand and a six months' tour of Australia.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

Sir William Manning, president, took the chair at the annual meeting of the Royal Philharmonic Society, which was held in the Girls' High School, Castlereagh-street, last evening.

The president, in moving the adoption of the report, emphasised the fact that the year had been, musically, a successful one, due specially to the splendid work of the conductor, Mr. Joseph Bradley. They had recognised their duty to young Australian artists. The increased charges for the Town Hall had lessened their income, also they had been deprived of the right to present "The Messiah" in the Town Hall on Christmas night. This had been looked upon as an institution in the past, and he felt that the public would demand of the civic fathers the right to hold the festival on Christmas night. It was a religious and devotional festival as well as a musical function.

Judge Backhouse, seconding the motion, congratulated the society on a splendid year's work.

The report, which was adopted, showed that the credit balance was now £700, but it had not been increased during the year.

Mr. Walter Gates, in proposing a vote of thanks to the officers, referred to the position occupied in the Australian musical world by Mr. Joseph Bradley, the conductor, and to the good work of Mr. William Johnson, the hon. secretary, Mr. T. W. Richards, hon. treasurer, the hon. librarians, Messrs. W. M. Lusby and Mr. H. S. Patterson, and the other officers.

Mr. Bradley, responding, said that last year's journey had been rough in places, but they had safely negotiated them.

Mr. Johnson said that they had only made £30 during the year, and it was evident that the people of Sydney did not want musical festivals like they had given in "Elijah" and "The Creation."

THE SURVEYORS.

PRESIDENT AND THE FEDERAL CAPITAL.

"Financial stress, due to the tightness of the money market, and to a lesser extent the smallpox scare," were the reasons advanced for a slack year by Mr. S. A. Curtis, retiring president of the N.S.W. Institute of Surveyors, in his annual report to a large meeting last night.

During the year, the report added, 31 new members had joined. The Surveyors' Bill is still in the committee stage, and country surveyors are beginning to clamour for protection from unauthorised men, who are undertaking and being paid for surveys, the plans of which are unacceptable to the Registrar-General. The most important event of the year to surveyors was the application by the Surveyors' Labourers' Union for a wages board. The award was generally regarded as ill-considered. The result appeared to be an increase in cost to the contract surveyor of from 15 to 30 per cent., which will have to be met by an increase of fees all round. A new development was the establishment of local associations in country towns.

"Yet another question which has absorbed a great deal of my time is the final lay-out of Canberra. In this I have been fighting almost a lone hand," the report continued. "I attribute that to the fact that surveyors have not given very serious thought to the subject of town-planning, and not to want of sympathy with me in my efforts. I have fought strenuously against a danger which threatens our projected capital city. By some irony of fate, the secretary of the Town Planning Association is the stumbling block in the way of a proper consideration of the problems governing the lay-out. Whether my efforts result in victory or defeat I will have the satisfaction of knowing that I fought my battle in the interest of the Australian capital with clean weapons. There were several defects in Mr. Griffin's scheme, notably the want of sewerage."

An interesting lecture was delivered by Mr. E. C. Andrews, B.A., F.G.S., on "The Geology of the Blue Mountains."

SOUTH SYDNEY HOSPITAL.

FUNDS NEEDED.

The subscribers to the South Sydney Hospital held their fourth annual meeting—the first since the opening of the institution—at the Redfern Town Hall, last night. The president, Mr. Joynton Smith, M.L.C., occupied the chair.

The president's report, referring to the four and a half months during which the hospital had been available for the treatment of patients, stated that the average number of beds occupied from August 18 to October 13 had been 19.75 out of 20 available, and from the latter date to December 31, during which period there had been 40 beds available, the average occupation was 36.5. Since August 9, the patients admitted had numbered 226, of whom 143 had been discharged cured, and 23 relieved. At the end of the year there remained 33 patients in the hospital. Eighty-seven operations had been performed on in-patients, and 168 on out-patients. During the period 571 casualties had been dealt with, and 1254 cases had passed through the out-patients' department.

The financial statement showed that, notwithstanding Government assistance and donations, the hospital was in debt to the extent of over £4000. Almost the whole of this liability, however, had been incurred in connection with building and equipment. The committee were informed that the Government had seen its way to place a further sum of £3000 on the next Estimates, and this, together with the pound for pound subsidy pending during 1913, should practically liquidate the liabilities. The cost of maintenance for the current year had to be considered, however, and if the institution was to remain solvent, it would be necessary to obtain greater financial support from the residents of South Sydney than had been received in the past.

On the motion of the president, seconded by Archdeacon Boyce, the report was adopted. Officers were elected.

ANXIOUS OUTLOOK.

MR. SPENCE ON THE FUTURE OF LABOUR.

There were 23 delegates present at the annual conference of the A.W.U., which was opened under the presidency of Mr. W. G. Spence, M.P., yesterday afternoon, at MacDonell House, Pitt-street. The report of the general secretary (Mr. E. Grayndler) was adopted, and ordered to be printed. It referred, among other things, to the recent industrial troubles in the country over the handling of the wheat harvest.

The president, in the course of his address, stated that the troubles with wheat would have been more widespread had it not been for the great tact exercised by Mr. Grayndler. He then dealt with Commonwealth statistics and the cost of living, explaining how the purchasing power of the sovereign varied, and how it had an important bearing upon the question of wages. He made mention of a contention by New Zealand unionists that the Courts of the Dominion no longer were a gain to them, but rather a factor in favour of wealth. In contradistinction, he said, were the gains obtained by employees through the medium of the Commonwealth Conciliation and Arbitration Court. This Court had had 188 cases before it in three-quarters of last year, and the gains for each quarter were, respectively, 5s, 4s 3d, and 4s 1d, spread over a very large number of men. Thus, although there was an immense decrease in the purchasing power of the sovereign, the experience of Australian arbitration showed a gain over and above the value of this decrease. An illustration of this kind was, he thought, sufficient to prove that it was to the advantage of the working classes to stand by and maintain the present system of arbitration. He told, also, how arbitration had encouraged the formation of unions, and how other unions had developed by organising efforts.

INDUSTRIAL WEAPONS.

Mr. Spence then went on to refer to the industrial events of the past two years. There had been two great strikes in New Zealand, two in South Africa, and one in Queensland. In the cases of New Zealand and South Africa, the whole powers of Government, including the military, had been used to crush unionism, while in the case of Brisbane the police had had most to do with the settlement. Unions, which were based on law and order, were not going to tolerate for long this kind of tyranny. There were indications that capital was playing a game which would have a far-reaching effect. Strike-breakers were coming into evidence the world over. Mr. Farley, the leader of the Strike-Breakers' Union in America—a body organised and subsidised by the great combine—had died recently leaving £200,000. More direct evidence, however, was the Australian body, organised by the employers, known as the Independent Workers' Union, which Mr. R. O. Blackwood, ex-president of the Employers' Association of Victoria, had admitted was largely subsidised. Then, again, there was evidence that the employing forces were engaged stirring up mischief in the ranks of unionism. This phase of the undercurrent was not wanting, either, in recent shipping dislocations. It was a significant fact, too, that big storekeepers were stocking up in anticipation of events to come. It was plain to thinking men that the long reign of industrial peace was not to be allowed to continue. If the employers had their way, there would be a big industrial war at any moment.

ADVICE TO WORKERS.

It therefore behoved organisations of labour to secure sound and brainy men—such, indeed, as would not be calculated to fall into the traps that would be set for them by employers at a risky period. The time was at hand when labour had no chance unless it took control of the Government, the military, and the police. He quoted South Australia as an instance where the electorates had been jerrymandered in such a way as to make it practically impossible for labour to get into power at all. It would take 7000 electors to elect a Labour man, while it would require only a little over 2000 to elect a Liberal. In Victoria Mr. Watt was doing the same thing. He was giving three times the voting strength to the country that he would give to the city. In Queensland, it was being made practically impossible for the nomadic worker to get on the roll at all. In the Federal area there was an effort being made to get men off the roll. This silent action to defeat Labour ideals was such as called for the utmost watchfulness, tact, and unity on the part of Labour. It was due to big unions getting together that the threatened spread of the New Zealand strike had been prevented. This would, he said, now be followed up by the establishment of a constitution, which would bring together all the large unions as a practical controlling force for the workers of Australia. In the working out of this great scheme there must be discipline. There were times when a union should not be the attacking force, and there were times again when the advance guard should be led by good and experienced generals. On these lines only would Labour hold its own in the march of progress.

NEWCASTLE.

COAL MINERS.

THE AFTERNOON SHIFT.

NEWCASTLE, Tuesday.

The case for the abolition of the afternoon shift, which was opened during last week's sittings of the Miners' Wages Board, was continued to-day, when a fresh claim was put in by the representative of the Miners' Federation, and evidence commenced in support of the case.

Judge Edmunds presided.

The claim as handed in by Mr. Lewis, was for the afternoon shift to be abolished in all ordinary working places except in case of actual necessity, namely for ventilation and examination, special winning out places, and safety purposes. If any work be performed on the afternoon shift the employees should receive 33 1-3 per cent. increase on ordinary rates, or if they work on the third shift or "dog" watch, to receive 50 per cent. above the current rates. The claim also asked that for all work done on pay Saturdays, Sundays, and public holidays, double rates should be paid.

Mr. Kelynack said that he did not wish the board to stay its work, but he submitted that the case could not be proceeded with at once because they wanted to meet those outside the Proprietors' Association.

The chairman mentioned that he had an application by Abermain colliery for exemption from any award that might be made in respect to the claim. He said that it was necessary that service should be made upon all proprietors outside the association. In referring to the claim, he stated that outside the clause relating to double rates on pay Saturdays, Sundays, and public holidays, the matter could not be considered new. He could not see that Mr. Kelynack's clients would be prejudiced by the case going on. There yet remained for the Court to decide whether the board had jurisdiction to abolish the afternoon shift. If the board had no jurisdiction and entered upon the consideration of the case, and came to the conclusion that increased rates shall be given, its duty would be to consider what were fair and reasonable rates for the employees working the shift.

After evidence had been heard, the board adjourned till to-morrow morning.

NORTHERN MINERS' WAGES BOARD.

The following motion was passed at to-day's meeting of the miners' delegate board,—"That the executive officers be instructed to oppose strenuously any references as urgent cases made to the miners' wages board by the Minister or any other responsible person."

ACCIDENT FUND.

The miners' delegate board passed the following resolution to-day,—"That the executive officers interview the Minister for Mines and all other mining bodies that contribute towards the Government accident fund, urging that if a working-man who has been employed in the mines for five years dies from natural causes, the widow be allowed funeral expenses."

Mr. Watson said the reason for the alteration was that although a man might be said to die from natural causes, the nature of a miner's calling produced diseases of an order which could not be regarded in the list of accidents, yet it was really the result of having to work under certain conditions peculiar to mining.

UNDERGROUND EMPLOYEES.

"That we make the strongest possible representations to the Labour party, requesting them to make it compulsory for the working days for all underground workers not to exceed eight hours from bank to bank, and to make it an offence for an employer too allow his employee to work underground for more than that time in the 24 hours; and also for the employee when he knowingly remains underground longer than that time." The above motion was carried by the miners' delegate board.

THE COLTS' MATCH.

A DRAWN GAME.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The Victorian colts finished their match with the colts from New South Wales to-day, on the Melbourne Cricket Ground, and the result was a draw, in every way creditable to the home team, who, after being 185 runs behind on the first innings, disposed of the Sydney boys for 163. The Victorians were thus set 349 to win, and had about 200 minutes in which to get them, or fail to hold the innings. They finished up with 255 runs for the loss of four wickets. The match thus ended in a draw. The takings at the match amounted to £41 16s. Scores:—

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

The flat barometric conditions, which covered New South Wales on Monday, have given way to a rather energetic Antarctic disturbance, which at present extends as far northwards as the southern part of Queensland; while the western portion reaches as far west as the Darling.

This energetic disturbance covers the whole of the Tasman Sea, and is centrally situated a little to the east of Hobart. The high pressure over the southern part of Australia has advanced about 600 miles eastward, and is now centred between Albany and Eyre.

The tropical disturbance is still over Queensland having made no perceptible movement.

ALLEGED SWEATING IN SYDNEY.

OUTDOOR WORKERS.

"In evidence given by a Melbourne manufacturer at the tariff inquiry, regarding boots, it was stated," writes "One who Sews," "that the reason for cheapness of the imported article was sweating by the British manufacturer. I am of opinion he is quite right in his remarks, but he did not tell us anything regarding the sweating of outdoor boot machinists by the manufacturers in Sydney. I can assert these people are only getting a miserable existence at their calling. One firm gives these machinists (outdoor) 2s to 3s per dozen for best work, the worker having to supply her own thread, also to carry her work to and from the factory. There are many who are working to keep themselves, besides, perhaps, the aged and invalided, or family, and could not, through circumstances, work in a factory, although first-class machinists."

Mr. D. J. Johnstone, secretary of the Boot Trade Employees' Federation, stated yesterday that his union, when it had the inquiry before the Boot Trade Board, tried to fix wages for female employees in the boot trade, but only succeeded in fixing them for those in the factories. The contention by the employers was that the outdoor machinist was a contractor, who did not come under the Arbitration Act or any wages board.

"We are not satisfied with the opinion we had on that occasion. This labour comes into competition with the indoor workers in the fixing of prices. "We are, therefore," he said, "now moving in the direction of testing the matter again in a more thorough manner.

"Personally," said Mr. Johnstone, "I think there is a certain amount of sweating going on. My union is 'up against' outdoor machinists until such time as they can be covered by an award. My trouble is to find the individuals who are parties to the sweating."

FUNERAL OF MR. W. A. GRUBB.

The funeral of the late Mr. William Allen Grubb left Mrs. Kirby's premises, Castlereagh-street, on Monday morning, at 9 o'clock. The service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. W. ### CITY GARBAGE.

The health committee of the City Council has recommended that a steam hopper barge, capable of carrying at least 450 tons of refuse, be purchased, for the purpose of conveying refuse to sea to a sufficient distance to do away with the possibility of causing a nuisance. The matter was discussed by the council last night, but was referred back to the committee, in order that the council might be furnished with an estimate of cost.

LATE SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Ascot will, this afternoon, be the rendezvous for patrons of pony and galloway racing. The nominations are numerous, and several of the events will have to be run in heats. The customary transit arrangements will be in vogue, special trams landing visitors at the racecourse gates. The first race is timed to start at 2 p.m., and the results of the racing may be anticipated as under:—Maiden Handicap.—First division: Moorhill or Gay Lad; second division, Midnight or Lignum. Fourteen-two Handicap: Goldenmore or My Peggy. Flying Handicap: First division, Yarrum or Uncle Jim; second division, Regent or Lady Clarette. Fourteen Hands Handicap: Sir Moorefield or Lord Hope. Ascot Handicap: Arilian or Pomeroo. Encourage Stakes: Vocalist or St. Moritz. Fourteen-one Handicap: Lady Mascot or Nell Roy.

The prize-money distributed at the A.J.C. Anniversary meeting totalled £5707, of which Kilmeadon credited Mr. E. J. Stanton with £890 by his success in the Anniversary Handicap; Mr. J. E. O'Brien comes next with £526 for Golden Hop's win in the Challenge Stakes; then follow Messrs. "W. T. Nowlan," £517 10s; J. Tomlinson, £475; Taylor and Bruce, £396; L. Abrahams, £296; I. Earnshaw, £287; D. U. Seaton, £276; F. S. O'Donnell, £268; E. Silva, £251; "J. Northern," £246; W. J. Day, £200; S. Hordern, £178 10s; Morton and Osborne, £160; A. Knox, £110; E. Bunn, £100; W. Brown, £90; G. Marlow, H. Conlon, T. Murdoch, A. Foley, and F. G. White, £60 each; H. Cohen, G. Gilbert, J. S. Brunton, L. Forrest, and H. R. Denison, £50 each; and H. and G. Main, £30.

The following race meetings have been granted registration by the A.J.C.:—Blandford (February 14), Bellinger River Jockey Club (January 31), Wellington Students' Amateur Picnic Race Club (March 18), Western District Racing Association, Orange (February 20, 21), Delungra Jockey Club (April 18), and Jerry's Plains Jockey Club (March 14).

As was to be expected, only a few gallops were recorded at Randwick yesterday morning, and those were done on the tan. Miss Mooltan got over six furlongs in 1m 20s, and Belove ran a circle strongly, Fortitude assisting over the last six furlongs. Harpist, Cagou, and Canaque, along the back of the course, slipped over six furlongs in 1m 20s, and Mary Maltster ran half a mile usefully. Fugue and Fordeel, together, got over five furlongs in 1m 7¼s, while Cider merely spurted. Cooghal and Master Flavus took 1m 6s for five furlongs, and over the same distance Coradil and Royal Laddie went strongly. Steady work was done by Golden Hop and Sir Vive only spurted over a short course. Dr. Hart's task was a usefully run five furlongs, and Herringbone traversed a furlong further in 1m 20s, while Bretelle took 56s for half a mile.

The scratchings to date for the Tasmanian Turf Club's carnival are: January Handicap, Caimarie. All engagements, Leetide, Wynyard Lad, Paumera, Widden, Steeplechase, Busra.

The conditions of the Rosehill Cup, the principal event in connection with the Rosehill Autumn Meeting on March 21, are announced. The added money is 1000 sovs., the owner of the second to receive 200 and the third 100 sovs. from the prize, and the distance is one and a quarter mile. There is a sweepstakes of 5 sovs., or 1 sov. forfeit if declared before 4 p.m. on Thursday, March 19. Nominations close with the secretary, Mr. Geo. W. S. Rowe, at 4 p.m. on Monday, March 2; and also at the office of the Sanddwn Park Racing Club, Melbourne, and the office of the secretary of the C.J.C., Christchurch, N.Z.

Mr. E. J. Watt's racehorse, Midnight Sun, arrived last night by the steamship Manuka from New Zealand, accompanied by a stable companion and a steeplechaser. Midnight Sun is engaged in the Sydney Cup, and will be prepared for the Autumn racing campaign by Harry Rayner, at Randwick.

The nominations received yesterday for the February meeting of the Gosford Racing Club numbered 90, of which the Flying Handicap was responsible for 13, Nursery Handicap 21, Stewards' Mile 8, Park Stakes 20, Gosford Handicap 6, and Flying Welter 22.

VICTORIAN AUTUMN HANDICAPS.

The weights for the principal events of the Victorian autumn racing campaign were declared yesterday. Mr. Kelly-Maitland has the A.J.C. Doncaster Handicap winner, Jolly Beggar, at the head of the list for the Oakleigh Plate, a race over five and a half furlongs, with 9st 11lb, and, fit and well, the well-performed son of Ayr Laddie should be able to handle that impost. Popinjay, with a couple of pounds less, has been left with a good chance, while Cider, Valido, and Captain White have not been overburdened on the 9st 7lb mark. Nuwara Eliya and Athenic read nicely with 9st 3lb and 9st 1lb, respectively, and, lower down the list, Aleconner and Widgiewa should be well suited with their respective burdens. Others in the 8st division that have not been harshly treated seem to be Gold Brew, Sunlike, Traquette, and Woorak; while in the 7st section Peck o' Maut, Brunnhilda, Arrowform, Lord Liddell, Bretelle, Hieraetus, Ethel Buckley, and Coolamatong have been left with fair prospects.

Gigandra heads the long list of candidates for the V.R.C. Newmarket Handicap with 9st 13lb, and that should be well within his compass. Jolly Beggar has been fairly used when asked to carry 9st 7lb, and, with 3lb less, Popinjay has reason to be content. Royal Scotch should be able to act well under 9st 1lb, and, if at his best, the Tasmanian candidate, Desire, who is already on the winning list for the race up the six-furlongs straight at Flemington, should act well under 9st 1lb. Nuwara Eliya seems nicely in with 8st 11lb, and, on the same mark, Valido, Lilyveil, and Cider have not been harshly treated. With a pound more than he carried to victory in the Carrington Stakes, Athenic seems to have a good show, and others in the 8st section that have not been unduly weighted are Aleconner, Audacity, Sir Willie, and Gold Brew. In the 7st division, Tofua, Yeneda, Widgiewa, Brunnhilda, Sunlike, Arrowform, Peck o' Maut, Lord Liddell, and Sound Asleep have not been overrated; and, among the lightweighted brigade, Bretelle, Avonwort, Mint Sauce, Irish Mist, and Coolamatong have none the worst of the fixtures.

Cagou is at the top of the tree with 9st 5lb in the Australian Cup, and with that burden he has not been shown much consideration, and the same may be said of Jolly Beggar, who follows with a concession of 3lb. Fit and well, the Parisian should be content with 9st, and the same may be said for Wolawa. Sea Prince should be nicely suited with 8st 12lb, and his compatriot, Lilyveil, with 3lb less, has not been harshly used. Royal Scotch, with 8st 7lb, reads well, as does Cider on the same mark, and with 2lb less Harpist, in his best form, should be well equipped for the trip. Barios and Wassail, with 8st 3lb, appear to have been treated with a shade of leniency, and with a couple of pounds less Prizefighter should be content. In the 7st division Andelosia, Belove, Diabolo, and Coradil seem to have no cause for complaint, but there is nothing in the light-weighted section to command any attention. Taken right through the burdens have been fairly distributed.

BLOODSTOCK SALE AT RANDWICK.

Messrs. H. Chisholm and Co. held a sale of bloodstock at their stables, Randwick, yesterday afternoon, when 16 lots were offered, and five lots were sold. Among those passed in were Maltchester at 500gns., North Woodleigh at 400gns., and imported Valido at a like figure. The following lots were sold:—

Betting: 2 to 1 on Throar, 2 to 1 each v Singer and Mittabar, 8 to 1 each v Ruby Brown and Viteral. Won after a hard race by three-quarters of a length. Time, 1m 18s.

Bowral Handicap, 1m.—Chas. Clarke's Lady Warpaint, by Warpaint—Marmora, 9st 8lb (Bracken), 1; D. M'Donald's Eris, 8st 4lb (Denny), 2. Other starters: Lock Gold, 8st 10lb; Woodgrove, 8st 7lb. Betting: 2 to 1 on Lady Warpaint, 6 to 4 v Eris, 10 to 1 v others. Won comfortably. Time, 1m 55½s.

January Handicap, 7f.—C. M'Guire's Inventress, by Inverinay—Josephyne, 9st, inc. 10lb over (Hanslow), 1; Harry Gander's Singer, 8st 11lb, inc. 15lb over (M'Donald), 2. Other starters: Mittabar, 7st 8lb; Brown Star, 7st 4lb. Betting: 6 to 4 on Inventress, 2 to 1 v Singer, 3 to 1 v others. Won by two lengths. Time, 1m 32½s.

Welter Handicap, 7f.—Chas. Clarke's Lady Warpaint, by Warpaint—Marmora, 10st 9lb, inc. 10lb penalty (Bracken), 1; D. M'Donald's Eris, 8st 12lb, and H. M'Guire's Throar, 8st, inc. 4lb over (Hanslow), dead heat. Other starters: Singer, 8st 10lb; Woodgrove, 7st 7lb. Betting: 2 to 1 on Lady Warpaint, 2 to 1 v Eris, 2 to 1 v Throar, 10 to 1 each v Singer and Woodgrove. Lady Warpaint came through in the straight, and won a good race by two lengths. Time, 1m 31s.

ATHLETICS.

A TRIANGULAR CONTEST.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The committee of the Victorian Amateur Athletic Association has somewhat altered its arrangements for the international sports meeting on the Melbourne Cricket Ground on Saturday. It was intended to have a match between J. Burton (Vic.) and G. J. Parker (America) over 75yds, 100yds, and 100 metres (the Olympic distance 109.3yds). J. F. Bradley, the Sydney champion, however, has decided to remain in Melbourne for next Saturday's meeting, as he is anxious to meet both Burton and Parker again. He was far from well on Saturday. It has been decided that he shall compete, and that the distances shall be 50yds, 75yds, and 100yds.

COOLAMON, Tuesday.

The Coolamon Athletic Club celebrated Anniversary Day with their 21st annual sports carnival. Nearly 3000 were present in Kindra Park, the takings being £90. The events were well contested by competitors from the city and country. Results of the chief events:—

BOXING.

THE STADIUM MATINEE.

At to-day's matinee at the Stadium Johnny Summers and Arthur Evernden, who meet on Saturday, will appear in sparring exhibitions. A ten-round contest and numerous short bouts will be staged.

OLYMPIA TOURNAMENT.

The semi-final round of the Olympia Club's professional tournament was completed at the Newtown Stadium last night, before a large attendance. Mr. W. Weekes refereed. Results:—

Heavyweight Division.—Jack D'Arcy (City) beat Sid Melson (Miller's Point) on points.

10st 9lb Division.—Snowy Sturgeon (Miller's Point) was given the decision over Jack Lewis (City) on points.

10st Division.—Fred. Kay (Miller's Point) knew too much for Jack Clune (Surry Hills), and won every round on points. Arthur Tierney (Newtown) and Jack Lavigne (Darlinghurst) boxed the best bout of the evening, and it was not till seven rounds had been contested that Tierney was given the decision.

9st 1lb Division.—Jimmy O'Brien (Redfern) was more aggressive than Joe Goode (Glebe), and won well on points.

8st Division.—Jimmy O'Brien (Redfern) was more heavily and accurately for Billy Molyneux (Redfern), and was given the decision on points.

Two extra bouts were staged. Ned Murphy, who had not been seen in the ring for some years, won cleverly from a better-conditioned lad in Joe Conroy. Tommy Brown outpointed "Cobber" Beavis.

KING BEATS BROWN.

HOBART (Tas.), Tuesday).

At the King's Hall to-night Mick King, of Western Australia, met Seaman Brown, of the Australian navy, for the middleweight championship of Tasmania and a trophy valued at £100. In the ninth round the towel came from Brown's corner.

AMERICAN MATCHES.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 26.

Freddy Welsh won on a newspaper decision over Earl Fisher in 10 fast rounds.

To be fresh and clean, to look bright and healthy, use Rexona Skin and Facial Soap.—Advt.

BUILDING MATERIALS.

A BAD IMITATION IS OFTEN COSTLY TO USE.
(HARDIE'S GENUINE) SHEETS.
After standing Government and other tests in Australia for over ten years, have proved to be everything they are claimed.
EXPERIENCE
thus gained has enabled us to procure these Sheets specially suitable for the Australian climate, and they do not crack or buckle.
MADE IN ENGLAND.
Extensively used for Exterior and Interior Walls, Partitions and Ceilings.
PROOF AGAINST FIRE, ROT, HEAT, AND ANTS.
On account of the rigidity of FIBRO-CEMENT, the studs to receive the sheets need only be spaced 2ft centres.
ERECTED COST SAME AS WEATHERBOARDS.
Sizes—8ft x 4ft, 4ft x 4ft, and 6ft x 3ft.
F. C. WATER PAINT (in Paste Form).
Specially Prepared for use on FIBRO-CEMENT SHEETS, for Exterior and Interior Use.
FIBRO-CEMENT SLATES, in Grey, Purple, Red, and Dark Colours, make an ideal roofing for the Australian Climate.
Quotations given, FIXED by our Expert Slaters, in any district.

A COOLER ROOF
FOR HOT WEATHER.
CALMON'S (the Original),
SLATES and SHINGLES are cooler, stronger, and better for all Australian buildings because:
They are mostly TRUE ASBESTOS, the marvellous substance that resists fire.
They considerably REDUCE temperature.
They reduce fire risks in districts liable to bush fires.
They are non-conductors of electricity.
Lightning does not affect them.
Being thin, they cool rapidly at sunset.
CALMON'S ASBESTOS SLATES and SHINGLES are full of features that will interest you. Write.

PRESENT RENTS TOTAL £484 YEARLY.
LEASES EXPIRE 30th JUNE, 1914, SO THAT THE PURCHASER CAN OBTAIN POSSESSION THEN.
HARDIE and GORMAN PROPRIETARY, LTD., have received instructions to sell by Public Auction, at their Salerooms, 133 Pitt-street, at 11.30 o'clock on WEDNESDAY, 11th FEBRUARY, 1914,
THE ABOVE DESCRIBED VALUABLE BLOCK OF BUILDING LAND, WITH Nos. 164 TO 172 PHILLIP-STREET THEREON.
The Auctioneers desire to call the special attention of Capitalists, Investors, and others to this exceptional chance of securing so large a block of land in a good position in the city.
PHILLIP-STREET during the past few years has greatly come into favour, and many new buildings have been erected for business purposes, notably garages, while its proximity to the Supreme Court and other Courts makes it a favourite location for Barristers and Solicitors, and new Premises if erected here should let to advantage. The proposed extension of Moore-street to Macquarie-street if carried through must of necessity greatly enhance the value of this property.
Messrs. PRIDDLE and GOSLING, Somerset House, Moore-street, Solicitors to the Vendor.

BY ORDER OF THE TRUSTEES OF THE ESTATE OF THE LATE GEORGE FISHBURN, ESQ.

THE IDEAL HOMESITE
should have, amongst other features, a pleasant outlook. It may not seem a very important feature for the man who is away all day, but for his wife, who has to stay at home, it makes a big difference. It is much more pleasant to gaze out upon green sunlit country and sparkling water, to enjoy the healthful air of the open country, than to have your vision limited by bare bricks and mortar, and to breathe the stuffy atmosphere of the close-in suburb.
Beautiful Views and Healthful Conditions are but two of the features that recommend GRASMERE ESTATE,
MORTLAKE,
This Magnificent Property extends practically from the Burwood-Mortlake tramline, and runs in a gentle grass-clad slope right down to the waters of Major's Bay, a secluded and picturesque arm of the Parramatta River. Well-made roads subdivide the Estate, and they are planted at the sides with young trees, which in a year or two will convert these roads into beautiful tree-shaded boulevards. The view from all over the Estate is magnificent, extending across the Parramatta to Cabarita on one side, and taking in the Concord Golf Links (which adjoin the property) on the other. Church of England and Roman Catholic churches adjoin the property, and a fine Public School is right on the Estate. Gas and Water available.
AUCTION, NEXT SATURDAY,
JANUARY 31,
AT 3 P.M. SHARP, ON THE GROUND.
THE MOST IMPORTANT FEATURE
from a commercial standpoint, is the fact that the Mortlake Gasworks is a short distance from the Estate. The City Gasworks at Kent-street is now being removed to Mortlake, and this will bring hundreds of new residents to the district. Even now house accommodation is almost unprocurable; in fact, "double-banking" is the rule, two and even more families occupying the same house. Many of these people will want homes on Grasmere.
EASY TERMS.
The Lots average 50 feet frontage, with depths up to 170 and more. Every Lot is cleared and ready to build on. They will be offered on our Easy Terms of £1 down and 10/ monthly, including interest, for every £25 purchased. Title is Torrens. Plans ready in a few days; but send in your name now.

MEDLOW,
IN THE HEART OF THE BLUE MOUNTAINS.
Mountain Property is going to meet with a big demand this year, especially those parts which are most accessible to the city. Now, MEDLOW, without being too far away from Sydney, is in close touch with the best and most typical Blue Mountain Scenery. Majestic Waterfalls, Fern-clad Heights, and Beautiful Gullies are all within comfortable distance of HYDRO VIEW,
MEDLOW.
This Beautiful Residential Property is right opposite the Celebrated HYDRO HOTEL, and is practically on the edge of the mighty Heights overlooking the wonderful Kanimbla Valley; such famous sights as Rodriguez Pass, Evans Look-out, Govett's Leap, Wall's Cave, and the Valley of the Grose are within easy distance; so that lovers of grand and impressive scenery will find plenty of opportunity to follow their bent.
AUCTION SALE, SATURDAY,
FEBRUARY 14.
AT 4 P.M.
ON THE GROUND.
THE SALE WILL TAKE PLACE IMMEDIATELY ON THE ARRIVAL OF THE 1 O'CLOCK TRAIN FROM TOWN.
Medlow has an elevation of 3445 feet; consequently enjoys a fine, healthy climate. The journey from town occupies some three hours, but the benefits obtained easily outweigh the time of travel. MEDLOW BATH, to give it its full name, is the most select of the Blue Mountain Resorts, and, owing to its increasing popularity, Land in the district is rapidly rising in value. The Estate is within a few minutes of the railway station. The Land is of excellent quality, and suitable for building purposes.
EASY TERMS.
OF £1 DEPOSIT AND 10s MONTHLY,
(Including Interest)

CHOOSING A NAME.

It may seem strange to you that so many of our properties in the Clyde-Granville district bear such similar names as Longlawn, Greenlawn, Longview. It is not that we are lacking in originality or stuck for a name, but simply because the outward appearance of the properties is so enticing that the names instinctively suggest themselves. Fine level stretches of green land, splendid home sites, and a grand outlook over the adjoining country.

The properties have more than this to recommend them, as in addition to these advantages they have the more solid one of a big commercial value ever on the increase.

LONGLAWN ESTATE, CLYDE–AUBURN,

is one of the most desirable properties in this rapidly-growing district. It is close handy to Clyde Station, within easy walk of Auburn, and convenient to the principal factories and manufacturing concerns. It is a park-like subdivision, level, and nicely grassed. The blocks average 40 x 125 feet, and every one has the qualities for the making of a fine home, besides offering chances for small investors. Lots from 9/ per foot. Terms, from £1 down, and 10/ month. Torrens Title.

LONGVIEW ESTATE, MERRYLANDS,

is only some ten minutes from Harris Park, or Parramatta Station, and is just 13 miles from Sydney. Goodlet and Smith's big works are just a short distance away, and other large manufactories are close by. They are not near enough to interfere in any way with the desirability of LONGVIEW for residential purposes, but afford plenty of opportunity for work, and are an assurance as to the prosperity of the locality.

Longview commands a fine outlook, including picturesque views of the Parramatta River and the orchard slopes of the Hill district.

The lots are level, roomy, and well drained, mostly 50 x 137 feet, and are all ready to build on. Prices from 4/6 a foot. Terms from 10/ deposit, 5/ monthly. Torrens Title.

84B PITT-STREET, AUCTIONEERS AND REALTY SPECIALISTS.

CRONULLA BEACH

is undoubtedly our most fashionable surfing resort at the present time. Not only this, but it has a big residential population. Great developments are in hand in connection with this district, and there are lots of money to be made by purchasers on either of these properties.

ST. MERVYN'S

Estate, Cronulla. It has a long frontage to the tram, and it is within a mile of Cronulla's magnificent Beach. The soil is of the best, and can be relied on to produce fine crops of fruit and vegetables. Half-acre Blocks, £32/10/. Terms, from £1 down, and 10/ monthly.

KINGSWOOD

Estate is situated about midway between Sutherland and Cronulla, fronts the tramline, handy to Miranda Store, P.O., etc., and within easy tram ride of either the station or magnificent surf beach. The land is level and clear, the lots average 50 x 150, front good roads, and are available on our usual Easy Terms of £1 deposit and 10/ monthly (including interest) for every £25 purchased. Torrens. Prices, from 7/6 foot.

ROSEBERY
MODEL AND INDUSTRIAL SUBURB.
TOWN-PLANNING COMPANY OF AUSTRALIA, LIMITED,
WHERE EVERYONE OWNS HIS OWN HOME.
Doesn't that sound good to you—to own your own home—to be for ever free from the worries and expenses of a "rented" cottage, to find each week, each month that your hard-earned wages are ever increasing to YOUR advantage, and not to some unsympathetic landlord's?
LOOK AT THESE REMARKABLY LIBERAL TERMS.
This is what Rosebery offers to YOU. A neat, attractive, comfortable, solidly-built HOME, convenient to work, for a deposit of only £30, or thereabouts, and the balance of purchase money payable at, say, 25/ per week, as rent, which sum includes principal and interest, at the surprisingly low rate of 6 per cent. Larger deposits carry proportionately smaller weekly payments.
It's a wonderful encouragement to a man to see his wife and family healthily and happily set up IN THEIR OWN HOME. Just you be wise and at once inspect this and similar

HABERFIELD,
"SYDNEY'S GARDEN SUBURB."

NOW THE HOME OF MANY HEALTHY, CONTENTED FAMILIES.

Every test applied to this fashionable, modern residential area will further establish it as of unequalled merit from every point of view. Apart from its convenient situation to both city and the seaside, the cool, shady, restful trees to be seen in all the streets, the wonderful profusion of flowers, the compellingly attractive designs of the homes, the charming outlook at once grips the fancy of every home-seeker. Here it is seen and felt is the ideal spot for health and happiness, and, because of our liberal system of purchase, the most economical home site of all.
MOST ATTRACTIVE TERMS.
MOST ATTRACTIVE TERMS.

Just think, with an initial outlay of only £50 one of these beautiful Haberfield Homes is open to you for occupation, free to enjoy to the full, while without the least difficulty the balance of purchase money is being paid as rent in small weekly sums. Can you wonder, with all these attractive features, that the demand for Haberfield Homes is so consistently maintained? That we are daily besieged with applications to view?

Seeing for yourself "Happy Haberfield Homes" will be a step full of shrewd wisdom.

Here are two typical "Haberfield" Home Gems:—

is special training, undoubtedly.
This country is full of energetic, capable men, whose days are spent in work which is not suited to their natural talents. They lack the time and the means to stop work and take a course of training, and so they go on—year after year—always getting further from what they most want. If this applies to you, send at once for a free copy of our Booklet, which will explain how you can get the special training you are in such urgent need of, in your own home, at small cost, without interfering in any way with your present position. When sending for the booklet, mention which of these subjects interests you.

MOTOR DRIVING
MEANS MORE MONEY
if the experience is gained at
DOHERTY and ADAMS' MOTOR SCHOOL, where 30 pupils successfully passed the City Police Test last month. Here is what one of them says:—
"316 Victoria-street, Darlinghurst.
"Dear Sirs,—Although it was only yesterday I received my license to drive a motor vehicle, I have already received an offer of a position as motor driver with Messrs. Peters and Co., Redfern. That the position was offered to me simply because I was one of your pupils and had received tuition at your Motor School, was made perfectly plain to me. That they should engage one of your pupils
IN PREFERENCE TO ALL OTHERS,
I think speaks volumes for the high esteem in which your school is held by the owners of motor vehicles."
Five minutes' interview with us will cost you nothing, but may save you keen disappointment in the future.

YOU CAN WASH—
LIKE A PIECE OF CLOTH.

What next will they bring out? Fancy giving the old-style duster a bath—! But these WASHABLE DUSTERS take to water like a duck—and emerge from a rough-and-tumble with soap and water as gay and as cheeky as ever.

WASHABLE DUSTERS are Strong Dusters. The feathers are bound in with wire—and you WIPE with them. You don't flick dust off one article on to another, as with the common old duster.

Investigate the merits of these helps to Better House Cleaning! You'll get two pleasant surprises—how wonderful the dusters are, how cheap at

MANY people are misled by the delusion that a tooth cannot be extracted painlessly without "Gas." Let any of them come to me at any time between 9 in the morning and 9 in the evening and they will be quickly convinced they are wrong. With my method, you're wide awake all the time. My way is so certain and so safe that I'm willing to forfeit £50 if there's any pain during the extraction. This is absolutely the most daring offer extant, as no one else can afford to make such an offer unless they send you to sleep during the extraction.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS
BY ELECTROLYSIS.

What are you going to do about that disfiguring growth of hair on your face? Don't continue to pull the hairs out, because in time you will increase the growth tenfold, and the hairs will gradually grow stronger, coarser, and uglier.

There is one SAFE, SATISFACTORY METHOD of removing Superfluous Hairs, and that is by ELECTROLYSIS.

Successful ELECTROLYSIS is a matter of experience and skill, and I AM AN ELECTROLYSIS EXPERT, and will remove your Superfluous Hair without causing you the slightest pain or discomfort.

Why not come in and see me one day soon, and I will give you any further particulars of this process you care to ask for.

REMEMBER, paying me a visit places you under no obligation whatever, CONSULTATION AND ADVICE FREE.

Hours, 10 till 5 p.m. 'Phone, City 5272.

"GOLDEN DROPS"
AT AINSWORTH'S
PLUM OF A SALE.

Last week we compared our First Sale to the wonderful tree of which the great Roman poet Virgil wrote of as possessing remarkable power to replenish its golden branches and fruits as quickly as they were lopped and gathered by a gold-loving nation.

THE CHOICEST FRUITS OF SYDNEY'S ORCHARD OF SALES.

Ainsworth's Sale is known by the sign of the plum—"A Plum of a Sale"—"A Big Beauty." But almost as wonderful as Virgil's Golden Tree, all those violet plums have been magically transformed into Golden Drops for to-day. This successful sale, with its tempting offers in Nicer Costumes, Sweeter Millinery, and luscious specialised Fruits of Fashion, presents a mass of Golden Plums for all who come along to-day.

SILK SHETLAND OPERA HOOD.

SPECIAL PRICE TO-DAY, 3/11.

The fascinating little silk Shetland Opera Hood we are offering to-day will appeal to every lady who appreciates a chic and dainty head wrap, for Evening Wear and the Theatre. It is made of Cream Silk Shetland, with streamers, the hood being lined with pale blue silk, and trimmed with pale blue Satin Ribbon, or we have them with a pretty pink silk lining if preferred. It has a great advantage, being so soft and light on the hair, and forms a most bewitching frame for the face.
Do not miss this splendid opportunity of securing one of these hoods at such a wonderful reduction. You will always be delighted with it, and our offer cannot be repeated.
Come and see them in our Barrack-street Window and the Ribbon Department, Ground Floor. The reduced price is for to-day only. Country residents desiring to take advantage of this offer should mail the order immediately on receipt of this announcement, and it will be forwarded, carriage paid, at the reduced price.

SEVERE PRICE SLASHING STIMULATES SELLING AT SWEET BROS.' SALE.

A WISE OLD HOUSEHOLD SAYING HAS IT THAT "A WATCHED POT NEVER BOILS"—IT ALWAYS SEEMS PARTICULARLY SLOW, WAITING FOR THE SIMMER TO DEVELOP INTO BOILING BUBBLES WHEN YOU ARE IN A HURRY.

IN SWEET BROS.' DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT

CERTAIN LINES OF SEASONABLE DRESS MATERIALS HAVE SOLD DOWN TO ONE OR TWO PIECES AND ODD LENGTHS. AT THIS POINT THEY SEEM TO HANG FIRE, AND LIKE THE HOUSEWIFE BENDING OVER THE KETTLE AND WAITING, WE FEEL LIKE GIVING THEM SOME "HURRY-UP" IN THE SHAPE OF A SLASHED PRICE, SO
